House Concurs in Neutrality Revision, 212 to 194; Navy Ready to Start Convoys in War Zones; Roosevelt Warns Miners' Union to Cooperate

'Obviously, Coal Must Be Mined,' He Says in Face of Strike Threat; Parley With Lewis Today May Decide Course of Labor Relations

Bell Aircraft Strike Threatened

'To See This Thing Through'

By Alfred Friendly
Post Staff Writer

President Roosevelt last night was banking on the outcome of a conference today with John L. Lewis to direct the future course of labor relations down a path of cooperation with the defense program.

With a tidal wave of Congressional demands for antistrike legislation, with his emergency mediation agency temporarily made ineffective, and with strikes looming in the coal mining, railroad and telephone industries, the President faced the gravest labor crisis of the defense effort with the determined assertion:—

"The Government proposes to see this thing through."

The statement, made in a dramatic, last-minute, successful appeal for passage of the bill for revising the Neutrality Act, applied specifically to the threat of a captive mine strike of 53,000 members of Lewis' United Mine Workers. These workmen produce the coal that feeds the Nation's steel mills.

Resolves to Maintain Production

But in wider reference to all defense industry, it was seen as a warning that if cooperation from labor failed, the Administration was resolved to maintain production by the bitter road of drastic legislative sanctions.

[Representative Cox (Democrat), of Georgia, and Representative Smith (Democrat), of Virginia, were reported by the New York Times last night to have announced that, as first and second ranking members of the Rules Committee, they will block future Administration legislation unless leaders permit antistrike measures to be brought to the floor.—Editor's note.]

In answer to the crescendo of agitation in the House debate on the Neutrality Act for strike-curbing action, the President wrote:

"I am holding a conference tomorrow in the hope that certain essential coal mines can remain open in continuous operation. This may prove successful.

"But if it is not successful, it is obvious that this coal must be mined in order to keep the essential steel mills at work. The Government of the United States has the backing of the overwhelming majority of the people of the United States, including the workers."

Lawmakers Demand Immediate Action

During and following the neutrality debate, and in the Senate as well as the House, legislators, led by angry Southern Democrats, indicated they would no longer be balked in their demands for legislative action against strikes.

With Administration and labor supporters joining in the van,

Tiny Baby Goes Without Weighing-In

Her minute frame considered too fragile for deposit on a scale, Bette Gay Bonbrest went without her scheduled weighing in ceremony yesterday at George Washington University Hospital.

From Dr. Walter A. Bloedorn, superintendent, on down, attending physicians and nurses vetoed the idea of ascertaining whether the infant has gained or lost since she entered the world a week ago this morning as a 26¼-ounce marvel.

"They tell me, though, that she's doing fine," Mrs. Leroy D. Bonbrest said last night. The baby's mother has to take the word of others for that. Still confined to bed, she has not seen Bette Gay, who is inhabiting an incubator several yards down the hall.

Cabbies Win Temporary Fare Boost

By Howard F. Wentworth
Post Staff Writer

A tumultuous hearing before the Public Utilities Commission ended late yesterday with a dramatic capitulation by Engineer Commissioner Charles W. Kutz granting a temporary 10-cent taxi fare increase for a trip confined to any one zone.

The new rate—ordered until the two-man PUC has an opportunity to gather further data and decide on demands for a permanent boost in zone rates—becomes effective at midnight Sunday.

One of the most hectic sessions in the Commission's history—punctuated by strike threats, catcalls and cheers from some 50 assembled representatives of Washington's cab industry—forced the ultimate decision.

Senate Passes D. C. Rent Bill; Patman Irked

His Idea Deleted, Representative Pledges House Fight

Representative Patman (Democrat), of Texas, last night indicated he will oppose House passage of the District rent-control bill as it was passed by a unanimous voice vote of the Senate yesterday.

Following the recommendation of its District Committee, the Senate cut from the bill the Patman amendment which would have hinged a rent administrator's decisions on the investment value of a landlord's property.

Without the amendment the bill, which freezes rents at the January 1, 1941, level, "gives a greater advantage to the landlord than to the tenant," Representative Patman declared.

Joint Conference Set

Meanwhile, Senator McCarran (Democrat), of Nevada, chairman of the District Committee who presented the measure to the Senate yesterday, said conferees will be appointed Monday for a joint House-Senate conference on the bill.

No opposition to the measure developed on the Senate floor yesterday when Senator McCarran presented the bill. He answered several questions, most of which were addressed by Senator McNary (Republican), of Oregon, Senate minority leader.

"All the amendments put into the bill have been gone over carefully and were considered by representatives of all interested parties," Sen-

Fish's Hopes Of Evading Jury Fade

Waiver of House Privilege Expected As He Leaves for 2 Weeks of Army Duty

(Related Story on Page 11 and an Editorial on Page 14.)

By Dillard Stokes
Post Staff Writer

The Congressional privilege which for five days has enabled Representative Hamilton Fish to avoid telling whatever he knows to the grand jury that indicted George Hill, his aide, on two perjury charges, is due to fade away when the House Judiciary Committee reports on the subject.

The report may come today, but Fish will not be here to see it, having left at 2:40 o'clock this morning to join the First Army at Monroe, N. C.

After hearing Fish in one closed session and John O'Connor, former Representative, who is lawyer for both Fish and his indicted employe, in another, the committee members have arrived at certain general conclusions:

1. That a member of the House has no "privilege" against a subpena, but is just as obliged to testify before a grand jury as any other citizen.

2. That the House has an inherent privilege against the members being summoned away when there is business to be transacted.

3. That the House may waive this privilege, perhaps stipulating that the member is not to be examined when the House actually is meeting, but is to be questioned in the forenoon, in the evening or on days when the

Probers Tried To 'Get' Langer, Connally Feels

Senator Connally (Democrat), of Texas, yesterday broke into cross-examination of Senator Langer (Republican), of North Dakota, during the hearings on Langer's fitness to remain in the Senate, with the declaration that investigators of charges against the former Governor were bent on "getting something on somebody."

Connally also caused the star witness for North Dakota citizens who petitioned the Senate to unseat Langer, to be ordered from the counsel table where his grimaces in the direction of members of the Privileges and Elections Committe indicated his strong disbelief in some of the replies Langer made under cross-examination.

Guns, Gunners At Hand to Be Put Aboard U. S. Merchantmen

By John G. Norris
Post Staff Writer

Naval officials said last night that plans are complete for installing guns and gun crews on United States merchantmen and for American warships to convoy them into belligerent ports.

Deck guns and antimine gear are on hand in Navy yards ready to go aboard the cargo vessels, it was stated, while the Atlantic Fleet stood prepared to extend its operations all the way to Europe when ordered to do so.

Meanwhile, many Navy men believed that as a necessary next step to operations in the Eastern Atlantic, the United States would take over the naval and air bases built by American workmen under lend-lease funds in North Ireland and Scotland.

In a formal statement, Secretary of the Navy Knox praised the action of Congress in amending the Neutrality Act and declared that this makes it "certain" that American-built arms reach the armies fighting the Axis powers.

Trained Men for Crews

"It also insures, in my judgment," he added, "that the war efforts of the British Commonwealth, of China and of Russia, hold out greatly increased promise of ultimate victory."

Despite the greatly increased efficiency of U-boats and submarine tactics, aided by airplanes, Navy men hope the Nation's sea services will better their World War record, when gun crews damaged or sank 34 U-boats and repelled 193 U-boat attacks, while 31 merchant vessels were sunk.

A few of the ships will be equipped with the new 5-inch double-purpose guns, highly effective both against surfacing submarines and

Fears for Safety Of Steinhardt And Litvinov Grow

Copyright by New York Tribune, Inc.

London (Friday), Nov. 14.—At an early hour this morning there was still no news in London of the plane long overdue in Teheran bearing Laurence Steinhardt, American Ambassador to Moscow; Maxim Litvinov, newly appointed Russian Ambassador to the United States, and Sir Walter Monckton, director general of the ministry of information.

At noon yesterday the plane was 48 hours overdue at Teheran. It had taken off from Kuibyshev, Russia's secondary capital, for Cairo. Bad weather had been reported along the plane's route, and it was thought a forced landing may have been necessary.

Quentin Reynolds, former newspaperman, now reporting the war for Collier's Weekly, also was believed to be aboard.

Cost of Victory Placed at 3½ Billion a Month

Nelson Estimates Price U. S. Must Pay to Defeat Hitler

By the Associated Press

Boston, Nov. 13.—Donald M. Nelson, executive director of the Supply Priorities and Allocations Board, today put a price tag of $3,500,000,000 a month on the kind of "victory program" the United States needs to beat Hitler.

Present defense expenditures are averaging $1,175,000,000 a month, he said, in an address prepared for the governors' luncheon of the New England Council, and will, under the existing defense program, nearly double a year from now.

But, he added, "if we revise our schedules upward to the level they will have to reach if we are to win this struggle with reasonable speed and certainty, we shall find ourselves spending in the neighborhood of $3,500,000,000 a month.

"We can bring victory only by accepting the heaviest load we can possibly bear," Nelson declared, adding "we can have that victory if we want it."

President Roosevelt, in a message to the council, called for the use of all the Nation's energies and resources to build our defenses against "those who would crush decency and humanity under the dictators' heel."

The President said:

"As a nation of free men we are engaged in a great effort to build our defenses against those who threaten our way of life; those who

End of Momentous Debate

By Robert C. Albright
Post Staff Writer

The House yesterday by a 212 to 194 vote wiped all shipping restrictions from the Neutrality Act of 1939 in one tensely dramatic roll call.

Eleventh hour appeals by the President, the Secretary of State and House leaders stemmed a threatening Democratic revolt and pushed the free shipping bill to final passage.

The 18-vote deciding margin stripped from the Neutrality Act its key sections 2, 3 and 6. Their repeal means American merchantmen may arm and sail through combat zones into any seas or ports.

Signed immediately by Speaker Rayburn, the bill sustaining the President in his severest foreign policy test awaits only the signatures of Vice President Wallace and President Roosevelt. On Monday, when the Senate next meets, it is scheduled to receive both and become law.

Speaker Reads the President's Admonition

Before demonstrative galleries, filled to the [illegible]t seat and overflowing, and a full turnout of solemn-faced members, Speaker Rayburn read the President's admonishing words:

"Failure to repeal these sections would, of course, cause rejoicing in the Axis nations. Failure would bolster aggressive steps and intentions in Germany, and in the other well-known aggressor nations under the leadership of Hitler."

Rayburn received a standing ovation as he closed with a personal appeal of his own:

"Let us show the world by our vote, at least a majority vote, where we stand. Let me appeal to you, whether you love one man or hate another, to stand up today for civilization as it is typified by the United States."

The clerk called the roll.

"Allen of Louisiana?" "Aye."

"Anderson of Minnesota." "No."

The Chamber's Usual Light Way Is Missing

The "Noes" led at the outset. The "Ayes" overtook them. Then supporters of the bill claimed a definite lead, never to be headed.

One of the largest crowds ever to witness such a House test looked on or waited to peek through the doors. In the galleries, diplomats and Government officials rubbed shoulders

Margin of Vote Disappoints British; Berlin Sees U. S. 'Pushed . . . to War'

London Is Pleased, But Expected Wider Majority for Change

By the Associated Press

London, Nov. 13.—Congressional amendment of the United States Neutrality Act tonight brought expressions of pleasure in all sections of the British public, but some quarters plainly showed their disappointment over the relatively small majority in the voting.

Ambassador John G. Winant was attending a dinner of the Naval Volunteer Reserve Auxiliary Patrol Club when he heard the news. He promptly announced it to those present and loud cheers rang out.

Newspapers here had displayed stories saying some Southern Democrats were going to vote against the amendments—not because of inflexible opposition to them, but as a means of exerting pressure on the President to adopt a stronger stand against labor and strike problems. This helped somewhat to allay discomfiture over the lack of a big majority in the vote.

Vote Eagerly Awaited

The vote was awaited eagerly here both because of the provision allowing United States merchantmen to enter British ports and as an indication of how ready the American public was to risk real warfare to insure the arrival of lend-lease equipment.

As usual, in such matters, official quarters declined to comment.

At the dinner which Ambassador Winant attended Admiral Sir Alfred Dudley Pound, chief of the British naval staff, declared "I don't know where the hell I should be" without the 50 American destroyers which have been transferred to the British flag.

An editorial in the Daily Mail entitled "Triumph of Roosevelt" said the Neutrality Act was "as good as dead. This is the morning's great news. It is a major victory for freedom. The Stars and Stripes will again see British ports and will receive a heartfelt welcome. This means that hundreds of ships will be released to strengthen communications withe the arsenal of democracy and that the U. S. Navy will play an even bigger part in the Battle of the Atlantic."

The News Chronicle said:

"The whole free world will feel profound relief that the vote—however small the margin—went the right way."

The headline in the Daily Express shouted: "They're Coming Over. First U. S. Merchant Fleet Sails Next Week."

Berlin Deems Vote Evidence of Disunity

Berlin, (Friday), Nov. 14 (AP).—German reaction to the House approval of the neutrality amendments probably will follow the familiar line that "Roosevelt is driving his people into war," informed quarters said today.

The close margin of the vote was viewed by the average German as an indication of the lack of a united front and the Berlin press and radio stressed the arguments of the opposition.

News of the vote was received at the Wilhelmstrasse just before midnight and thus a spokesman said more time was needed to formulate full German comment.

'Handwriting on Wall' To Nazis, Ottawa Says

Ottawa, Nov. 13 (AP).—Prime Minister Mackenzie King said tonight that United States Congressional revision of the neutrality law "will be seen by Hitler as the handwriting on the wall spelling the doom of the Axis powers."

"It means immediate, increased, effective assistance to countries resisting aggression," he said.

House Women Back Change In Neutrality

By Ruth Cowan
Associated Press Staff Writer

A majority of Uncle Sam's petticoat lawmakers are on record in favor of letting ships flying Old Glory sail where they please on the seven seas with cannon on their prows.

As crowded galleries looked down, four women representatives—two Republicans and two Democrats—voted yesterday to concur in Senate amendments to the resolution revising the neutrality act. Three, all Republicans, voted No.

In the House other mothers spoke out—one today in favor, and another yesterday in opposition.

Mrs. Katherine Byron, of Maryland, added a note of glamour to a grim scene when she, pretty and dark-haired, approached the Speaker's stand.

She is the widowed mother of five sons. The oldest is of military age.

"I asked him," she told the House, "how he thought I should vote, and he replied, 'Vote for it and I'll be proud of you.'"

Another mother, Mrs. Frances Bolton (Republican), of Ohio, was on the other side of the fence from her fellow Republican, Mrs. Edith Nourse Rogers (Massachusetts), who is also on that committee. Mrs. Rogers favored the bill.

Mrs. Rogers' "aye," voiced from a front row seat in the House, was a squeak that provided a high-spot of humor in the tense atmosphere. She pointed to her nose in a way that explained "dot a toldin the head."

Mrs. Mary T. Norton (Democrat), of New Jersey, said:

"I have received so many threats, that I want to put into the record my reasons for supporting this resolution." She waved some pages of letter paper.

"My vote," Mrs. Norton had written, "is based on the premise that having voted billions of dollars of taxpayers' money to help those countries defending democracy, it is logical to provide the means to get the materials to their destination."

Miss Jessie Sumner (Republican), of Illinois, seldom speaks from the floor, but yesterday's Congressional Record carried a copy of a speech in which she opposed the revisions as another step in "a series of successive war steps."

Mrs. Margaret Smith (Republican), Maine, let her vote speak for itself. It was an "Aye."

Participating in the roll call was the Congresswoman who voted against the entrance of the United States into the World War—and then wept. Miss Jeannette Rankin (Republican), Montana, voted "No" today, and a few moments later was encountered off the floor—her blue eyes red and misty.

Navy Set to Arm, Convoy Cargo Ship

airplanes. But as these weapons are in demand for warships, it is expected that most of the merchantmen will be armed with 3-inch and 4-inch guns from World War stocks.

Antiaircraft machine guns also will be put aboard the vessels as the older deck guns are of little use against bombing planes. Paravanes and degaussing apparatus also will be installed to protect the ships from mines.

Gun crews for the vessels will be drawn from trained Navy men now serving on warships or at shore stations. The detachments put aboard them will vary from 10 men on ships carrying but one deck to 40-odd for larger merchantmen carrying five or six weapons.

Secretary Knox has announced that there are sufficient guns available to equip the ships as they come into port, pointing out that all vessels cannot be taken off the sea at the same time. Ships scheduled to make the dangerous North Atlantic run probably will be taken first, and the entire job probably will take from two to three months, he stated.

Naval experts have pointed out that until sufficient 5-inch guns are available, many of the merchantmen will be outgunned by the larger German U-boats. The latter carry modern 4.1-inch deck guns, which outrange the 3-inch and 4-inch American weapons.

1918 Record Recalled

Naval officers yesterday recalled World War Navy Secretary Josephus Daniels' praise of the 1917-18 gun crews: "First in service, they were first in sacrifice." For the report of the first sinking of armed merchantmen came April 2, 1917, a few hours after President Wilson delivered his fateful war message to Congress and three days before the Nation declared war.

Orders to arm our ships had been given less than three weeks before, on March 16, 1917.

During the World War 384 American merchant ships were armed. They made 1832 trans-Atlantic crossings while armed, during which 347 enemy subs were sighted and 227 actual attacks were made against them.

Of the 2, 738,026 tons of United States shipping armed, 166,428 tons were sunk and 1,400,000 saved by gun crews repulsing U-boat attacks, naval records show.

Text of Roosevelt Note to House

The text of President Roosevelt's letter to Speaker Rayburn and Majority Leader McCormack on neutrality revision follows:

My Dear Mr. Speaker and Mr. McCormack,

I had had no thought of expressing to the House my views of the effect, in foreign countries and especially in Germany, of favorable or unfavorable action on the Senate amendments.

But in view of your letter, I am replying as simply and clearly as I know how.

In my message of October 9, I definitely recommended arming of ships and removing the prohibition against sending American flag ships into belligerent ports. Both I regarded as of extreme importance—the first I called of immediate importance at that time. Another month has gone by, and the second I regard today as of at least equal importance with the first.

In regard to the repeal of Sections 2 and 3 of the Neutrality Act, I need only call your attention to three elements. The first concerns the continued sinking of American flag ships in many parts of the ocean. The second relates to great operational advantages in making continuous voyages to any belligerent port in any part of the world; thus in all probability increasing the total percentage of goods—foodstuffs and munitions—actually delivered to those nations fighting Hitlerism. The third is the decision by the Congress and the Executive that this Nation, for its own present and future defense, must strengthen the supply line to all of those who are today keeping Hitlerism far from the Americas.

Course Watched by World

With all of this in mind, the world is obviously watching the course of this legislation.

Failure to repeal these sections would, of course, cause rejoicing in the Axis nations. Failure would bolster aggressive steps and intentions in Germany, and in the other well-known aggressor nations under the leadership of Hitler.

Judging by all recent experience, we could, all of us, look forward to enthusiastic applause in those three nations based on the claim that the United States is disunited as they have so often prophesied.

Our own position in the struggle against aggression would be definitely weakened not only in Europe and Asia but also among our sisters republics in the Americas. Foreign nations, friends and enemies, would misinterpret our own mind and purpose.

I have discussed this letter with the Secretary of State and he wholeheartedly concurs.

In the British Empire, in China and in Russia—all of whom are fighting a defensive war against invasion—the effect of failure of the Congress to repeal Sections 2 and 3 of the Neutrality Act would be definitely discouraging. I am confident that it would not destroy their defense or morale, though it would weaken their position from the point of view of food and munitions.

Would Weaken Domestic Front

May I take this opportunity of mentioning that in my judgment failure of the House to take favorable action on the Senate amendments would also weaken our domestic situation? Such failure would weaken our great effort to produce all we possibly can and as rapidly as we can. Strikes and stoppages of work would become less serious in the mind of the public.

I am holding a conference tomorrow in the hope that certain essential coal mines can remain in continuous operation. This may prove successful.

But if it is not successful, it is obvious that this coal must be mined in order to keep the essential steel mills at work. The Government of the United States has the backing of the overwhelming majority of the people of the United States, including the workers.

The Government proposes to see this thing through.

Very sincerely yours,
(Signed)
FRANKLIN ROOSEVELT.

The President's message came in response to a letter from Rayburn and McCormack, which read:

Dear Mr. President:

A number of members have asked us what effect failure on the part of the House to take favorable action on the Senate amendments would have upon our position in foreign countries and especially in Germany.

Some of these members have stated that they hoped you would make a direct expression upon this matter.

Germans Say Kerch Is About to Fall

Seek Soft Spot

Nazis Spar For Opening At Moscow

By Henry C. Cassidy
Associated Press Staff Writer

Kuibyshev, Russia, Nov. 13.—The whole of the central front about Moscow was alive tonight with exploratory German thrusts apparently heralding one more general offensive, military dispatches reported, while new Russian counter-attacks beat further back the upper and lower arms of the current German envelopment maneuver.

These far-spread local attacks formed a general probing operation through which it appeared that the Nazi command was urgently seeking out every soft spot in the Red line against the approach of the worst of winter. In the bleak slush of the battle areas both sides were bringing up reserves.

Nazis Lose Ground at Tula

Heavy action involving large forces, said military dispatches, was in progress only about Tula, 100 miles below Moscow, and in the vicinity of Kalinin, 95 miles northwest of the capital.

Around Tula the Russians' southern anchor, the Germans were reported driven back an additional one or two miles, beyond their five-mile retreat earlier reported, by Soviet counter thrusts heavily sprung from the southern approaches to the town.

All German frontal assaults at the Tula positions, it was added, had ceased.

[A delayed dispatch from Kuibyshev to the New York Times, dated Wednesday, said German General Field Marshal Fedor von Bock, having decided to take Tula at all costs, had dispatched heavy new tank and infantry reinforcements to that salient and was storming the city while bombing it from the air. The situation there was described as "tense and threatening."

[The Seventeenth and Eighteenth German Tank Divisions were assembled before Tula and were seeking to smash their way through from south, east and west. However, the Russians continued holding stubbornly. Gen. von Bock had already grouped the Twenty-ninth Motorized Infantry and the Fourth Tank Division, as well as several other infantry units, there. It is claimed by the Russians that the Third and Fourth Regiments were so badly battered that they have been reformed into a single tank regiment.

[For five days, it is now disclosed, an especially fierce battle for Tula has been going on, although a relative lull reigns at night, probably in order to give the soldiers some surcease from the bitter cold, which is now so bad that it freezes the nostrils in a 15-minute walk.]

Upon the northern flank about Kalinin fighting was violent in two sectors: one northeast of the city, where a new German push was declared breasted by Red counter-attacks, and the other in the upper section of the city itself. There, said reports from the front, the German columns, although loosing a terrible fire from mortars and machine guns as they retired, were pushed back toward the Volga River.

Southwest of Kalinin, Russian detachments were said to have crossed the Volga and successfully raided the German rear.

Subsidiary artillery action also was reported against what is apparently the nearest German position to Moscow—a salient driven to Narofominsk, 35 miles southwest of the capital, apparently from the main German southwestern line about Maloyaroslavets. The German force there was described, however, as a "unit," and this implied that it was small.

Report Crimean Lines Holding

Of the far southern theater, the Moscow radio declared tonight that the Soviet defenders were holding their ground both before Sevastopol, the main Red naval base in the southwestern Crimea, and Kerch, on the eastern Crimean peninsula facing the Caucasus.

The Germans, it was added, were beating at Sevastopol with rising fury—and with rising losses—but had gained no ground in repeated violent assaults headed by tanks and bombers.

The Soviet Black Sea fleet was described as still a strongly effective force. It was said to have ably supported Russian ground troops and aviation in breaking down German efforts to breach the Kerck positions.

Prisoners captured recently after unsuccessful Nazi sallies around Tula are said to have reported considerable sickness among German ranks, including growing epidemics of typhus and grippe. The Germans are said to be still insufficiently supplied with winter uniforms and covered with lice. At this point it may be said that medcal experts here confirm that the louse is undaunted by winter and is just as voracious at this season.

Already Attacking Caucasus Across Strait, They Claim

United Press Staff Writer

Berlin, Nov. 13.—Nazi spokesmen tonight predicted the early fall of Kerch, Russia's besieged bastion of the Eastern Crimea, and said the Germans already had loosed across the adjacent four-mile water gap "the first blows in the great battle for Caucasian oil."

The high command reported that German storm troops were slashing through the Red Army defenses of Kerch, and already had overrun several coastal fortifications immediately south of the city.

Military commentators admitted, however, that Sevastopol at the southern tip of the Crimea probably would be a toughter nut to crack. They said the Russian naval base's fortifications were "at least as strong as Odessa's," which withstood a two-month siege.

Weather Halts Fighting Elsewhere

Everywhere else on the Eastern Front, spokesmen said, fighting was virtually halted by bad weather. The only other official report of land hostilities said that "on the remainder of the front local operations brought further successes."

After heavy artillery preparations the Russians undertook a violent counterattack on the Moscow front, the D. N. B. news agency said, but the Germans struck back with big guns and tanks and repulsed it after severe fighting. Fifteen Red army tanks were reported destroyed.

Helsinki military dispatches to Berlin claimed th. German and Finnish troops had cut the far northern railroad to Murmansk north of Soroka where a line branches off to Archangel. The northern routes of British and American war supplies to the Soviets were reported under heavy aerial bombardment.

Despite bad weather and low-lying clouds, strong dive-bomber formations kept up the ceaseless assault on Russia's "evacuation fleet" in the waters of the narrow Kerch Straits and along the north coast of the Black Sea, the Nazis said.

The operations were reported extending to ports along the eastern side of the straits.

Red Cruisers Reported Hit

The high command claimed that in the straits and off the north coast of the Black Sea three Red fleet cruisers, one destroyer, and five large merchantmen were hit heavily, while bombs caused havoc in the port areas.

Informants said that with the advance to Kerch, called "Russia's Pompeii" because of its wealth of historic tombs and relics, the greater part of the iron ore deposits on the peninsula were in German hands.

"Effective" air raids on Moscow and Leningrad were reported by the high command.

The high command said that heavy artillery shelled military objectives in Leningrad as well as the port and shipyard facilities at the nearby Kronstadt naval base.

The Helsinki dispatches said military quarters there expected "rather important successes for the Finnish and German forces in the White Sea area soon."

From the Salla area some 90 miles west of the White Sea's westernmost reach, the Finnish reports said, the Germans and Finns were making good progress along the railroad joining the main Murmansk line near Kandalahaska.

Vichy to Impose Tax on Luxuries Of 20 Per Cent

Copyright by New York Times

Vichy, France, Nov. 13.—Early promulgation is expected of the luxury tax announced by the government after the cabinet meeting last Saturday. According to reliable reports, it will amount to 20 per cent of the purchase price of all articles of "real luxury."

The complete list of these should make interesting reading. According to advance information it will include jewelry, rare furs, antique rugs, golf clubs, yachts, touring automobiles, truffles, lobsters, caviar, choice perfumery and high-class beauty products. The tax will be applied also to restaurants, and bars charging more than 4 francs for a demitasse, more than 6 francs for a cup of tea and more than 10 francs for a glass of beer.

The object, it is explained, is to tax those who can afford it. Proceeds will be paid into the funds of national relief, on behalf of which Marshal Henri Philippe Petain is to broadcast on Saturday.

British Report Reds Smashed 86 Divisions

By the Associated Press

British spokesmen presented a recapitulation of German man power losses in Russia yesterday while the Germans again were issuing figures intended to show that despite the demands of eastern campaign, the Nazi air and sea forces have cut heavily into British plane and ship strength.

An authoritative British source estimated that on the whole of the Russian front 16 German armored divisions and 70 infantry divisions had suffered "appreciable losses" which in the case of some infantry divisions had run as high as 50 per cent.

Eight armored divisions, he said, had been so badly knocked about that they had reappeared in action only within the last few days after having been withdrawn from the front early in September.

German military commentators said Britain had lost 2501 planes during operations from January 1 to October 31 over England, the English Channel, Norway and German occupied regions. German losses in the same areas during that time were placed at 602. British losses were classed as 1192 fighters and 1309 bombers.

The commentary Dienst Aus Deutschland said German reports of destroying approximately 14,500,000 tons of shipping in little more than two years of the present war roughly equaled the four-year record for the World War.

(The Encyclopedia Britannica lists total World War shipping losses of the allied powers at nearly 15 million tons—12,850,814 tons from "enemy action" and 2,102,000 tons from other marine risks.)

This higher rate of sinkings was attributed by Dienst to Germany's better base facilities for submarines along the coasts of Norway, France and the Low Countries.

Churchill Men Predict Vote Of Confidence

By International News Service

London, Nov. 13—British government forces, targets of two days of attack by opposition members of Parliament, tonight predicted that the close of the current heated debate on war policy would result in a new vote of confidence in the Churchill government.

Anti-Churchill M. P's. concentrated cheifly on demands that an expeditionary force be sent to aid Russia, that the offensive in Libya be reopened, and that the R. A. F. blast "every inch" of land supporting the Nazis.

U. S. General Strike Predicted

The war debate also brought out the forecast by Austin Hopkinson, independent laborite, that the "inexperience" of trade union leaders in the United States may cause a general strike there.

Laborite Emanuel Shinwell led the attack on the Churchill government, and for his pains was termed a "publicity-seeker."

A. V. Alexander, first lord of the admiralty, who concluded the second day's debate on the war, attacked Shinwell and said Churchill's "team" has "come safely through immense difficulties and dangers in the most critical 18 months in the whole history of the British commonwealth."

"I submit," said Alexander, "that this government is entitled to a vote of confidence at the conclusion of the debate."

Opposition Demands Listed

Demanding activity in the air and on land, Shinwell and other opposition speakers insisted that the government:

1. Eliminate those members of the government "lukewarm towards aid to Russia." This demand was made in spite of Churchill's declaration Wednesday that there would be no changes in the government.
2. Send troops to Russia as more concrete evidence of support, instead of continuing the policy of "aid from afar."
3. Study the possibilities of reorganizing the general staff in view of the "brilliance of the Germans' work in Russia."
4. Have Churchill devote less attention to foreign fields and concentrate upon the domestic situation, "upon which victory may hinge."
5. Create a second front, or reopen the campaign in Libya.
6. Eliminate objective bombing, or planned R. A. F. attacks, which risked the lives of crews, "when every inch of land supporting the Nazis should be blasted."
7. Solve the "production muddle," which speakers said had left some factories idle in spite of urgent needs for material.

Two brothers, Merle, 22, and Donald, 21, already are in the Navy, and two others, Lieut. Gleen, 27, and John, 25, are in the Army. A fifth brother, Neal, 23, recently was released from active Army service.

To top it off, another brother, Gordon, said he would enlist next August when he becomes 18 years old.

Mrs. Gray operates the Alton High School cafeteria.

British Papers Lose Weight As Pulp Is Conserved for War

Associated Press WIREPHOTO

SHOPPERS' GOODS PLAIN TO SEE—A London housewife hands an unwrapped crockery purchase to her husband. Shopkeepers may no longer use paper to wrap goods, food and articles for delivery excepted. Under drastic new ministry of supply regulations, the paper will be used for munitions. (Photo cabled yesterday from London)

England, fighting a total, tough war, isn't throwing confetti these days.

It costs paper to do so and the pinch on paper being felt by British newspaper publishers and the British reading public now includes a prohibition against paper handkerchiefs, paper tablecloths, paper cups, saucers, plates, festoon and confetti, the British Press Service, 1317 F Street Northwest, disclosed yesterday.

The newspapers have gone slim under statutory rules and orders, until now large daily papers, selling for more than 2 pence, are limited to 60 pages weekly; large dailies, selling for not less than 1½ pence may have no more than 38 pages weekly, and large dailies selling for less than 1½ pence are limited to 36 pages a week.

The large 2-pence weekly is held to 12 pages a week; the large 1½-pence weekly is restricted to 10 pages weekly; the small 2-pence weekly may have 24 pages, and small weeklies selling for less than 2 pence may have no more pages than 16, under the regulations.

No poster may be printed greater in area than 2400 inches and no poster can be printed relating to moneylending, bookmaking or football pools. The export trade is not affected.

The President's Day

By International News Service

UNDER WRAPS: His cold much improved but the sinuses kicking up a bit, the President remained under wraps for the second day yesterday, stayed over at the White House transacting business from the Oval Room study. Like every other man with a head cold and twinging sinuses, the President wasn't exactly in a sunny mood—the strikes hanging fire and the Neutrality Act repeal dangling overhead didn't cheer him any.

REQUESTS: First and only callers at the White House posted on the official list were a series of Senators. First set, led by Senator Kilgore (Democrat), of West Virginia, wanted some defense contracts for their State which is suffering, like many another, from priority unemployment. The President listened carefully, nodded, agreed to send in an expert to survey the situation, make recommendations to relieve the growing anemia—particularly in the small shops which are hardest hit. Next came Senator Murray (Democrat), of Montana, who wanted the President to think about using some of Montana's super de luke airports as training posts. The President said he would consider and report later.

COURTESY BY PROXY: Because the President was wrapped up in the neutrality fight, George J. Harter, Akron's blind mayor-elect, asked that his secretary not disturb him. He left word that the President has his pledge that Akron's city government would support the Administration to the hilt. When given the news later, Mr. Roosevelt was genuinely sorry not to have met the new mayor, hoped he would at some later date.

VICTORY: At 4:24 the President and the world got the news: The amendment scrapping the clause prohibiting United States ships from entering combat or belligerent zones passed by a majority of 18 votes—a close shave but not too uncomfortable, and the President was gratified, relieved. So was his fellow-worrier of the afternoon, Secretary of State Hull.

Italy Rerouting Men to Russia

Istanbul, Nov. 12 (Delayed).—An informed naval source close to Axis diplomatic quarters said today that Italian troops, outfitted for tropical warfare in North Africa, were being rerouted at sea on German orders and sent to Piraeus, Greece, to be reoutfitted for the Russian front.

Disorganization arising from this was said to be partly responsible for recent British naval successes against Axis convoys. The British have announced that two convoys were destroyed in one stroke by a naval patrol on Sunday and that two days later six Axis ships were sunk by submarines.

Cruisers assigned to meet the convoys at regular rendezvous points have missed the ships, it was said, leaving them feebly protected. Two cruisers were present, however, for the Sunday battle off Taranto.

Reinforcements which this source said had been expected by the Italian general staff in Libya for the last fortnight had failed to appear because the Germans, he declared, apparently had written off any intention of an African offensive in the near future.

2 U. S. Soldiers Kill Icelander in Fight

Reykjavik, Iceland, Nov. 13 (U.P.)—Two American privates shot and killed an Icelandic fisherman in a brawl outside a cafe, Army authorities announced today. They will be tried by general court-martial.

The soldiers charged are Everett Farmer, of Hundington, W. Va., and Charles H. Cox, of McKee, Ky.

The islander was Thorur Sigurdsson, 22, who died of a bullet through the stomach.

A report of the Judge Advocate's Department said there was no evidence of premeditation. The shooting occurred after a cafe argument.

House Approves Neutrality Revision

with sightseers and soldiers in uniform.

Usually boisterous House debate and occasional horseplay was absent from the calm but grim debate that led up to the roll call.

To meet swelling Democratic dissension over strike hold-ups of defense production, the President told members of his conference attempt tomorrow to keep captive coal mines running and said: "The Government proposes to see this thing through."

To this, the Speaker added a more definite commitment of his own, which may have tilted for the bill a doubtful balance of labor policy protestants:

"I am ready to follow or lead in any movement by legislation, or sanely otherwise, that will keep defense production going in the United States."

On the strength of this statement, Democratic conservatives, led by Representative Smith (Democrat), of Virginia, launched a movement to bring immediately to the floor the committee-approved Vinson "cooling off" bil las a vehcile for tighter labor legislation.

All day through the House rang the opposition cry that "this bill means war," and stolid Administration denials. Half a dozen more Democrats took the floor to announce their parting of the ways with the President's foreign policy unless something was done to curb strikes.

Up to the hour of the roll call, the outcome was not certainly known. Victory or defeat rested with a doubtful fringe of about 30 members who refused to tell pollers how they would vote.

In the end, 189 Democrats voted with 22 Republicans and one American-Laborite, to give the winning 212 majority. Fifty-three Democrats joined with 137 Republicans, 3 Progressives and 1 Farmer-Laborite in the futile effort to block concurrence.

Switch Is Large

Only 21 Democrats had opposed the original armed-ship measure and 39 Republicans had supported that milder measure. Influential Democrats, such as Chairman Doughton of the Ways and Means Committee and Chairman Sumners of the Judiciary Committee shouted "no" to all-out revision.

But the bill was passed, the fight was over, and the Neutrality Act was on its way out. Galleries and a majority on the floor applauded the announcement. Leaders exchanged congratulations and posed for cameramen.

Downtown, Secretary of State Cordell Hull, who in a letter to House members called passage "absolutely essential to our national defense," commented to reporters:

"It was an exceedingly wise and timely decision."

Concentrated into the last few minutes of debate were all of the arguments, pro and con, which for two weeks had divided the Senate and since 11 a. m. Wednesday had rent the House.

Sparingly meting out time to the last chosen speakers were Chairman Bloom, of the Foreign Relations Committee, for the bill, and co-leaders of the opposition, Representative Fish (Republican), of New York, and Representative Richards (Democrat), of South Carolina.

One of the last speakers against the bill was Representative Vorys (Republican), of Ohio, whose amendment scuttled the original attempt at arms embargo repeal in early 1939.

Vorys asked members not to follow the President "blindly and unreasoningly." He argued the bill would not affect the Far Eastern situation and involved "no loss of Presidential prestige." Failure to concur in the Senate amendments "would only send the bill to conference," he said.

McCormack Appeals

House Majority Leader McCormack took the floor in final rebuttal. To defeat the motion, he said, would instruct conferees to leave Sections 2 and 3 (combat zone restrictions) in the Neutrality law and deal a blow to the National defense.

McCormack said he appealed to the 25 or 30 members still uncommitted and "whose minds are open."

"Resolve that doubt in favor of your President and Secretary of State Hull," he urged.

He quoted from Hull's appeal for passage, gave the House a similar message from Chairman Land, of the Maritime Commission and, on authority of Gen. George C. Marshall, Army Chief of Staff, denied that the Army was preparing troops for Africa "or any other critical area outside the United States."

Freedom of the seas, McCormack told the House, is the foundation of American liberties. Living Americans, he called "a generation on trial," and said that their decisions in the present world struggle would determine whether future generations are free or whether America drops to "a second rate power." He was roundly applauded from the galleries and floor but Republicans shouted protests as he called the bill "a measure for peace."

Before Speaker Rayburn stepped down from the rostrum, Representative Richards, who bolted Administration policy to help lead the opposition, concluded arguments against the bill.

Invokes His Conscience

Richards said he "felt like a pigmy in daring to speak against my leaders," but added:

"My duty is not to my President, to my Speaker or to my floor leader, but to my conscience."

The South Carolina Democrat said he might not be reelected, "it matters little whether any member is," but he would vote against the bill "because my conscience tells me it means war by the back door of treachery." He said he suspected "maneuvers to cram this down our throats" and concluded:

"If this be treason, make the most of it."

Speaker Rayburn then said in the suddenly silent chamber that he was appealing to members because of a deep conviction that defeat of the Senate amendments "would bring us closed to trouble than the adoption of them."

He told how, together with McCormack, he had asked for the views of the President. Then, in measured phrases, he read Mr. Roosevelt's warning that supply lines must be strengthened to all nations fighting Hitler, that defeat of the bill would encourage Axis nations and weaken "our own position in the struggle against aggression."

Asks a View to the East

Rayburn added a strong personal appeal of his own.

"Let us not cast a vote today that will mean rejoicing in Germany, Italy or Japan," he said. "Let me say that I believe with all my heart this moment that the failure to enact these amendments will have repercussions too frightful to contemplate and might break up the most serious conferences that have ever been held—that are being held at this moment—between the representatives of Japan and the representatives of the United States.

Speakers on both sides were carefully chosen.

Representative Woodrum (Democrat), of Virginia, one of the first, said it was not worthy of members to seek by their votes to "spank" the President, or to refuse to support one measure (neutrality revision) until they were presented with another (labor legislation).

The opposition put forward speakers who voted for ship arming but refused to go further.

Among these, Representative Boren (Democrat), of Oklahoma, shouted that he would not go along with the President because "now, and not tomorrow, is the time to pass labor legislation. We must free American labor from its labor Hitlers."

Canfield Fears "Kidding"

Two Republicans who voted for ship arming, Representatives Treadway, of Massachusetts, and Canfield, of New Jersey, spoke against the bill. Canfield said it gives the green light to another A. E. F. and "all out, total war." When he was in the Army, he said, they used to say, "Don't kid the troops." He said his advice to the House was, "Don't kid America."

Republicans who took the floor for the bill included Representative Taber, of New York; Representative Gifford, of New York, and Representative Wadsworth, of New York.

"As long as we are in the war I can only vote for such measures as are designed to end it by victory," said Taber.

Gifford rebuked members who criticized Britain for inaction or Churchill's war policy. "The fear is lest he (Churchill) take a chance before he is ready," said this Massachusetts Republican.

In the closing hours, Wadsworth, who commands wide influence on both sides of the aisle, stepped into the well.

"I have a very, very profound conviction that the Neutrality Act, or that which remains of it in the statute books, is injurious to the safety of the United States," said the former Republican Senator.

"It is a grim situation and we must look it straight in the face—we must not, we cannot, permit this world revolution to prevail, for if it should succeed there will be no freedom. . . . With the world's freedom, our freedom is at stake."

Vichy to Name Successor To Huntziger After Funeral

By Lansing Warren

Wireless—Copyright by New York Times

Vichy, France, Nov. 13.—Appointment of a successor to Gen. Charles Huntziger, as minister of war and commander of the French land forces, will wait until after the national funeral which will be held in Vichy on Saturday for him and the other six victims of the accident to the airplane on which he was returning from North Africa.

The seven bodies, including the war minister's, recovered on the hillside in the forest of Breau, near Nimes, have been identified. The enigma regarding the eighth passenger, who was supposed to have been present and whose body was not found, has been solved by the discovery that the motion picture operator who accompanied Gen. Huntziger on his African trip did not make the journey home but came by the regular services.

The preliminary investigation shows the accident was the result of the weather affecting the airplane's radio reception as well as causing ice on the wings. The plane ran into the mountainside in a thick fog before it could gain height.

That the occupants of the plane were aware that the accident was impending is shown by the discovery today that Gen. Huntziger's brief case had been thrown from the airplane a few seconds before the crash. The brief case intact was found in the woods and contained the papers relative to the general's consultations in North Africa.

Among the first telegrams received by Marshal Petain, announced today, was a message of condolence signed Adolf Hitler, for which Petain telegraphed his thanks. At the ministry of foreign affairs and at the war ministry here today diplomats and other notables were calling.

Mme. Huntziger was in Paris last night, but on learning of the tragedy she went immediately to Le Vigan, nearest town to the accident.

A service in memory of General Huntziger will be held in Paris at the same time as the funeral takes place here.

The charred bodies of the victims were carried down to Le Vigan from the forest today and placed in coffins. From there they were taken to Nimes. Tomorrow night they will be brought to Vichy with military honors.

Others who perished in the accident, besides the minister of war, were the chief of his civil cabinet, Capt. Jean Labusquiere, author of the most authoritative book on the French war losses; Capt. Francois Joseph Rocaboy, aviator commanding the plane; Capt. de Royere, the general's aide; Lieut. Georges Lefevre, pilot; Adjutant Parcel Gaspard, radio operator, and Sergt. Pierre Felix Chavanne, the mechanic.

Senators Quit Parley in Protest Of Secrecy Rule

By the Associated Press

Resentment against the secret consideration of a reciprocal tax waiver treaty with Great Britain led four members to walk out of a meeting of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee yesterday.

Senator Vandenberg (Republican), said the four—himself and Senators Johnson (Republican), of California; Capper (Republican), of Kansas, and Clark (Democrat), of Missouri, quit the meeting in protest against "absentee rule" over the committee's procedure.

Vandenberg had moved that the committee's usual rule of secrecy with regard to treaties be lifted. Vandenberg, Johnson, Capper, Clark and Senator Gillette (Democrat), of Iowa, voted for it, but Senators Murray (Democrat), of Montana, and Glass (Democrat), of Virginia, opposed it and Murray voted the proxies of five absent members against it. The motion thus lost 7 to 5, although only seven members were present in person.

Although members declined to discuss details, it was understood that the agreement would exempt British-owned munitions facilities in this country from local taxation in return for similar exemptions for American interests in British Empire plants.

Battleship Indiana Launching Set For Saturday

The Navy announced yesterday that the battleship Indiana will be launched at Newport News, Va., next Friday, the third American dreadnaught to slide down the ways this year.

Sister ships of the new craft, the South Dakota and the Massachusetts, were launched in June and September. Two others, the North Carolina and Washington, were launched last year and are now with the fleet.

All are 35,000-ton vessels, carrying nine 16-inch guns and a powerful array of 5-inch antiaircraft weapons. Mrs. Lewis C. Robbins, daughter of Gov. Henry F. Schricker of Indiana, will sponsor the vessel in ceremonies at the Newport News Shipbuilding & Drydock Co.

U.S. Cautiously Hopeful Finns Will Quit War

By Hedley Donovan

Post Staff Writer

Washington diplomatic quarters yesterday maintained a cautious optimism as to the possibilities of a truce on the Soviet-Finnish front, despite Finland's rejection of a Russian "peace feeler" transmitted by the State Department.

Undersecretary of State Welles conferred for an hour with Hjalmar Procope, Finnish Minister, and there was every indication that this Government intends to continue its pressure on Finland to withdraw from military operations which Secretary Hull has described as furnishing extremely valuable aid to Hitler.

At the same time it was readily conceded here that, in attempting to persuade Finland to cease hostilities, the State Department is tackling one of the toughest jobs that ever confronted American diplomacy.

Russians "Coy"

Not the least of the difficulties, one diplomat said yesterday, is the "coy" attitude of the Russian government, which fears that an evident eagerness on its part for peace with Finland would raise the Finnish armistice terms.

Finland, proceeding on the same theory, would not wish to appear over-anxious to withdraw from the war, he pointed out.

Discounting inevitable "jockeying for position," this informant continued, there can be no doubt that the Russian military position would be greatly improved by withdrawal of the Finnish forces from the war and "realistic" Soviet diplomacy can be expected to offer substantial territorial concessions to Finland.

At the same time, it is believed here, Britain and America may attempt to work out some form of guarantee which would satisfy Finnish demands for security against future Russian attack.

An assertion that Finland does not consider the door closed against further negotiations with the United States was made in Helsinki last night by a foreign office spokesman.

The spokesman was quoted by the Associated Press as saying that Finland by no means desired to place obstacles in the way of future diplomatic overtures from Washington.

He said the Finnish note published Wednesday was intended as a cordial explanation to the United States of Finland's reasons for fighting Russia.

The Finns have already regained almost all the territory they were forced to surrender to Russia in the 1939-40 war, and it is thought here that restoration of the 1939 frontier and occupation of certain border areas on the Russian side of the line would be minimum Finnish terms in any peace negotiations.

America's condemnation of the Russian attack on Finland two years ago would make it virtually impossible for this Government to ask Finland to acept terms which denied her the restoration of the old frontier, it was pointed out.

The Finnish Legation here refused to comment yesterday on Secretary Hull's statement Wednesday that continued advances of Finnish forces operating beyond the 1939 border would be of great aid to Hitler in his effort to cut off the bulk of the Russian armies from British and American supplies arriving at Murmansk and Archangel.

"I do not think it was the intention of the Secretary to gather comments from us," a Legation official said.

Talk of Moving French Capital Back to Paris Is Heard Again

Copyright by New York Times

Vichy, Nov. 13.—With commemoration of the approaching anniversary next month of the return to France of the ashes of the Duke of Reichstadt, Napoleon's son, at the order of Reichsfuehrer Hitler, interest arises in the possibility of a return of the capital to Paris as an encouragement to national unity.

Marshal Petain, chief of state, has made various public allusions to Paris as the only practical seat of government and of the possibility of transferring it there if conditions were acceptable. The point arises every time "collaboration" is considered, but hitherto there has been no solution.

Since the armistice the chief of state has made numerous tours of inspection in the unoccupied zone, but he has crossed the line of demarcation but once—when he went to Montoire in October, 1940, and was received there by Hitler "with deferant courtesy."

And Stalin Talked On

Kuibyshev, Russia, Nov 10 (delayed) (AP).—The German air force tried to bomb Moscow while Joseph Stalin was making his address November 6, military dispatches reported today, but failed to reach the Soviet capital despite mass onslaughts in which a total of 250 bombers were used.

They said 34 German planes were downed near Moscow that day and that not one crossed over the capital.

Navy Figures Disputed

Rome, Nov. 13 (AP).—Authoritative Italians said today Italy has more warships than the British think.

Without giving revised figures, they contradicted as too small the British broadcast which listed Italy's remaining fleet strength as five battleships, four heavy cruisers, ten other cruisers, 37 destroyers, 45 torpedo boats and 80 submarines.

Serb Rebels Slain

Bern, Switzerland, Nov. 13 (AP).—The Swiss telegraph agency reported tonight from Belgrade that 350 rebel Serbs had been killed in clashes with regular Axis-directed troops in the last few days.

Heavy losses among the regulars also were reported, including the capture and shooting of a general, Poutnikovitch.

In one instance 38 snipers were reported killed, 29 wounded and two captured. In another, 54 insurgents were killed, 80 wounded and 15 imprisoned, eight of the latter later being shot.

Convent Is Bombed

Cairo, Egypt, Nov. 13 (AP).—Sixty-four persons were killed and 95 injured in an Axis air raid on El Faiyum Oasis, 100 miles southwest of here, and an Egyptian communique said that St. Michael's Convent of the Franciscan nuns was among the buildings destroyed.

Fourteen nuns living there, however, escaped injury. The head of the convent is Mother Ortolans, formerly of Augusta, Ga.

Vichy, France, Nov. 13.—Reinstatement of Masonic dignitaries barred from government positions may be ordered under certain conditions by a committee created by a law published today.

Eligible for exemptions are those who severed connections with secret societies several years ago and those who may have rendered services of special importance to the state.

Britons Want To Sell Whisky And Have It, Too

By the United Press

London, Nov. 13.—British tipplers faced the fearful prospect of "going on the wagon" today—not by inclination, but because of the United States' thirst for Scotch.

They were all in favor of the government's sending virtually Britain's entire output of liquor to the United States in exchange for dollars with which to buy war materials, but they couldn't conceal their hope that "maybe if Americans wouldn't drink so much, there would be a little more left for us."

The government feel otherwise. The more America drinks, the better they like it.

Meantime, the government is investigating charges that large-scale "black market" trading has sprung up in the wake of the liquor drought. A spokesman said racketeers have obtained such a hold on the liquor trade that they will have a manopoly next year unless the government takes control.

Annenberg Again Denied Parole

Justice Department officials said yesterday that M. L. Annenberg, Philadelphia publisher serving a three-year sentence for income tax evasion, had been denied a parole for the second time.

The publisher will be eligible for release on November 11, 1942, provided he wins full credit for good behavior.

Annenberg settled the Treasury's tax claim for eight million dollars, although actual payments are expected to reach a total of ten million dollars because of interest over the seven-year period provided for payment.

Nine Men of 29th Cited for Heroism

By the Associated Press

Cheraw, S. C., Nov. 13.—Nine Twenty-ninth Division soldiers were cited for heroism today by Maj. Gen. Milton A. Reckord, division commander, in announcing a list of citations won during recent maneuvers. The Twenty-ninth is mainly composed of National Guardsmen and selectees from the District, Maryland and Virginia.

Most of the citations were for "superior performance" in carrying out duties, and were awarded both to units and individuals. They will be presented tomorrow.

Lieut. Gen. Hugh A. Drum, First Army commander, had asked division officers to reward outstanding performances.

Seven members of Company K, 176th Infantry, were cited for rescuing an officer and two members of the Twenty-sixth Infantry, an "enemy" unit at the time, from a river.

The seven were: Sergts. Rufus E. Baker, Earl E. Allgood, and Michael E. Dempsey, First Sergt. John H. Lockamy; Corp. Lloyd R. Larkin and Privates John F. Wimer and William F. Finch.

The "enemy" soldiers probably would have drowned if the seven had not come to their rescue, the citation said.

Privates Fred R. Seville and Karl F. Custead, of division headquarters' officers' mess, won awards for extinguishing the blazing clothes of a cook whose stove exploded. Both rescuers suffered burns.

Other citations were:

Staff Sergt. Franklin R. Mohler, 115th Infantry—As motor sergeant, for keeping second battalion vehicles running despite a terrific night downpour of rain.

Tech. Sergt.—Harvey S. Browne 3d., 115th Infantry—For exceptional reconnaissance work.

First Sergt. David E. Zimmerman, 104th Quartermasters—For holding morale of the service company and performing duties of commissioned officer when the company was underofficered.

Staff Sergt. Sylvester W. Burnette, 104th Quartermasters—For his motor vehicle records.

Corpl. James M. Ryan, 104th Quartermasters—For his work as car dispatcher. He "was found at his post one midnight exhausted, but continuing his duties," his citation read.

Warrant Officer Leroy Dandov, band leader, 176th Field Artillery Band—For the general performance of his band.

Sergt. Elmer Hansen, D Battery, 110th Field Artillery—For work of his wire detail in maintaining battery communications on a 12-mile advance, during which six battery positions were occupied in a single day.

Lieut. Ernest N. Cory, jr., C Battery, Antitank Battalion—For leading the battery when it captured an "enemy" armored vehicle containing important signal communications instructions, including codes.

Maj. William D. Hubbard, S-4, 116th Infantry—For superior work in maintaining the regiment's supply and transport systems.

Sergt. P. K. Daniels, Company M, 176th Infantry—For "killing" Maj. Gen. Garl Truesdell, Sixth Corps commander, during a maneuver.

Maj. Lawrence H. Scarborough, Staff, 111th Field Artillery—Directing D Battery's river crossing.

The following members of Battery D also were cited in connection with the river crossing: First Lieut. Frank M. Raffo, First Sergt. Milton C. Tennis, Privates Daniel F. Cook, Edward J. Coyle, jr., John W. Byzyski, Charles Catalano, Ralph G. Padgett.

Tokyo Leaders Plan Moves To Stir Public

By Otto D. Tolischus

Copyright by New York Times

Tokyo, Nov. 13.—Drafts of the speeches to be delivered by Premier Hideki Tojo, Foreign Minister Shigenori Togo and Finance Minister Okinobu Kaya at the extraordinary session of the Diet opening Saturday were approved at a special cabinet session today and the three ministers will now proceed to the imperial villa at Hayama to obtain Emperor Hirohito's sanction. Simultaneously the cabinet approved bills to raise 630 million yen in additional indirect taxes of commodities, especially luxuries.

Contents of the speeches were not revealed, but according to the Domei agency it is generally believed "they will clarify the government's firm determination to tide over the various difficulties and hardships confronting Japan by breaking through hard-shell traditional formalism so as to stir the people to full cooperation with the government."

For that purpose leaders of the House of Peers decided today to break all precedents and permit a nation-wide broadcast of a record of Premier Tojo's speech, which will be the first such broadcast in Japanese parliamentary history.

At the same time the impression prevails that however firm they may be in expounding Japan's national policies, already summarized by Premier Tojo as the successful conclusion of the China incident and the establishment of a greater East Asia coprosperity sphere, the speeches will be conciliatory in tone in order to avoid prejudicing Washington conversations, about to enter their final stage with the arrival of Saburo Kurusu, special Japanese envoy.

The Throne and League of the House of Representatives, comprising some 300 out of the 466 members, today at a general meeting pledged unstinting support to the government. A resolution adopted at the meeting says:

"With the intensification of the world upheaval our empire now stands at the crossroads of rise or fall. Countries hostile to us dominated East Asia in the last century and, misconstruing the true import of our crusade, they have been doing everything to aid the Chiang regime. Topping all, they have now drawn a ring of encirclement around Japan both militarily and economically, thereby attempting to trespass on the existence and prestige of the nation."

Singapore, Tense, Awaits Tokyo Showdown

Copyright by New York Times

Singapore, Nov. 13.—A marked increase in tension was evident in Singapore today, and indications pointed to a watchful and uneasy weekend.

Military authorities are taking no chances on being surprised by a sudden Japanese move coincident with Saturday's Japanese Diet meeting, and a state of preparedness is being maintained throughout British Far Eastern territories.

Officers have canceled social engagements, and rank and file service men are ready for any eventuality. Special precautions are being taken against possible internal disorders and sabotage.

The Japanese-owned Singapore Herald calls the coming few days "the most critical in the history of the Pacific," and says the question of war or peace hinges on Special Envoy Saburo Kurusu's mission to Washington.

Japanese residents of Kuantan, an east coast town in the Malay state of Pahang, have been ordered to evacuate within the next two weeks. Kuantan is the terminus of an important highway leading inland from the coast and the small Japanese community there is one of a number established at strategic points in Malaya. Hundreds of Japanese are planning to sail next week on the evacuation ship Asama Maru and many are being fined for attempting to smuggle yen notes out in their luggage, which is now being sent through the customs.

Marshall Denies Reports A.E.F. Is Being Built

Gen. George C. Marshall denied yesterday that the Army, in soliciting three-year volunteers from among selectees and National Guardsmen, is preparing for an A. E. F.

The chief of staff took exception to some newspaper accounts of the recruiting drive launched among the citizen-soldiers and said that several "are calculated to give the impression that we are engaged in building up an expeditionary force." "One paper," he added, "has already taken us to Africa."

In declaring that the War Department needs additional long service men for assignment to outlying bases, and technical units like the Armored Force and Air Corps, Marshall said:

"There is no foundation whatsoever for the allegation or rumor that we are preparing troops for a possible expedition to Africa or other critical area outside this hemisphere."

Explaining the need for additional three-year Regulars, Gen. Marshall said that 36,000 volunteers are required each month, 25,000 for the Air Corps alone. Last month, such voluntary enlistments totaled but 25,000.

The Army chief said that the War Department has for the past year been working to increase the number of three-year volunteers to "meet the increased requirements for the present overseas garrisons, such as Panama, Hawaii and the new Atlantic bases."

"In addition," Gen. Marshall continued, "the Army has been endeavoring to provide the necessary numbers of volunteers to carry out the President's announced policy of relieving the Marines in Iceland and the elements of the British army stationed there. The recruiting campaign to secure men for the Iceland command was initiated last August at Camp Custer among the units of the Fifth Division. We still have to meet the necessity for this purpose.

"The War Department has also felt that it was highly desirable to have at least one division out of the 34 divisions of the Army, the First Division, 100 per cent volunteers in order that it could be placed on an equal footing with the Marine division with which it has been training for some months in a provisional corps."

Light Dickeys De Rigeur At Blackouts

The Office of Civilian Defense gave notice yesterday, in a 60-page illustrated book entitled "Blackouts," that in case of emergency, areas within 300 to 600 miles of the seacoast "probably will be required to black out every night."

The publication, prepared under direction of the Army Engineer Corps, covers virtually every type of blackout procedure, from the obscuration of factories to the wearing of light reflecting "dickeys" on the chests of nocturnal strollers.

A section on blackout fashions notes that a bump from a bus can be as lethal as a piece of shrapnel. For foggy blackout nights it recommends the use of "small, tinkling bells" on canes, umbrellas, anklets or bracelets. It suggests that luminous and reflecting disks may be used as belt buckle or lapel and hat ornaments.

The light-reflecting "dickey" is worn over the shoulders so that a white square hangs on the chest and back like a sandwich-man's sign. White oilcloth, silk or patent leather may be used for this purpose.

Display as Part Of Defense Week Scheduled Here

An air raid demonstration complete with noise, fire and planes—but strictly make-believe as far as bombs are concerned—will be staged on Washington Monument Grounds tomorrow night with volunteers from the Fire Department in charge.

The exhibition, most complete attempted in any American city to date, will climax local celebration of Civilian Defense Week and will be with equipment loaned by the War Department. Various makes of bombs will be on display.

Jack Dempsey, most popular world's heavyweight champion in the ring's history, will be "main attraction" in Washington today, as Health and Welfare Day of the defense week is celebrated.

He will talk to gym classes this morning at Woodrow Wilson and Dunbar High Schools. Other athletes to give talks and demonstrations at the two schools during the day include: Alice Marble, former world's tennis champion; "Dutch" Bergman, all-American halfback; John B. Kelly, former Olympic sculling champion; Mary K. Browne, three times national tennis champion, and Sudet Singh, all-Eastern intercollegiate halfback.

Public Meeting

Incendiary bomb demonstrations will be given tonight and at Woodrow Wilson there will be a public meeting with defense and civic leaders as speakers.

Sarah Gertrude Knott, director of the National Folk Festival, will supervise a folk dancing group at Dunbar School shortly before noon.

Meanwhile, Washington's deputy air raid wardens last night at their first class of instruction were brought face to face with the job they must do should enemy bombers ever roar over the city. Nearly 200 men and women connected with the Air Raid Warden Service assembled in the District Fire Training Station, 635 North Carolina Avenue Southeast, for an organizational meeting of their study course which begins in earnest Monday.

A "shakedown" test of the local A. R. W. S. is scheduled for tomorrow, which is Civilian Protection Day. Col. Lemuel Bolles, executive director of the Washington civilian defense area, announced.

Procedure Outlined

Sometime tomorrow between the hours of 12 noon and 5 p. m. each sector warden of each city block here should assemble members of the unit in his warden post, the colonel asserted, and by 6 p. m. the number present should be relayed to each respective zone warden. By 6:30 p. m. the zone warden will report his totals to his deputy warden and by 7:30 p. m. the deputy warden should hand in a written report to Col. Bolles at the civilian defense demonstration on the Monument Grounds.

A thermite magnesium fire bomb was ignited at the meeting last night and the futility of fighting them with water was demonstrated. When firemen played water on the brilliant white blaze it blazed more furiously and scattered over the stone courtyard.

Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt, assistant director of the Office of Civilian Defense, yesterday urged students of both schools to become active defense workers by signing the war against waste pledge and "really living up to it."

By agreeing to buy carefully, the First Lady declared, one does more than look for bargains. "If he is buying food, he must buy that which builds the best bodies," she said.

"In this country we have wasted human materials with as free a hand as we have wasted food and other articles. Human material is the most precious thing we have as a nation. To save it, we must make it so that in America every person can receive the physical care and treatment he needs."

"If a community works toward this end collectively, this would be a simple goal."

Eating what one likes has gone out of style, Mrs. Roosevelt said, declaring that high school students should take the lead in seeing that their families "eat what is good for them and learn the rules of nutrition."

Approximately 25 firemen will participate in tomorrow night's air raid show, Chief Fire Warden Clement Murphy said. Under the leadership of Private Robert Lyles, the firemen have "got businessmen of the city to kick in with materials" and are now building a model street with houses 36 feet high on Monument grounds. This will be demolished.

"We will have several machine and antiaircraft guns. All will be fired, too." Murphy declared. "We're rehearsing now so the men will become accustomed to the noise."

War Department Local No. 195, United Federal Workers, C. I. O., will sponsor a civilian defense rally in the Commerce Auditorium tonight at 8. Speakers will include Maj. Edward Gluck, Army Industrial College; F. A. Nauheim, chairman, committee on civilian defense, Junior Board of Trade, and Henry Rhine, national organizer, United Federal Workers. Two short films on national defense will be shown.

Nelson Estimates Price of Victory

would crush decency and humanity under the dictators' heel.

"The task before us is not easy. Success will come only through the use of all our energies and all of our resources. We must realize now that buliding for defense means more than peak production in a portion of our industries. It means spreading the work equitably, efficiently and quickly throughout our entire economic structure. It means the production in tens of thousands of factories of the 'bits and pieces' so vital to defense. It means certain hardships and sacrifices. We have borne them before in times of stress. We shall do so again.

"New England, with its great reservoirs of skilled, its small and large factories and its Yankee ingenuity is already contributing substantially to this program. Your seventeenth annual conference proves once more that New England has not forgotten its great democratic tradition of sitting down to discuss its common problems. Nothing today is of greater importance than the common defense. Let us apply ourselves to its problems with a determination ot let nothing stand in the way of prompt success."

Nelson admitted that the priorities system had reached the point where critical shortages of material threatened its complete collapse. Within a few months, therefore, the Government would begin rationing supplies to industry, he said, and "I can think of no purely civilian industry which will get all of the materials it would like to have."

"The less essential an industry is to the national well-being the sharper will be the curtailment, of course," he observed.

Warning that small business would have to dig in and fight for survival, Nelson observed that "this defense program isn't a WPA program for industry—it's a life or death struggle to save the free society we like to live in . . ."

Patman to Fight D. C. Rent Bill

ator McCarran said.

"It's a good bill and I'm for it," said Senator McNary.

McCarran Issues Statement

A notable feature of the bill, investing the power of appointing a rent administrator in the hands of the District Commissioners, prompted this statement from the District Committee chairman:

"It's the policy of the committee chairman, and I believe of the entire committee, on every possible occasion to give to the District Commissioners the powers to which they are rightfully entitled. There should be but one head to this District government, and that the Commissioners."

Chairman Randolph, of the House District Committee, sponsor of the measure, expressed pleasure at the form in which it was passed by the Senate. He said it had not yet been determined when the bill would be brought before the House for action on the form in which it met with Senate accord.

Amendments Listed

Among the chief amendments written into the measure by the Senate District Committee were:

1. Service rates for hotels and rooming houses are set at the January 1 rate, but if rooms were vacant on that date, the rate will be fixed by the administrator at the first preceding day on which they were occupied.

2. The rent administrator, to be selected by the District Commissioners and receive a $7500 annual salary, must have been a resident of the District for the past three years.

3. The administrator must file a semi-annual report with both the Commissioners and Congress. Previously it had been proposed that he file a report with Congress annually.

Connally Feels Probers Tried To Get 'Something' on Langer

By Robert Devore
Post Staff Writer

The potent figure of Senator Tom Connally, a Texas Democrat, yesterday moved to the benefit of William Langer, a North Dakota Republican, whose Senatorial fitness is challenged by charges of improper official conduct.

The Texan told the Privileges and Elections Committee that it seemed to him investigators who took testimony in North Dakota on the Langer charges "went out there with the idea of getting something on somebody."

He caused one of the star witnesses for North Dakota citizens opposed to the seating of Langer to be ordered from their counsel's table where his grimaces in the direction of committee members indicated strong disbelief in some of the replies Langer was making under cross-examination.

Connally explained that his only desire was to see that Langer was given fair treatment.

For a full day yesterday Langer's personal defense was subjected to a steady fire of questions from opposing counsel. At one point one of the attorneys, former Senator Edward Burke, brought from the two-term North Dakota Governor the statement that he saw "nothing improper" in hiring a close political friend of the judge to attend his trials on a charge of criminal conspiracy.

Langer's defense has been that he hired Chet Leedom, late South Dakota United States marshal, to watch the jury and the marshal's office in North Dakota because his conviction at an initial trial was largely the result of jury interference and other improper practices by Federal court attaches. Leedom, he said, was paid between $700 and $800 for his services.

"I see nothing improper in it," Langer declared. "I'd do it again tomorrow if I had to. That first jury was tampered with and Leedom caught them trying to monkey with the second jury."

Connally first broke into the proceedings when Col. O. R. McGuire, one of the counsels for petitioners against Langer, referred to investigators' testimony on alleged attempts to make contact with a member of the first jury. The committee had agreed that this testimony should be considered a part of its record.

"I don't agree that the testimony of the investigators should be made a part of the record," Connally objected. "There is no chance for cross-examination. Just to haul in this ex-parte stuff and call it testimony, I don't agree with that.

"This charge (jury tampering) goes to the very vitals of the case."

"The only way to meet this situation—and I believe there is great merit in what you say, Senator—is to send the subcommittee out into North Dakota," responded Senator Hatch (Democrat), of New Mexico, who succeeded Connally as committee chairman.

"Conduct Offensive"

Connally interrupted the hearing another time just after James Mulloy, Langer's onetime confidential political lieutenant, reacted to Langer's declaration that he gave Mulloy money for Leedom only once, with a facial pantomime that clearly meant: "Whew!"

"I want to raise a point of privilege," Connally began. "I don't know who that gentleman (Mulloy) is but whoever he is he sits there at the table and by facial expressions and otherwise is making comments to this committee.

"His conduct is offensive to me and if he is a witness in this case he has no business being at that table."

Hatch remarked that he had observed Mulloy shaking his head at some of Langer's answers and Burke directed Mulloy to take a seat among the spectators, advising him to "maintain a poker face or whatever kind of a face you are supposed to maintain at a hearing of this kind."

Mulloy's testimony constitutes the backbone of the charge the committee obviously considers most grave of the 21 allegations against Langer — the justice tampering charge.

Langer Comments

In view of Connally's intervention, Langer was asked after the hearing was recessed until 10 a. m. today, if, from his experience as a lawyer, he could sense the sentiment of the committee. He replied:

"I've seen jurors laugh and smile and soak the hell out of a fellow."

By cross-examination, McGuire developed an incredible picture of the hectic days of Langer's conviction and ouster as Governor. The panorama showed a cuspidor crashing through a plate glass window at the Capitol, Langer and his friends signing a "declaration of independence for North Dakota" at a night meeting in his office, declaration by Langer of martial law for the entire State.

Also pictured was the election of Thomas Moodie over Mrs. Langer—"she got more votes than I ever got in my life"—as interim governor, attempts by the Legislature to impeach both Moodie and the State Supreme Court and final disqualification of Moodie on nonresidence grounds 26 days after he took office.

The fragile nature of North Dakota political alliances was demonstrated by Langer's description of his relations with former Representative Lemke, of North Dakota:

"We've been very good friends and then we'd become enemies again. Right now we are enemies."

Thanksgiving Menu Thrills D. C. Select

Official statistics are not available as to how many epicures are among the 298 Washington men who will leave early this morning for induction into the Army, but there apparently was one in a former contingent.

A letter was received at The Post yesterday written on the back of a Thanksgiving Day menu which evidently inspired Private First Class Joseph E. Marcus stationed at Fort Belvoir, Va., to poetic ecstasy.

Lovingly he called attention to the "shrimp cocktail, sage dressing, giblet gravy, mince pie and cocoanut layer cake," among the list of items on the menu which, of course, centered around the traditional roast turkey. "Won't Hitler be mad when he sees what our boys are eating," wrote Private Marcus concluding his letter.

The registrants leaving the old National Guard Armory, Sixth Street and Pennsylvania Avenue Northwest, at 7:30 a. m. today will include 128 white selectees who will proceed to Richmond and 170 Negroes to be inducted at Baltimore. Monday 199 whites will be called, completing Washington's quota for November.

Wickard Calls Defeat of Hitler Only Defense

By the Associated Press

Worcester, Mass., Nov. 13.—Secretary of Agriculture Wickard declared today that the "adequate defense of America means nothing less than the defeat of Hitler."

Therefore, he told the Nation's farmers, they must run the risks of overproduction in the interests of national defense.

The cabinet member also served notice that the United States was ready to show its "force" in both oceans, if necessary, should the country's interests be menaced.

In an address prepared for the seventy-fifth anniversary meeting of the National Grange, Wickard said that Hitler "can be defeated only by a superior force of materials and men. The men are there today, in Russia, in China, in England. Our greatest need is to get materials to these men and get them there fast enough . . . If our production is 'too little and too late' it may be too late for us to hope for freedom in our generation."

Not at Price of Slavery

The United States, he went on, desires peace "but not at the price of slavery."

"We will not initiate the use of force to extend our interests or our holdings," he said. "But if force is used against our interests, we will counter with force. We cannot afford to have our world lines of supply and trade interrupted. We will not allow interruption and will not back down where our vital interests are concerned.

"We are going to see that the goods are delivered."

For agriculture, Wickard fixed a triple production goal:

Ample supplies for 130 million people in this country with "more money to spend for food than they've had for years;" "food for the British who are fighting our fight," and food for stockpiles or reserves "to be used after Hitler is defeated, to feed the people he has impoverished."

Grange Demands More

Grange leaders, asserting that improved prices had not solved the farm problem, called for legislation which would offer farmers "something better and more respectable than Government gratuities and subsidies."

School Board Bans Sale of Soft Drinks

Leesburg, Va., Nov. 13.—Dr. B. A. Brann, Leesburg dentist and member of the county school board from Leesburg town district, was named a delegate to the meeting of the trustees' association in Richmond on November 18 and 19 at the regular meeting of the Loudoun County school board held here yesterday.

The board passed a resolution prohibiting the regular sale of soft drinks in the school to pupils and the use of any electrical appliance in any school building for cooling soft drinks, also prohibiting the sale of seeds by pupils under the direction and management of teachers.

Application was made to the State board of education for two literary loans of $2500 each for use in installing a water and sanitary system in the Hillsboro School and in the Waterford School.

Doctor Held In Week-Old Death of Wife

By the United Press

Monterrey, Mexico, Nov. 13.—Dr. Arthur Frederick Torrance, of New York, well-known medical scientist, was held today in connection with the death of his wife, the former Mrs. Ada Loveland, a wealthy Kalamazoo (Mich.) widow.

The dead woman's son, Richard Loveland, an attorney and employe of the Federal Reclamation Bureau, of Sacramento, Calif., who rushed here by plane and automobile, lodged the charges which resulted in the physician's detention.

Mrs. Torrance, widow of a Michigan paper mill executive, died supposedly from a fractured skull suffered in an unusual automobile accident near Monterrey November 8. Torrance told American consular officials his wife was driving their car about 10 miles north of Monterrey when she swerved into a ditch to avoid hitting a cow, and struck her head on the rear-view mirror.

A passing motorist who saw the accident notified the Monterrey Red Cross and an ambulance was sent out from the city. Torrance, who had started to drive his wife to Monterrey, met the ambulance and the injured woman was transferred and rushed to the hospital, where she died at 10 p. m. Saturday.

Last Monday Torrance decided to bury his wife here, and he was said to have asserted he had his stepson's permission to do so. Mrs. Torrance's body was embalmed and funeral services were conducted in the Monterrey Cemetery by a Protestant clergyman, attended by consular officials.

Loveland arrived Tuesday morning and, after a brief investigation, brought a murder charge against Torrance, agreeing, however, that his stepfather be permitted to remain at a downtown hotel under surveillance instead of being held in the jail.

An informal hearing of the case was held by the Monterrey district attorney last night and another was scheduled, probably for tonight. It was reported that Mrs. Torrance's body would be exhumed for a post-mortem examination.

[Records of Whitley County, Ky., the Associated Press reported, showed Arthur Torrance, 54, retired, of New York, and Mrs. Ada Cooke Loveland, 50, of Early Hills, Calif., obtained a marriage license at Williamsburg October 18 and were married the same day by Whitley County Judge J. I. Manning. She was the widow of a Watervliet, Mich., paper manufacturer.]

[Authorities here said Mrs. Torrance was 65.

Torrance conducted a number of research expeditions on tropical diseases, such as sleeping sickness and elephantiasis, in Africa and the East Indies. His New York address is given as the Salamagundi Club.

MRS. ARTHUR TORRANCE,

Circus Hands Jittery as 11th Elephant Dies

Charleston, S. C., Nov. 13.—The pachyderms at the circus grounds trumpted tonight — dolefully or wrathfully, as the case might be—after death touched their ranks for the eleventh time in a week.

Three of them fought on the grounds and the clash of the giants resulted in the serious injury of a teamster, 28-year-old Philip Coaker, of Hartford, Conn., who had several bones crushed in his face.

Death came this morning to Peggy, a lead elephant in the performance. She, like the rest, died presumably from arsenic poisoning.

The death of the 11 pachyderms represents a loss of $110,000 to the Ringling Brothers and Barnum & Bailey Circus. The circus put on its regular performance today, but the atmosphere was tense with excitement and nervousness.

Teamsters, trainers and keepers screamed menacingly at circus-goers who approached the elephants with peanuts.

Workers under Walter McClain, trainer for the herd of 36 survivors, reported that apples which were fed to the animals possibly contained the fatal doses of arsenic.

McClain was reported to be in a highly nervous state as the result of the mysterious poisonings. Circus officials would not allow reporters to talk to him.

Peggy was a young elephant, 25 years old. She died in a railway car en route from Augusta, Ga., where the circus played yesterday. She had been ailing for nearly a week. She was stricken along with the others in Atlanta, Ga., a few days ago, but she apparently had recovered and rejoined the circus at Augusta.

Another elephant was missing from the circus' performances today—the beast, ill, was reported to be tottering in a railway car next to Peggy's.

Coaker, the teamster, was injured when he attempted to stop the elephant fight. He was crushed between two of them which had been butted by a third.

His two elephants, Marcella and Emma, were attacked by Judy, a larger and more pugnacious elephant. At the moment he sought to dash between them and untangle a bit of head harness and end the fight, Judy plunged into Marcella, knocking her against Emma, and pinning Coaker between them.

When the two big beasts were pulled apart, the teamster lay on the ground, unconscious.

Shipbuilding Tempo Rising, Land Shows

By the Associated Press

New York, Nov. 13.—Rear Admiral Emory S. Land, U. S. N., retired, chairman of the U. S. Maritime Commission and president of the Society of Naval Architects and Marine Engineers, reported on the Nation's naval and merchant shipbuilding program today and said the profession "has been called upon to perform almost the superhuman."

The progress in the ship program, he said in his prepared president's address at the opening of the society's annual meeting, "is a true testimonial to the ability of our profession to meet emergencies and overcome seemingly insurmountable barriers which many years of comparative inactivity in shipbuilding in the United States has erected against us."

Outlining the naval construction program, Admiral Land said:

"In the first eight months of 1941, a total of 436 Navy keels have been laid as against 156 in all of 1940; 249 ships have been launched, as against 60 last year, and 213 have been commissioned as compared with 47 in 1940. In all there have been 2831 ships ordered by the Navy since January 1, 1940, to cost a total of $7,234,262,178."

Huge Army Order to Aid Auto Industry

By the Associated Press

Detroit, Nov. 13.—Sidney Hillman, codirector of the Office of Production Management, announced late today the War Department would place within the next few days orders for 94,000 motor vehicles (trucks, jeeps, ambulances), at a cost of 200 million dollars as a partial solution to the problem of unemployment caused by the changeover of the automobile industry from civilian to defense production.

In addition, Hillman said, the Government plans to place orders for approximately 123,000 vehicles within one or two months at a cost of more than 230 million dollars, dependent upon favorable action by Congress. Hillman said he had been informed of the latter plans by Robert P. Paterson, Undersecretary of War.

Gov. Murray D. Van Wagoner, who has been working for some time to alleviate unemployment in the automobile industry, declared: "Swell, that's swell. Damn it, that's what I call real cooperation," when informed of Hillman's announcement.

Earlier, Hillman had said here that "strikes at this time are all wrong," but that material shortages were a more critical problem in the Nation's defense effort.

Praises Labor Training Plan

"Labor we have in abundance," Hillman said before starting out with Gov. Murray D. Van Wagoner on a tour of Detroit area plants engaged in armament production. "One thing that stands out to the greatest credit of organized labor is its labor-in-training program."

Praising the cooperation of Van Wagoner, Hillman told him, "all we'll have to do in Washington, Mr. Governor, is to back you up."

The OPM official, in a press conference, said he came to Detroit "primarily to see what we can do to speed up production," adding: "That's the main objective today—the national objective."

"This must be a crusade of the people," Hillman continued. "It cannot be done from the top."

Cites Two-fold Problem

He said the OPM had a two-fold problem, to speed up production and "to see that we don't waste idle machinery and idle man power while we are retooling for defense."

Hillman told Michigan manufactureres, labor leaders and Government officials he encountered in a whirland tour of defense plants that they were at the hub of an industrial area in which nearly a billion dollars is being devoted to "the job of licking Hitler."

"We are ahead of schedule in recruiting workers and training them for defense jobs. It is your responsibility to see that the machines and tools and materials are ready for all this qualified labor."

C.I.O. Parley Slated to Back Murray's Mediation Plan

The controversy over a closed shop in captive mines is expected to draw the center of attention at the national C. I. O. convention in Detroit next week with C. I. O. President Murray's "industry-union council" plan to be officially advanced as a substitute for National Defense Mediation Board machinery, it was reported last night by authoritative C. I. O. union sources here.

Present C. I. O. sentiment is to indorse the action of Murray and Thomas Kennedy, vice president of the United Mine Workers, in resigning from the Mediation Board after the board turned down Lewis' request for a closed shop in captive mins.

The "industry-union council" plan provides for the establishment of councils in each industry concerned with defense production with representatives of union labor, employers, and the Federal Government participating. These councils would handle all industry problems, including the problem of production which has been handled by the Government and industry without any labor participation up to now. Failure of these councils to agree on problems would result in the questions being referred to a central national body similar to the Mediation Board, for final action.

It is believed in some quarters that adoption of the Murray plan would enable all quarters to "save face." The Mediation Board structure might be salvaged and used as the over-all national body provided by the plan. However, employers are expected to insist that labor's concern with the problem of production be kept to an absolute minimum.

Contention Is Disputed

Local C. I. O. leaders dispute this contention, charging that employers have botched the problem of production. They assert that full labor participation is necessary to guarantee fullest production of munitions of war necessary to beat Hitler.

Another problem to be brought to the convention's attention is the organizing drive started recently by the United Federal Workers of America, C. I. O., in an effort to enroll one million Federal employes within three month.

Both the Washington C. I. O. Industrial Union Council and the U. F. W. A. have passed resolutions urging the convention to support the defense program and indorse President Roosevelt's foreign policy.

A considerable delegation of local and national C. I. O. officials are expected to attend the convention from Washington. Delegates from local C. I. O. auxiliaries will also attend the meeting of the national auxiliary group.

Among the local leaders to attend are John T. Jones, Maryland-D. C. Industrial Union Council; Sidney Katz, Washington Industrial Union Council; Jack Mink, United Cafeteria Employes, and Eleanor Nelson, Henry Rhine and Leroy Miller of the U. F. W. A.

Auxiliary members to attend include Mrs. Eleanor Fowler, Mrs. Julia Katz, Miss Susan B. Anthony, Mrs. Sally Balick and Mrs. Sylvia Beitscher.

President Faces New Labor Tangles

Occupied with the immediate problem of averting a coal strike in "captive" mines, and perhaps in the Nation's commercial mines as well, President Roosevelt also was expected yesterday soon to intervene in the railroad labor dispute, where the five operating brotherhoods have scheduled a strike December 7 to enforce demands for higher wages.

Adding to the threat was the action yesterday of the 14 nonoperating railroad brotherhoods, which, like the "Big Five," rejected the recommendations of a special fact-finding board in the controversy. They said nothing of striking, however.

Meantime, Federal Conciliation Director John R. Steelman yesterday obtained a respite of a week from the independent Federation of Long Line Telephone Workers, who had scheduled a strike for midnight tonight. Postponing action until November 21, John J. Moran, president of the union, said he was convening the federation's national council at Steelman's request, to deliberate future action.

A strike would affect the American Telephone & Telegraph communication system in 42 States and the District. Previously, Moran had promised to leave intact all defense telephonic and signal communications, as well as the transmission of news and newsphotos by wire.

The anomalous position of the Defense Mediation Board, from which the last three C. I. O. members resigned yesterday, following the lead of six others on Tuesday and Wednesday, contributed to mounting difficulties at the Bell Aircraft Co., in Buffalo.

President Warns Miners to Cooperate

proposals were launched for all shades of action, ranging on the milder side from the calling up of the Vinson "cooling-off period" bill to the extremist proposals for outright prohibition of all strikes and picketing in defense industries.

The conference with Lewis, set for 11:15 a. m., will also include two other key officials of the miners' union, Vice President Philip Murray, who is also president of the Congress of Industrial Organizations, and Thomas Kennedy, secretary-treasurer, both of whom resigned on Tuesday from the National Defense Mediation Board after it rejected the U. M. W. demand for a closed shop in the steel companies' captive mines.

Meeting with the union leaders will be three spokesmen of the operators—Eugene Grace, of Bethlehem Steel; Benjamin Fairless, of United States Steel, and Frank Purnell, of Youngstown Sheet t& Tube Co.

Earlier, at 10 a. m., Lewis will convene a gathering of his national policy committee, composed of 200 key U. M. W. officials. These officers, called here to decide the union's course of action in the light of the board rejection of its objectives, will probably recess the meeting while their leaders meet with the President.

The White House conference will convene with the foreknowledge that its failure, and resulting strike, would be followed by the most far-reaching repercussions, possibly determining the whole course of Government-labor relations.

Chief of these would be drastic anti-strike legislation, possibly much severer than the Administration wishes, but irresistible in the light of Congress' present frame of mind.

All Eyes on Lewis

Even if a coal strike is avoided and if a method is worked out at the C. I. O. convention next week for restoring cooperation with the Mediation Board, all of whose C. I. O. members have resigned, it was questionable whether labor legislation would be held longer in abeyance.

Speculation centered yesterday on the course of action which Lewis, aware of the legislative consequences of a strike, would take. It was considered possible by many observers that the veteran mine workers' chief would bow to the Mediation Board's decision but carry his battle to the C. I. O. convention in the attempt to block proposed resolutions promising support to the Administration and its all-out defense and foreign-aid policy.

Although United States Steel Corporation Chairman Irving S. Olds last night formally indicated his acceptance of the Mediation Board recommendations, it was also considered possible that the President could persuade the steel company mine operators to grant the closed shop in the interests of labor peace and continuity of production.

Secretary of Interior Ickes, solid fuels coordinator, released a detailed summary indicating that in event of a strike the coal supplies at the steel mills were sufficient for 31 days of operations, more or less, varying among different companies.

Dispatches from Pittsburgh, however, said the mills have enough coal to last only about 10 days or two weeks.

That a coal strike would be immediately followed by Fedaral occupation of the mines by the Army was seen yesterday as a foregone conclusion. But whether the miners, traditionally the most disciplined and experienced of all C. I. O. unionists, would desert Lewis in response to a plea of "Don't strike against the Government," was a matter of speculation.

There were indications of Administration support yesterday for strike-curbing action. Chairman Norton (Democrat), of New Jersey, of the House Labor Committee,

MORE AND MORE PRODUCTION

demands better and better sleep

GET THE BEST SLEEP YOU CAN—YOU'LL DO MORE • YOU'LL EARN MORE • YOU'LL LIVE MORE • •

★ The men who give their all at the blast furnaces need not be told that sleep is nature's greatest blessing. To them, sleep is more than an interlude between working hours — it is the solvent that washes away the poisons of fatigue and fits them to return, fresh and vital, to the hard work of tomorrow.

Today it is more than ever important that all of us share this understanding of the function of sleep. For it can be said that as America sleeps, so shall she meet the test.

More and more production calls for the expenditure of more and more energy. The faster the tempo, the sooner fatigue sets in. Then, instead of a speed-up, we suffer a slow-down

There is only one way to cope with fatigue, the enemy of production, and that is to fight it with adequate rest. Not through longer periods of sleep, but through better sleep per hour.

Science has shown us that our energy-factor increases as the quality of our sleep is improved. And the most direct way of improving our sleep is to bring about a complete and natural relaxation of nerves and muscles. Only a good mattress and proper spring foundation can do that — the kind that science has taught the bedding industry to build.

The urgency grows for an ever increasing flow of the implements of defense. The call is for speed. It must be met with high spirit and reinforced energy. We cannot afford to sabotage this "will to win" with any lowering of America's sleeping standards.

America needs to get the best sleep it can — for proper rest is the very cornerstone of America's "speed-up" program.

The bedding industry is now, and has been for some time, engaged in producing sleep equipment for the increasing needs of national defense. It is also energetically endeavoring to meet the public demand for its products. In this task, the industry is firmly resolved to let no inferiority break faith with its public. Selection of products may be limited, but quality will be maintained.

SPONSORED IN THE INTEREST OF NATIONAL WELL-BEING BY THE ENTIRE BEDDING INDUSTRY*

* The bedding industry is composed of manufacturers of mattresses, bedsprings, metal beds and other sleeping equipment.

Skilled Workers Called to Man Rescue Squads

Washington's skilled laborers yesterday were called to volunteer for civilian defense jobs, even though they are now busier than they have been for many years.

Capt. Anthony Lucas, this week appointed to head up a program of training for rescue squads to be used in the event the city is bombed from the air, said the "main core" of the squads would necessarily have to be recruited from among electricians, riggers, carpenters, plumbers, steam fitters, and persons skilled in radio and telephone communications.

Volunteers for the rescue training are asked to register either at the central bureau at 501 Pennsylvania Avenue, where offices are kept open on Tuesday nights, or at defense council headquarters in the District Building.

All volunteers accepted will be trained in First Aid classes to be taught by the Red Cross, and then given special rescue training adapted to the type of construction in Washington.

Capt. Lucas pointed out that work done by rescue squads in this country would be in many ways much different from the work in England.

"Acceptance of the basic fact that the rescue work may be necessary in this country and that we have no time to lose in preparation is the first requirement for a volunteer in my mind," he declared.

Probe Ordered in Death of Murder Witness

By the Associated Press

New York, Nov. 13.—Mayor LaGuardia said today he had ordered a thorough investigation into the death of Abe (Kid Twist) Reles, murder syndicate informer who was killed yesterday in a fall from a guarded sixth floor room of the Half Moon Hotel at Coney Island.

Reles was to have testified today at the murder trial of Louis (Lepke) Buchalter and had been a star State witness at other trials in connection with the Brooklyn murder-for-money ring.

Three detectives and two patrolmen on guard duty at the hotel when Reles made his fatal escape attempt were demoted today by Police Commissioner Lewis J. Valentine.

Valentine ordered that charges of neglect of duty be lodged against the police guard assigned to watch the suite of rooms occupied by Reles and other material witnesses.

Linked to Nazis, Dennett Activities Are Many

He Has Been Found To Operate Under Numerous Names

By Dillard Stokes
Post Staff Writer

Prescott Dennett, who has been linked by the special grand jury investigating German agents to the Nazi propagandist, George Sylvester Viereck, on the one hand, and to Representative Hamilton Fish's secretary, George Hill, on the other, was engaged in a maze of interwoven activities.

After inquiries conducted by Special Prosecutors William Power Maloney and Edward J. Hickey, jr., of the Department of Justice propaganda squad, the grand jurors charged Viereck with financing Dennett in order to have German propaganda mailed in envelopes bearing Congressional franks. The jurors said Hill falsely denied he knew Viereck, and swore falsely about having sent a House truck in which Dennett got rid of a quantity of franked mail the morning after he was summoned as a witness.

Under Many Names

Here are some of the names under which Dennett operated, giving their address as his headquarters, 1340 Rhode Island Avenue Northwest:

Alliance News Bureau, American Party, Columbia News Service, Islands for War Debts Defense Committee, Columbia Press Photos, Columbia Trade Press Service, Columbia Press Service, Press Clipping Service, Make Europe Pay War Debts Committee, Publicity Alliance, War Debts Committees, Intercity Press Service; Romeike Clipping Bureau (with New York offices) and Romelike Press Clipping Service.

All these enterprises, and perhaps others, Dennett conducted in a small residence apartment, equipped with three telephones and buzzers for calling messengers. Dennett hawked the services of his "agencies" in person or by letter. Systematically he canvassed State governors, industrial companies and others, keeping a record of which name he used in approaching each group.

Dennett carefully tore up much of the correspondence that was part of his activities, but significant fragments have been assembled, which both convey information and suggest a need of explanation.

Telegram Disclosed

For example, there was a telegram sent from Philadelphia which said:

PLEASE PHONE RELAY REP STATTONS MESSAGE TO GEORGE HILL AT RAP FISHS CAPITOL OFFICE REGARDS PRESCOTT DENNETT.

Apparently Dennett was in a hurry to get off to Philadelphia, mailing point of thousands of anti-interventionist letters with Congressional franks. Forgetting to pass on a message to Hill, now under indictment, he sent the telegram to attend to it.

There is no "Rep. Statton," but there is a Representative William G. Stratton (Republican), of Illinoise, and quantities of unaddressed envelopes with his frank were found when Dennett's headquarters were raided, under court order, by the special prosecutors of the propaganda squad.

Dennett, his secretary, Myrtle Ince, and Hill have been questioned by the grand jurors. But not Stratton or Fish, whose frank envelopes also were found.

Sample of Circular

Then there was a sample of a mimeographed circular Dennett appears to have used in his capacity as secretary-treasurer of the anti-intercentionist committees. Besides his fees for handling publicity for Flanders Hall, Inc., publishers of anti-British books allegedly sponsored by Viereck, and the money he is alleged to have received from Viereck, Dennett kept his eyes open for contributions. He got some of the names on his mailing list by watching newspapers and noting who wrote anti-defense letters. When he liked the tone of a letter, Dennett would send the writer some of the stickers of his committees, for which he said he had access to the Government Printing Office.

Among Dennett's correspondents were Viereck and Scribner's Commentator, reputed custodian of a secretly prepared master mailing list of the anti-interventionists. The publication's editor and publisher were questioned this week by the special grand jury.

Propaganda Seized

Dennett wasn't just talking when he told his prospective contributors that he "franked" mail. With Hill's aid he got rid of about a ton of unaddressed franked envelopes when he was summoned, yet bales of it were left and were seized by the propaganda squad.

House trucks took Dennett regular shipments from Capitol Hill. At least one large shipment had tags showing they were sent to him from Representative Hamilton Fish.

Found was a single tag, from which someone—perhaps Dennett—had thoughtfully removed the frank. The tag bore the stamped words "All For," which meant that the shipment was more than one bag, or carton, and that "all" were for Dennett.

Badoglio Loses His Last Executive Public Office

Rome, Nov. 13—Marshal Pietro Badoglio was removed from his last executive public office today when a communique announced that Giancarlo Vallauri, academician and professor of electrical sciencs of Rome University, was appointed president of the national research council, a post which Marshal Badoglio was given in September, 1937, at the height of his popularity in Italy after the conquest of Ethiopia.

The brief communique makes no mention of the replacement, merely announcing Signor Vallauri's appointment.

Marshal Badoglio still remains marshal of Italy and senator. His name, which was seen almost daily in the newspapers after the Ethiopian war, has scarcely been mentioned since his resignation as chief of the general staff last winter. As president of the national research council he directed the activity of that body, especially created to encourage among other things inventions and their development, as well as their application to both domestic and military fields.

Dr. Escalante Feted

Dr. Don Diogenes Escalante, Ambassador from Venezuela, and his daughter, Miss Marie Teresa Escalante were guests Wednesday night at an informal dinner given in their honor by members of the Pi Kappa Alpha fraternity, 2448 Massachusetts Avenue Northwest. Among other guests was Harry Slattery, REA administrator.

There's a Job In a Name, For Stephanie

By the United Press

New York, Nov. 13.—You've heard about the man who names pullman cars and what a tough time he has. Well, take a look at Stephanie Foster's job.

Miss Foster, pert and redhaired, is a professional name consultant who will name your baby or suggest new names for people who don't like the ones given them at birth.

"Recently I helped a young man change his name from Burrell to Carl," Miss Foster said, leafing through a ponderous book on the meaning and significance of names. "Burrell means little pig. Burrell's playmates found that out; and they didn't let him forget it. You can imagine how different he feels named Carl, which means robust and manly."

Miss Foster is often called in to settle a family squabble.

"A day or two ago a mother and father consulted me separately," she said. "The family name was Jemiron. The mother was holding out for Geoffrey. I hate to think what the neighborhood kids would do with 'Geoffrey Jemiron.' We finally settled on James in case of a boy and Gill in case of a girl."

Miss Foster had just finished discouraging two sets of parents. One father was bent on naming his pride and joy "Thelma" for his mother, in spite of his wife's tearful protest that "no girl wants to be named Thelma, not even your mother." The wife of the other pair was holding out for Sophie, despite the husband's feeling that their week-old child would live to resent this choice.

"Sophie and Thelma are two names almost universally disliked," Miss Foster said. "We settled for Lesley instead of Thelma and Joan instead of Sophie. Lesley from the father's name, Lester. Joan was for a favorite younger sister of the baby's mother."

Baby-naming is not just flattering the richest aunt or uncle in the family, or labeling the child after your favorite movie star, Miss Foster said, "it's a science comprising psychology, history, mythology, legend and common sense."

Nobody likes a queer name and most people like plain names, Miss Foster has found out. And it helps to know what your name means, she said.

Depot Ships Keep British Fleet in Shape

By Larry Allen
Associated Press Staff Writer

Alexandria, Egypt. — Britain's floating foundries are doing a bang-up job of keeping the warships of the Medterranean fleet in tip-top shape.

Behind every battleship, cruiser, destroyer, submarine or smaller warcraft going to sea, there is a depot ship turning out everything needed, from bread to nuts and bolts.

There are warships constantly reporting in or going out freshly stocked with provisions and ammunition, or getting emergency repairs.

The fighting ships in the Mediterranean have their own mother ships in Alexandria harbor constantly on the alert to deal with any job except major refitting or actually making guns and shells.

Aboard a 10,000-ton depot ship for destroyers where a rear admiral directs all destroyer operations, I saw hundreds of men repairing spare parts needed to keep destroyers in fighting trim.

Deep in the ship there was a foundary, with yellow flames licking upward, where steel and iron are melted and turned into new parts. It reminded me somewhat of an American steel mill, with sailors stripped to the waist, their bodies glistening with perspiration, hammering out vital ship accessories.

In other parts of the ship I visited the shipwrights' section, with its pine-laden atmosphere, where wooden parts are produced; and workshops of the coppersmiths and electric welders.

Above decks the ship's bakery turns out tons of bread to supply many destroyers, several corvettes, torpedo boats and minelayers.

Sailors on the depot ship even find out what makes torpedoes tick. They take off one end of a torpedo and overhaul its driving machinery to make sure that it will fire quickly and surely toward its mark.

Nearly 1000 sailors and 50 officers are engaged on this one depot ship alone in an important job which rarely reaches the headlines.

Hobbyist Provides Governors With Card Gallery of Manses

Visits Executives Of 48 States, Now Is Touring Capital

The Governor of every State in the Union owns a picture post card collection showing the executive mansions of his 47 fellow Governors thanks to a unique hobby indulged in by a 66-year-old store owner of Bangor, Me.

Isodore Capozzola is now very near the fulfillment of a life-long ambition.

In Washington on the last stop in a 66-day tour that took him to every State capitol in the country for a visit with high officials, Capozzola had high hopes of meeting with the same good fortune here that saw him through usually closed doors of executive inner offices.

A personal visit to President Roosevelt and to Vice President Wallace will "make me a very, very happy man," he said.

Until his arrival in the various State captols, Governors' staffs were at a loss to explain the almost daily arrival of picture postcards bearing only the signature "I. Capozzola." But once on the scene, the self-styled good-will missionary quickly became the special guest of the Governor. So much at least is indicated by newspaper clippings and letters of appreciation.

Born in Corletomanforto, Italy, Capozzola came to this country when he was 21 years old. He has six daughters and four sons.

Rare Books Escape German Fury, Briton Declares

"A great deal of damage has been done to the libraries of London," Arundell Esdaile, secretary emeritus of the British Museum, declared here Wednesday night, but he added, most of the damage was to replaceable books. The valuable ones have been evacuated to remote parts of the country."

Esdaile, who is also president of the British Library Association, spoke in the Coolidge Auditorium of the Library of Congress at a meeting sponsored by the District Library Association. He was introduced by Dr. Waldo G. Leland, historian and director of the American Council of Learned Societies in place of Librarian Archibald MacLeish, who could not attend because of illness.

Speaking on "Aspects of Bibliography," Esdaile urged librarians here not "to allow themserves to be narrowed by concentrating too much on the technicalities of book periods, but rather to keep their minds on the broad movements of the time they are dealing with."

'Hot Spot' Deserves One Among Better Mysteries

Musical Comedy Cast Goes Deftly Dramatic In a 'Different' Sort of Guess-Who Yarn; Tabloid 'Naughty Marietta' on Capitol Stage

IN THE MATTERS of taut action, suspense, surprise and, in the large view, performance, "Hot Spot," the new number on the screen at Loew's Capitol, is about as puncture-proof a murder-mystery drama as is apt to come along this side of the super-de luxes.

BETTY GRABLE

To disclose that this Twentieth Century-Fox picturization of Steve Fisher's novel of "I Wake Up Screaming" is told by the flash-back method, would be to make it appear that the whole thing is pretty runover heel. But the flashbacks merely visualize third-degree testimony before the police, trying to solve the murder of a blond waitress who has been transformed into a glamour girl by a clever sports promoter, and shrewdly contrive to keep the girl alive in the picture after she is gently interred in the cemetery. And if it was revealed further that three of the leading players in straight dramatic roles heretofore usually have been identified with musical films, the conclusion probably would be that the acting must be exceedingly Virginia baked. Perhaps some of it is. But, by and large, it is exactly right for the purposes of the present hunt for a vicious killer.

In addition to its sturdier qualities, there is a nice vein of humor running through the puzzle of whodunit—which, by the way, is not solved until almost the last flicker of the final reel. There also is some downstage music in the picture that stands out boldly from its tuneful background. And a swimming pool scene, too, apparently for no better reason than that the two who supply the real love interest in the story are physically architectured the way they are. That is reason enough. Anyhow, the scene doesn't hurt the plot any, because it has practically nothing to do with it!

"Hot Spot," by its very nature, is one of those things that may not be minutely divulged to future audiences without killing it deader than Vicky Lynn. This young sports promoter spies Vicky in her beanery and immediately bets his actor and newspaper columnist pals that he can do a Pygmalion over night—and does. But just when Vicky is beginning to be the toast of the town and a likely prospect for Hollywood, she is found utterly defunct on her apartment floor. So the cops go to work on everybody concerned, including the victim's sister, Jill Flynn, the night switchboard boy, the columnist and the actor, with a very special line of torture for Frankie Christopher, the bright young man who started it all. Big Ed Cornell, the headquarters man with an unblemished record of convictions, sees Frankie sitting in the "hot spot" in his every waking moment and all his dreams. He never makes a mistake. Well, hardly ever. If all that sounds stereotyped, go see for yourself.

That Cast Will Surprise You

Betty Grable, Victor Mature, Carole Landis and Laird Cregar would hardly be expected to be caught in this sort of business, but there they are and everybody should be glad of it. Miss Grable doesn't sing a note, Mr. Mature is dead serious, Miss Landis only contributes one song and Mr. Cregar is terrific in a role unlike any in which he has been seen to date. As the fly cop, with diabolical patience and a mounting pile of evidence, he plays with his prospective victim like a giant, purring cat with a midget mouse. Not that Victor Mature is any midget. Nor is he any mere "hunk of man." He is an exceedingly likely comer-upper on the strength of his present assignment. But it is Mr. Cregar who steals the picture, even with such experts as Alan Mowbray, the actor; Allyn Joslyn, the columnist, and Elisha Cook, jr., the switchboard operator, on the other side. Those in the lesser roles help to make "Hot Spot" one of the bigger of the lesser productions.

For the stage at the Capitol this week, Managing Director Gene Ford has whipped up a tabloid version of Victor Herbert's "Naughty Marietta" that makes no attempt to retain any of the story, but preserves the best of the score's song hits—"Tramp, Tramp, Tramp," the Neapolitan street song, "Ah, Sweet Mystery of Life," "I'm Falling in Love With Someone" and others. Joseph Clifford, a robust tenor, and Lynn Allison, the Capitol's brilliant young soprano, do extremely well with the numbers first sung in Washington by Orville Harrold and Emma Trentini. Dorothy Ramsey and Robert Gately complete an admirable quartet of principals and a huge ensemble of mixed voices gives rousing effect to the concerted passages. Handsomely staged, too. The stage bill opens with "The Bricklayers," the most pretentious dog act of them all, and is ostensibly headlined by that veteran dancing comic, Joe Frisco. Mr. Frisco opened cold and closed in a blaze at yesterday's first performance. His bit about the horse-player is a gem.

The Fox Movietone News, Sam Jack Kaufman's semi-noiseless "Hit Parade" overture and Art Brown's anticipatory Thanksgiving singfest are the remaining auxiliaries of a feature that has more than meets the eye—except in that swimming pool sequence!

Bob Hope's Wit Makes Palace Anniversary Bill a Happy One

By Richard L. Coe

Whatever angels guard the remains of old farces surely must twang harps rhapsodically on their heavenly harps when they consider the existence of Bob Hope. Once more the Palace, for its twenty-third Birthday Bill, is feeling the flutter of their excited wings, the gleam of their starry eyes in honor of Hope's latest feat, "Nothing But the Truth," for that winning comic again has put life into an idea that conceivably could have been a classic when Cleo was mistress of the Nile.

It is, of course, the professional observer's constant crotchet that he always must find the reason for a seeming chestnut's glittering success, but with the Hope fellow involved, there is little difficulty in that. The guy's spontaneous wit, his anxious pan, his sloppy walk and haphazard tangents are allowed free play in this successor to "The Cat and the Canary" and "The Ghost Breakers." The result is a merry, frothy film, welcome exit from our ugly realities.

In case you don't remember the book, the play or the two film versions which preceded this one, a hint of the story may give an inkling of the perils besetting our hero this time. He is that brash chap who bets his business partners that he can tell "Nothing But the Truth" for an entire 24 hours. Knowing what he does of their business and extra-marital activities, the fellow should have been the last man for his associates to have so tempted. With a spry young innocent, nattily played by Paulette Goddard, to urge him on in her need for money (for an orphanage, you!), Hope scampers about on a palatial yacht anchored in Biscayne Bay.

Some Helpful Associates

Yes, Miami Beach, or, quoting the film, "Wall Street With Cocoanuts," is the handsome setting for Hope and his playmates, a group quite as sleek as its surroundings. Besides the elfish Miss Goddard, Helen Vinson is on hand to sleep none too soundly in an adjoining cabin; Catherine Calhoun Doucet to mend what she feels is a broken romance; Edward Arnold to plot his devious financial coups; Willie Best to whine in his most pitiful manner; Leif Erickson to stalk stuffily; Glenn Anders to cheat a wife, and Leon Belasco to find potential victims for his psycho-analyses.

Still, Hope is the essence of this comedy's facile frivolity. Whether chasing about in a lady's negligee or finding an unexpected face in the water, he makes its humor gay and deft without that harried forcing for laughs that make lesser comics a bore.

One of the Palace shorts makes another bow to Florida, FitzPatrick's travelitalk in color, an interesting winter invitation, even though it carelessly asserts that its Suwannee River, which Stephen Foster never saw, was the inspiration for his well-loved song. Evidently Mr. FitzPatrick is a credulous traveler. A Pete Smith subject devoted to "Flicker Memories" is pretty heavily handled. The News of the Day completes the bill.

The Stars Break Down

Hollywood, Nov. 13.

The best acting in town these days is being done on the "To Be or Not to Be" set, starring Carole Lombard and Jack Benny as the Lunt and Fontanne, of Poland. The acting's done by Ernest Lubitsch. Benny's completely absorbed in his part, and Carole screams with mirth, which is saying a lot. Why, for hours at a time, Benny forgets to draw on his cigar—even lays it aside, I suppose when they actually get into the "Hamlet" sequence, with Jack in costume and Carole playing Ophelia, he'll absentmindedly hand her his cigar and she'll draw on it. Stanley Ridges plays a member of the Gestapo, and Lionel Atwill a fine actor who never gets to act.

Hard Sense and Soft Tongue Prove Potent Studio Policy

By Frederick C. Othman.
United Press Hollywood Correspondent.

Hollywood, Nov. 13 (U.P.)—Fourteen months ago a 19-year-old girl came to Hollywood in the hope of becoming a movie actress. Today she is one of the great stars.

She's also a countess, though that is beside the point. We're talking about Miss Gene Tierney, of Brooklyn, N. Y., who worked for four months on Broadway in "The Male Animal," signed a contract with Twentieth Century-Fox and joined dozens of other beauteous young women on movie studio payrolls. Most of the others either got fired at the end of their first six months, or hung on as $75-per-week stock girls.

And here is Miss T., the star of the tremendously successful "Sundown," the leading lady in the expected hit, "Shanghai Gesture," yet to be released, and the co-star currently with Tyrone Power in "Son of Fury."

She's got something—and it isn't altogether sex appeal, though she has plenty of that. (You'll find out when you see her in a sarong.)

Recipe for Success

We think we know what she has got, and for the information of some beautiful ladies we could mention by name, we'd like to report that Miss Tierney has arrived at the movie pinnacle, by practice of the old, standard virtues. An unusual state of affairs in these parts.

When the publicity department wanted to take photos of the Tierney legs, she figured the publicists knew what they were doing. They got all the leg art they wanted, when they wanted it. If a newspaper reporter wanted to interview her, she didn't have a cold, or a date with the hair dresser. She was Johnny-on-the-spot, with plenty of ideas to help make the interview interesting.

As a result, Miss Tierney received more publicity than most movie stars, before she had appeared in her first picture, which, incidentally, was not so good. It was called "The Return of Frank James." She was a stiff, wooden-looking actress.

But she presumed that the directors and the producers, like the press agents and the newspaper correspondents, knew their jobs, too. She played in one movie after another, good, bad and indifferent. She learned much about acting. And simply by keeping her mouth shut, she made friends. The movie makers were so surprised at finding a starlet who didn't think she was at least a road company queen that they went out of their way to give her the breaks.

So it was that the studio had "Belle Starr" on the schedule, with Barbara Stanwyck pencilled in for the lead. Miss S. was busy at another studio. Director Irving Cummings urged that Miss Tierney get the role. She got it, and though she was suffering with a mysterious ailment that kept causing her eyes to swell, she did her dead level best. It wasn't easy; she was in pain most of the time.

The picture did well. She looked fine. Walter Wanger borrowed her for "Sundown" and gave her the old glamour treatment, which started Hedy Lamarr in "Algiers." When Wanger's makeup department got through with Miss T., she had the boys saying: "Whew!"

Miss Tierney by now was having her own personal troubles. She married Count Oleg Cassini, the dress designer, and that made her parents angry. Here again she broke Hollywood precedent and told the truth about her feelings. She said flatly that if her father didn't like her husband, he could lump it. This kind of honesty did her public relations no harm.

A Tip and a Postscript

So we had lunch with her today. She still figures the other fellow knows his job, and there is no doubt that she is set to become one of the movies' great ladies. She's got the other fellow, every last one of him, behind her.

Catch on, you other gals?

We must add that one inaccuracy has crept into the above dispatch. There is one man who does not know his job, according to Miss Tierney. "I had to dive into the lake yesterday," she said, "and as I hit the water, my sarong slid off. It was awful.

"I had to come up for air and I shouted to the crew that I was just about naked and to please look the other way. They turned out to be a bunch of peeping toms. If I ever get my hands on whoever made that sarong, he'll be sorry."

And that's the way it goes. We're always visiting the right studio on the wrong day. We never yet have seen a lady fall out of her sarong.

Duke Loses the 'Duke'

New York, Nov. 13.

Stanton Griffis, the Paramount executive, was one of the men who lunched with the Duke and Duchess of Windsor . . . "I wonder," the duke suggested, "if your company could build a large movie theater in Nassau" . . . "That would hardly be feasible," said Griffis. "After all, the movie-going public in Nassau isn't large enough" . . . "I know that," explained the duke, "but that seems to me to be the only way we could get some decent pictures down there."

It is Mr. Justice Felix Frankfurter's belief that the inability of Nazi bombers to disrupt the life in London is due, in a large measure, to the wisdom of the late Louis D. Brandeis. For while American corporations followed a pattern of mergers into big, unified organizations, Brandeis attacked these practices and warned of the curse of bigness. England heeded that warning . . . London's residents have had their gas, electricity and water supplied by a number of unmerged companies—each operating its own separate plants. For Nazi bombers to ruin the city's power systems it therefore was necessary to hit 17 separate plants. London gets its water from 22 separate water supply companies. When one main was hit there were 21 others to service the city.

Britain Needs More Food, Wickard Says

By the Associated Press

Some 250,000 tons of American food are reaching England each month now, but even so, Secretary of Agriculture Wickard said yesterday that an average American could consume an Englishman's weekly ration of fresh meat, bacon, ham, eggs and cheese at one meal "without feeling he'd overeaten."

Agriculture Department officials said that English housewives could buy all the flour they needed and that England was producing all the potatoes and most of the vegetables required, but they added it was this country's job to produce the meat, eggs and dairy products required for shipment abroad under a one billion dollar fund earmarked for food under the second lease-lend fund.

While officials here discussed what they said were "mistaken" ideas in this country concerning British food supplies, Wickard told a National Grange session at Worcester, Mass., that in spite of American shipments, the "British still are on very strict rations of most vital foods."

Department officials who have been in England in recent months listed these diet limits for an individual: Cheese, 3 ounces a week; meat, 7 ounces a week; bacon and ham, 4 ounces a week; eggs, 2 a month, when available.

They explained that English people formerly obtained a large part of these supplies from Holland and Denmark, sources now cut off by German conquests. England still gets meat from Argentina, and Canada was said to be supplying large amounts of meat and dairy products.

Canadians also have supplied wheat and flour, department officials said, while estates and parks in the British Isles have been plowed up for emergency gardens producing potatoes and other vegetables.

Australia and New Zealand still are shipping some butter and cheese, officials here said, but this involves a long and hazardous haul.

Secretary Wickard said that the United States "is the only country left which is in a position to furnish the remainder of these essential articles of diet. The ocean haul from the United States is comparatively short, and, since England has exhausted her dollars, we are solving the dollar exchange problem by lend-lease appropriations."

Paraguayan Urges 'Alert Neutrality'

Paraguay desires to remain neutral "but if circumstances so require" it will remember its inter-American obligations and "fulfill those obligations no matter what the consequences," Dr. Juan Jose Soler, Paraguayan Minister, asserted Wednesday in an address at the Pan American Union.

Dr. Soler emphasized the need for an "alert and active neutrality with the observation that neutrality is not isolation," and added:

"Because of the catastrophic nature of modern war and the crisis through which international law is passing, passivity and impartiality do not suffice to defend neutrality. Neutrality is not isolation. A country that wishes to be neutral cannot fold its arms and await the development of events, because the risk that it runs by inaction is more serious than that incurred when it enters the sphere of belligerent activity, in order to take opportune measures against a greater evil."

Because a neutral country enacts a severe law to safeguard its sovereignty or strives to maintain the freedom of the seas "it does not depart from neutrality but rather seeks to preserve it," he contended.

It is a mistake, he said, "to believe that this active neutrality interests and benefits the strong American countries more than the small, unarmed nations. The strong, if indeed they also need the cooperation of others, can defend themselves alone, while the weak, in order not to be conquered one by one, need solidarity," Dr. Soler stated.

"BOTTLE BABIES"—Polar bear cubs born Wednesday in Cincinnati Zoo

Cincinnati, Nov. 13 (AP).—Two-day-old polar bear cubs were bottle-fed on goat's milk today after Aurora, their mother, refused to have anything to do with them.

The Cincinnati Zoo's plea that some hospital undertake the special care went unanswered "very probably," said officials, "because the hospitals are hard-enough pressed to care for humans."

What prompted Aurora's unmaternal conduct was a mystery.

"Perhaps," mused J. F. Heusser, managing director, "it was because she, with all her 500 pounds, couldn't understand how anything so little could be related."

Together, the cubs tip the scales at just three pounds.

The special milk-diet will be required for four or five weeks.

After that, said Heusser, the cubs can partake of solids, "beginning with bread, with plenty of cod-liver oil in it."

Banneker Dispute Meet Slated Today

Delegates from groups which have opposed the opening of the fieldhouse of Banneker School as a recreation center for colored soldiers will be heard and their questions answered at a meeting called for 2:30 p. m. today at the Council of Social Agencies, 1101 M Street Northwest.

Hugo Wolter, director of recreation for the District Defense Council, said the following had been invited: G. Edgar Brown, the Rev. W. H. Jernigan, Dr. Herbert Marshall, Maj. Alston Burleigh, the Rev. A. E. Elms, Dr. Howard Long, James P. White, Lee Johnson, Arthur Greene, the Rev. Robert M. Williams, Edith Payton, Ina Bell Lindsay, Dr. E. B. Henderson, Dorothy Pinkett, Almira Street and Dorothy Height.

Although opposition to use of the fieldhouse has been voiced, the principal contention is that the colored soldiers should use the center being prepared in the Gunton Building for white soldiers, in order that there be "no discrimination."

Both centers have been scheduled to open December 1 and each is planned with sleeping facilities for between 40 and 50 soldiers, as well as recreational rooms. Furnishings of both will be the same, according to plans.

Marines May Go To Hongkong

Copyright by the New York Times

Singapore, Nov. 13.—Possibility that United States Marines now in Shanghai, Tientsin and Peiping may be sent to Hongkong if they are withdrawn from China is being discussed in Singapore today.

It is believed withdrawal of Marines from China would mean the United States feared imminent war with Japan. In such a case joint action with Britain would be inevitable and Hongkong is a natural garrison post for Marines.

'Hot Spot' Deserves One Among Better Mysteries

Musical Comedy Cast Goes Deftly Dramatic In a 'Different' Sort of Guess-Who Yarn; Tabloid 'Naughty Marietta' on Capitol Stage

IN THE MATTERS of taut action, suspense, surprise and, in the large view, performance, "Hot Spot," the new number on the screen at Loew's Capitol, is about as puncture-proof a murder-mystery drama as is apt to come along this side of the super-de luxes.

BETTY GRABLE

To disclose that this Twentieth Century-Fox picturization of Steve Fisher's novel of "I Wake Up Screaming" is told by the flash-back method, would be to make it appear that the whole thing is pretty runover heel. But the flashbacks merely visualize third-degree testimony before the police, trying to solve the murder of a blond waitress who has been transformed into a glamour girl by a clever sports promoter, and shrewdly contrive to keep the girl alive in the picture after she is gently interred in the cemetery. And if it was revealed further that three of the leading players in straight dramatic roles heretofore usually have been identified with musical films, the conclusion probably would be that the acting must be exceedingly Virginia baked. Perhaps some of it is. But, by and large, it is exactly right for the purposes of the present hunt for a vicious killer.

In addition to its sturdier qualities, there is a nice vein of humor running through the puzzle of whodunit—which, by the way, is not solved until almost the last flicker of the final reel. There also is some downstage music in the picture that stands out boldly from its tuneful background. And a swimming pool scene, too, apparently for no better reason than that the two who supply the real love interest in the story are physically architectured the way they are. That is reason enough. Anyhow, the scene doesn't hurt the plot any, because it has practically nothing to do with it!

"Hot Spot," by its very nature, is one of those things that may not be minutely divulged to future audiences without killing it deader than Vicky Lynn. This young sports promoter spies Vicky in her beanery and immediately bets his actor and newspaper columnist pals that he can do a Pygmalion over night—and does. But just when Vicky is beginning to be the toast of the town and a likely prospect for Hollywood, she is found utterly defunct on her apartment floor. So the cops go to work on everybody concerned, including the victim's sister, Jill Flynn, the night switchboard boy, the columnist and the actor, with a very special line of torture for Frankie Christopher, the bright young man who started it all. Big Ed Cornell, the headquarters man with an unblemished record of convictions, sees Frankie sitting in the "hot spot" in his every waking moment and all his dreams. He never makes a mistake. Well, hardly ever. If all that sounds stereotyped, go see for yourself.

That Cast Will Surprise You

Betty Grable, Victor Mature, Carole Landis and Laird Cregar would hardly be expected to be caught in this sort of business, but there they are and everybody should be glad of it. Miss Grable doesn't sing a note, Mr. Mature is dead serious, Miss Landis only contributes one song and Mr. Cregar is terrific in a role unlike any in which he has been seen to date. As the fly cop, with diabolical patience and a mounting pile of evidence, he plays with his prospective victim like a giant, purring cat with a midget mouse. Not that Victor Mature is any midget. Nor is he any mere "hunk of man." He is an exceedingly likely comer-upper on the strength of his present assignment. But it is Mr. Cregar who steals the picture, even with such experts as Alan Mowbray, the actor; Allyn Joslyn, the columnist, and Elisha Cook, jr., the switchboard operator, on the other side. Those in the lesser roles help to make "Hot Spot" one of the bigger of the lesser productions.

For the stage at the Capitol this week, Managing Director Gene Ford has whipped up a tabloid version of Victor Herbert's "Naughty Marietta" that makes no attempt to retain any of the story, but preserves the best of the score's song hits—"Tramp, Tramp, Tramp," the Neapolitan street song, "Ah, Sweet Mystery of Life," "I'm Falling in Love With Someone" and others. Joseph Clifford, a robust tenor, and Lynn Allison, the Capitol's brilliant young soprano, do extremely well with the numbers first sung in Washington by Orville Harrold and Emma Trentini. Dorothy Ramsey and Robert Gately complete an admirable quartet of principals and a huge ensemble of mixed voices gives rousing effect to the concerted passages. Handsomely staged, too. The stage bill opens with "The Bricklayers," the most pretentious dog act of them all, and is ostensibly headlined by that veteran dancing comic, Joe Frisco. Mr. Frisco opened cold and closed in a blaze at yesterday's first performance. His bit about the horse-player is a gem.

The Fox Movietone News, Sam Jack Kaufman's semi-noiseless "Hit Parade" overture and Art Brown's anticipatory Thanksgiving singfest are the remaining auxiliaries of a feature that has more than meets the eye—except in that swimming pool sequence!

Bob Hope's Wit Makes Palace Anniversary Bill a Happy One

By Richard L. Coe

Whatever angels guard the remains of old farces surely must twang harps rhapsodically on their heavenly harps when they consider the existence of Bob Hope. Once more the Palace, for its twenty-third Birthday Bill, is feeling the flutter of their excited wings, the gleam of their starry eyes in honor of Hope's latest feat, "Nothing But the Truth," for that winning comic again has put life into an idea that conceivably could have been a classic when Cleo was mistress of the Nile.

It is, of course, the professional observer's constant crotchet that he always must find the reason for a seeming chestnut's glittering success, but with the Hope fellow involved, there is little difficulty in that. The guy's spontaneous wit, his anxious pan, his sloppy walk and haphazard tangents are allowed free play in this successor to "The Cat and the Canary" and "The Ghost Breakers." The result is a merry, frothy film, welcome exit from our ugly realities.

In case you don't remember the book, the play or the two film versions which preceded this one, a hint of the story may give an inkling of the perils besetting our hero this time. He is that brash chap who bets his business partners that he can tell "Nothing But the Truth" for an entire 24 hours. Knowing what he does of their business and extra-marital activities, the fellow should have been the last man for his associates to have so tempted. With a spry young innocent, nattily played by Paulette Goddard, to urge him on in her need for money (for an orphanage, you!), Hope scampers about on a palatial yacht anchored in Biscayne Bay.

Some Helpful Associates

Yes, Miami Beach, or, quoting the film, "Wall Street With Cocoanuts," is the handsome setting for Hope and his playmates, a group quite as sleek as its surroundings. Besides the elfish Miss Goddard, Helen Vinson is on hand to sleep none too soundly in an adjoining cabin; Catherine Calhoun Doucet to mend what she feels is a broken romance; Edward Arnold to plot his devious financial coups; Willie Best to whine in his most pitiful manner; Leif Erickson to stalk stuffily; Glenn Anders to cheat a wife, and Leon Belasco to find potential victims for his psycho-analyses.

Still, Hope is the essence of this comedy's facile frivolity. Whether chasing about in a lady's negligee or finding an unexpected face in the water, he makes its humor gay and deft without that harried forcing for laughs that make lesser comics a bore.

One of the Palace shorts makes another bow to Florida, FitzPatrick's traveltalk in color, an interesting winter invitation, even though it carelessly asserts that its Suwannee River, which Stephen Foster never saw, was the inspiration for his well-loved song. Evidently Mr. FitzPatrick is a credulous traveler. A Pete Smith subject devoted to "Flicker Memories" is pretty heavily handled. The News of the Day completes the bill.

The best acting in town these days is being done on the "To Be or Not to Be" set, starring Carole Lombard and Jack Benny as the Lunt and Fontanne, of Poland. The acting's done by Ernest Lubitsch. Benny's completely absorbed in his part, and Carole screams with mirth, which is saying a lot. Why, for hours at a time, Benny forgets to draw on his cigar—even lays it aside, I suppose when they actually get into the "Hamlet" sequence, with Jack in costume and Carole playing Ophelia, he'll absentmindedly hand her his cigar and she'll draw on it. Stanley Ridges plays a member of the Gestapo, and Lionel Atwill a fine actor who never gets to act.

Hard Sense and Soft Tongue Prove Potent Studio Policy

By Frederick C. Othman,
United Press Hollywood Correspondent.

Hollywood, Nov. 13 (U.P.)—Fourteen months ago a 19-year-old girl came to Hollywood in the hope of becoming a movie actress. Today she is one of the great stars.

She's also a countess, though that is beside the point. We're talking about Miss Gene Tierney, of Brooklyn, N. Y., who worked for four months on Broadway in "The Male Animal," signed a contract with Twentieth Century-Fox and joined dozens of other beauteous young women on movie studio payrolls. Most of the others either got fired at the end of their first six months, or hung on as $75-per-week stock girls.

And here is Miss T., the star of the tremendously successful "Sundown," the leading lady in the expected hit, "Shanghai Gesture," yet to be released, and the co-star currently with Tyrone Power in "Son of Fury."

She's got something—and it isn't altogether sex appeal, though she has plenty of that. (You'll find out when you see her in a sarong.)

Recipe for Success

We think we know what she has got, and for the information of some beautiful ladies we could mention by name, we'd like to report that Miss Tierney has arrived at the movie pinnacle, by practice of the old, standard virtues. An unusual state of affairs in these parts.

When the publicity department wanted to take photos of the Tierney legs, she figured the publicists knew what they were doing. They got all the leg art they wanted, when they wanted it. If a newspaper reporter wanted to interview her, she didn't have a cold, or a date with the hair dresser. She was Johnny-on-the-spot, with plenty of ideas to help make the interview interesting.

As a result, Miss Tierney received more publicity than most movie stars, before she had appeared in her first picture, which, incidentally, was not so good. It was called "The Return of Frank James." She was a stiff, wooden-looking actress.

But she presumed that the directors and the producers, like the press agents and the newspaper correspondents, knew their jobs, too. She played in one movie after another, good, bad and indifferent. She learned much about acting. And simply by keeping her mouth shut, she made friends. The movie makers were so surprised at finding a starlet who didn't think she was at least a road company queen that they went out of their way to give her the breaks.

So it was that the studio had "Belle Starr" on the schedule, with Barbara Stanwyck penciled in for the lead. Miss S. was busy at another studio. Director Irving Cummings urged that Miss Tierney get the role. She got it, and though she was suffering with a mysterious ailment that kept causing her eyes to swell, she did her dead level best. It wasn't easy; she was in pain most of the time.

The picture did well. She looked fine. Walter Wanger borrowed her for "Sundown" and gave her the old glamour treatment, which started Hedy Lamarr in "Algiers." When Wanger's makeup department got through with Miss T. she had the boys saying: "Whew!"

Miss Tierney by now was having her own personal troubles. She married Count Oleg Cassini, the dress designer, and that made her parents angry. Here again she broke Hollywood precedent and told the truth about her feelings. She said flatly that if her father didn't like her husband, he could lump it. This kind of honesty did her public relations no harm.

A Tip and a Postscript

So we had lunch with her today. She still figures the other fellow knows his job, and there is no doubt that she is set to become one of the movies' great ladies. She's got the other fellow, every last one of him, behind her.

Catch on, you other gals?

We must add that one inaccuracy has crept into the above dispatch. There is one man who does not know his job, according to Miss Tierney. "I had to dive into the lake yesterday," she said, "and as I hit the water, my sarong slid off. It was awful.

"I had to come up for air and I shouted to the crew that I was just about naked and to please look the other way. They turned out to be a bunch of peeping toms. If I ever get my hands on whoever made that sarong, he'll be sorry."

New York, Nov. 13.

Stanton Griffis, the Paramount executive, was one of the men who lunched with the Duke and Duchess of Windsor . . . "I wonder," the duke suggested, "if your company could build a large movie theater in Nassau" . . . "That would hardly be feasible," said Griffis. "After all, the movie-going public in Nassau isn't large enough" . . . "I know that," explained the duke, "but that seems to me to be the only way we could get some decent pictures down there."

When Harry Hopkins returned from England wearing Winston Churchill's hat the newspapers reported that Hopkins had lost his own hat in England. Much publicity was given to that loss, for Hopkins had worn that hat for many years. As a matter of fact, that hat never was taken to England, nor was it lost. Hopkins' son, David, now has it . . . Stirling Hayden, who relinquished Hollywood stardom, now is in a Canadian convoy . . . After next Wednesday, under a new AGVA ruling, no shows will be allowed to play at any Army camps, because of the 55-cent admission fee soldiers have to pay. "Actors will work gratis," is the new rule, "only if soldiers don't have to pay anything for seeing them."

At the British War Relief benefit show at Carnegie Hall, Eddy Duchin was one of the four pianists who entertained. The others were Jose Iturbi and Mr. and Mrs. Josef Lhevinne . . . Before the concert began, the four pianists were in a room backstage. "Well," said Iturbi, "I guess I'd better warm up my hands." He seated himself at the piano, and played some Bach . . . The Lhevinnes decided that their hands also needed warming up, and they played some Beethoven—while Duchin watched, in fascination . . . "What about you, Eddy?" Iturbi asked. "Don't you want to warm up?" . . . "Thank you," Duchin replied—sitting on his hands, "they're warm."

The Federal Government has granted priorities for the completion of the new Statler Building in Washington in return for an option to use the building either for offices or living quarters for Government workers . . . Jessie Matthews, supping at the Montparnasse, sang the complete score of "Charlot's Revue," the musical which made her famous here . . . Larry MacPhail, of the Dodgers, and Lex Thompson, the pro football franchise holder, clashed and were parted at Moore's the other night. It concerned a bet . . . C. B. S.'s Bob Trout, who was unable to see "Citizen Kane" when it was shown here, finally saw the picture in Lisbon last week. There it was billed as "The World at His Feet," with the subtitle, "Citizen Welles."

Alan Curtis and Ilona Massey, the screen actors, recently spent a weekend at the Wayne Country Club. There they met and became attached to a couple who had been living in the farmland region all their lives. "You will be our guests in New York," Curtis promised them, "when Ilona's picture opens on Broadway" . . . This week Miss Massey's picture, "International Lady," opened at the Criterion. Curtis brought the couple to New York and installed them at the St. Regis. He phoned their suite before the opening. "They dont answer," said the operator . . . To these rings—the only phone signals recognized by the lifetime users of a country party line—the couple answered.

Howard Lindsay and Dorothy Stickney have just celebrated their second anniversary in "Life With Father," the play which Lindsay and Russel Crouse adapted. Their accountancy staff, in tabulating the records made by the current production, presented to Lindsay a reckoning of the total number of bananas he has had to consume, in the breakfast scenes . . . "The figure is a staggering one," Lindsay was told. "Has the banana-diet affected you in any way?" . . . "In no way at all," he answered, "beyond a tendency to beat my chest and walk in a slightly-swaying crouch."

It is Mr. Justice Felix Frankfurter's belief that the inability of Nazi bombers to disrupt the life in London is due, in a large measure, to the wisdom of the late Louis D. Brandeis. For while American corporations followed a pattern of mergers into big, unified organizations, Brandeis attacked these practices and warned of the curse of bigness. England heeded that warning . . . London's residents have had their gas, electricity and water supplied by a number of unmerged companies—each operating its own separate plants. For Nazi bombers to ruin the city's power systems it therefore was necessary to hit 17 separate plants. London gets its water from 22 separate water supply companies. When one main was hit there were 21 others to service the city.

Next week Life Magazine will feature an article about the increased cost of living. It will be illustrated by a series of photographs, showing a typical housewife studying her husband's annual income and trying to rearrange her budget in keeping pace with rising prices . . . "No doubt," is Life's hopeful caption, "her husband's employer, from time to time, will give him a raise" . . . The lady who modeled as the typical housewife is married to one of the editors of Life.

Britain Needs More Food, Wickard Says

By the Associated Press

Some 250,000 tons of American food are reaching England each month now, but even so, Secretary of Agriculture Wickard said yesterday that an average American could consume an Englishman's weekly ration of fresh meat, bacon, ham, eggs and cheese at one meal "without feeling he'd overeaten."

Agriculture Department officials said that English housewives could buy all the flour they needed and that England was producing all the potatoes and most of the vegetables required, but they added it was this country's job to produce the meat, eggs and dairy products required for shipment abroad under a one billion dollar fund earmarked for food under the second lease-lend fund.

While officials here discussed what they said were "mistaken" ideas in this country concerning British food supplies, Wickard told a National Grange session at Worcester, Mass., that in spite of American shipments, the "British still are on very strict rations of most vital foods."

Department officials who have been in England in recent months listed these diet limits for an individual: Cheese, 3 ounces a week; meat, 7 ounces a week; bacon and ham, 4 ounces a week; eggs, 2 a month, when available.

They explained that English people formerly obtained a large part of these supplies from Holland and Denmark, sources now cut off by German conquests. England still gets meat from Argentina, and Canada was said to be supplying large amounts of meat and dairy products.

Canadians also have supplied wheat and flour, department officials said, while estates and parks in the British Isles have been plowed up for emergency gardens producing potatoes and other vegetables.

Australia and New Zealand still are shipping some butter and cheese, officials here said, but this involves a long and hazardous haul.

Secretary Wickard said that the United States "is the only country left which is in a position to furnish the remainder of these essential articles of diet. The ocean haul from the United States is comparatively short, and, since England has exhausted her dollars, we are solving the dollar exchange problem by lend-lease appropriations."

Paraguayan Urges 'Alert Neutrality'

Paraguay desires to remain neutral "but if circumstances so require" it will remember its inter-American obligations and "fulfill those obligations no matter what the consequences," Dr. Juan Jose Soler, Paraguayan Minister, asserted Wednesday in an address at the Pan American Union.

Dr. Soler emphasized the need for an "alert and active neutrality with the observation that neutrality is not isolation," and added:

"Because of the catastrophic nature of modern war and the crisis through which international law is passing, passivity and impartiality do not suffice to defend neutrality. Neutrality is not isolation. A country that wishes to be neutral cannot fold its arms and await the development of events, because the risk that it runs by inaction is more serious than that incurred when it enters the sphere of belligerent activity, in order to take opportune measures against a greater evil."

Because a neutral country enacts a severe law to safeguard its sovereignty or strives to maintain the freedom of the seas "it does not depart from neutrality but rather seeks to preserve it," he contended.

It is a mistake, he said, "to believe that this active neutrality interests and benefits the strong American countries more than the small, unarmed nations. The strong, if indeed they also need the cooperation of others, can defend themselves alone, while the weak, in order not to be conquered one by one, need solidarity," Dr. Soler stated.

Children Left Estate

The will of Mrs. Lucy Snowden Moore, of Sandy Spring, Md., which has been admitted to probate in the Orphans' Court at Rockville, bequeaths her entire estate to her children, Snowden Ellicott Lea and Doris Lea, in equal shares, and names them executors. The will was executed July 29, 1940. It does not reveal the value of the estate.

Bear Cubs Start Hitting Bottle When Spurned by Mama Polar

"BOTTLE BABIES"—Polar bear cubs born Wednesday in Cincinnati Zoo

Cincinnati, Nov. 13 (AP).—Two-day-old polar bear cubs were bottle-fed on goat's milk today after Aurora, their mother, refused to have anything to do with them.

The Cincinnati Zoo's plea that some hospital undertake the special care went unanswered "very probably," said officials, "because the hospitals are hard-enough pressed to care for humans."

What prompted Aurora's unmaternal conduct was a mystery.

"Perhaps," mused J. F. Heusser, managing director, "it was because she, with all her 500 pounds, couldn't understand how anything so little could be related."

Together, the cubs tip the scales at just three pounds.

The special milk-diet will be required for four or five weeks.

After that, said Heusser, the cubs can partake of solids, "beginning with bread, with plenty of cod-liver oil in it."

Banneker Dispute Meet Slated Today

Delegates from groups which have opposed the opening of the fieldhouse of Banneker School as a recreation center for colored soldiers will be heard and their questions answered at a meeting called for 2:30 p. m. today at the Council of Social Agencies, 1101 M Street Northwest.

Hugo Wolter, director of recreation for the District Defense Council, said the following had been invited: G. Edgar Brown, the Rev. W. H. Jernigan, Dr. Herbert Marshall, Maj. Alston Burleigh, the Rev. A. E. Elms, Dr. Howard Long, James P. White, Lee Johnson, Arthur Greene, the Rev. Robert M. Williams, Edith Payton, Ina Bell Lindsay, Dr. E. B. Henderson, Dorothy Pinkett, Almira Street and Dorothy Height.

Although opposition to use of the fieldhouse has been voiced, the principal contention is that the colored soldiers should use the center being prepared in the Gunton Building for white soldiers, in order that there be "no discrimination."

Both centers have been scheduled to open December 1 and each is planned with sleeping facilities for between 40 and 50 soldiers, as well as recreational rooms. Furnishings of both will be the same, according to plans.

Marines May Go To Hongkong

Copyright by the New York Times

Singapore, Nov. 13.—Possibility that United States Marines now in Shanghai, Tientsin and Peiping may be sent to Hongkong if they are withdrawn from China is being discussed in Singapore today.

It is believed withdrawal of Marines from China would mean the United States feared imminent war with Japan. In such a case joint action with Britain would be inevitable and Hongkong is a natural garrison post for Marines.

Miami Beach, Fla., Nov. 13 (INS).—It looked tonight as if Miami Beach would have to get along without burlesque this winter. City council refused to issue a license to Max Rudnick, New York burlesque producer, when he insisted his shows should have strip-tease acts.

Labor Monopoly

In the current discussions on the Lewis case an important point seems to have been generally overlooked. If the National Defense Mediation Board had decided in favor of a union shop for the captive mines, in simple American logic it would have had to accompany such a decision with a recommendation for Government control or regulation of the U. M. W. A. That is plain enough in the circumstances of this case. Here was a union asking Government help for the extension of the union shop covering an entire calling. For the union shop prevails in the mines belonging to the commercial operators, and in the captive mines, where the union shop clause has been rejected, Mr. Lewis has come within a small percentage of enlisting all the miners in his U. M. W. A. Now a union shop embracing an entire calling would confer upon Mr. Lewis' U. M. W. A. a labor monopoly. It would be a very significant monopoly, and for a reason other than the fact that soft-coal mining is a great industry. Coal miners follow a specialized craft which they can pursue only in the coal industry. "Once a miner, always a miner" is an old saying, and it is true that of all callings coal miners change their calling least of all.

If Mr. Lewis' union were to succeed in securing a union shop throughout the soft-coal industry, therefore, the individual miner would have no economic choice except to join that union. He could not go to another shop and exercise his calling. A monopoly on such a scale may not necessarily be against the public interest. In fact, monopolism is the tendency in our labor unionism, and there are those who favor its extension as the best means of expediting both defense and industrial peace. That, however, is beside this particular point. If the Government were to make a union-shop ruling for an entire calling, obviously the Government at the same time would have to assume responsibility for the proper conduct of that union. That point never seemed to occur to Mr. Lewis and the C. I. O. But it will be clear to those who have any regard for our American way. Nothing could be more intolerable than that a worker as a condition of following his calling anywhere in the United States should be compelled by Government to be a member of a wholly private unsupervised association. Our Government would thereby be lending itself to the fostering of autocracies within our political democracy.

Rent Administrator

Early enactment of the District rent-control bill seems to be assured by the unanimous vote of the Senate yesterday. To be sure, the Senate eliminated the only important amendment added on the floor of the House. But that amendment, sponsored by Representative Patman, would have crippled the proposed rent-control administration. The House adopted it hastily with only a handful of legislators on the floor. All the sponsors of the bill are antagonistic toward the Patman amendment. In these circumstances the House would be most ill-advised to cling to it. With a satisfactory bill thus apparently close to enactment, attention naturally centers on the appointment of a competent administrator. That responsibility has been placed on the District Commissioners. Some sponsors of the bill believed this post to be of such importance that it should be filled by a Presidential nominee. It was rightly left to the Commissioners because of its local character. But that in no way minimizes the importance of the office. Undoubtedly the Commissioners will wish to make the best selection possible to justify the increased authority which Congress is vesting in them.

It will not be an easy task to find an administrator who is thoroughly familiar with rental property in Washington and yet disinterested enough to serve the public in this position. But such a public servant must be found. The success of the rent-control system will depend in large measure upon the work of the administrator and his staff. Obviously he cannot be a partisan, for he must command the full confidence of the public. He should not be drawn from either landlord or tenant groups, yet should be acceptable to both. Indeed, the administrator ought to be chosen with all the care that goes into the selection of a judge. For his duties will be quasi-judicial, and thousands of citizens will have to rely upon his judgment for a fair adjustment of rents during this critical period. And, of course, he ought to be an able administrator to keep such an important system functioning smoothly. We hope the Commissioners are already combing a list of possible rent-control administrators with determination to find the best man in the city for that post.

Forward To Action

It is to be regretted that the vote in the House to free our merchant shipping was so narrow. A margin of only 18 votes will be held up in the totalitarian countries as an example of disunity among our people. But the disunity they will proclaim is merely the price and the glory of democracy, viz, the vote. Even Hitler is compelled to subscribe to a form of voting democracy when he feels the need for a popular affirmation of his acts. He has not done so lately, perhaps because the travesty of his 99 per cent majorities became too apparent even among the Germans themselves. Here in this country free and unfettered discussion prevails, and policy is determined by the free will of the people or their representatives. Our policy, in consequence, is the stronger in its execution. This is the point to stress about the action taken by the House yesterday.

Small as was the margin, the vote signified a great step forward in the effectuation of our anti-Hitler policy. Only a month ago the President had been advised that a request to Congress to free our merchant ships as well as to arm them would fail of assent. Accordingly he requested only permission to arm the ships. He did express the "hope" that the freeing of those ships would be accomplished, too. But the House merely consented to the request and ignored the hope. It was the Senate, spurred by an upsurge of popular demand expressed by the Willkie wing of the Republican Party, which took action on the President's hope. Now, with the House concurring with the Senate, a step has been taken which a short month ago seemed impossible.

Admittedly the awakening of America to the danger of Hitlerism has been slow. But this step is a sign that the tempo of the awakening is becoming very fast. The vote of the House yesterday marks the scrapping of a statutory neutrality which never existed either in our thoughts or our actions. It will thus give a consistency to our anti-Hitler policy. It will give to the President, moreover, a Congressional backing for the execution of that policy which has never been altogether certain. Even the isolationists, judging from their speeches during the debate, would acknowledge that there can now be no retreat from our committal to the defeat of Hitlerism.

The sight of an American flag in a belligerent port above a ship bearing our aid will be a most heartening sight for our fighting associates. They will see that we mean business. We must not disappoint them. If there is nothing more odious than a dead law, there is nothing more demoralizing than an irresolute policy. With his shackles off, the President can now go forward, and he can go forward only to win. As Mr. Justice Holmes said to President Wilson, "Mr. President, you're in a war. I've been in a war. There's only one thing to do in a war. Form your battalions and carry the fight to the enemy." For we shall never see the road to peace again till Hitlerism and all its stands for has been wiped out.

Attacking Inflation

In a letter to Chairman Doughton of the House Ways and Means Committee, President Roosevelt supported the Treasury's demands for immediate sharp increases in taxes to "counteract the inflationary pressures arising from the defense program." In reply Mr. Doughton properly stressed the importance of disposing of the price-control bill before considering the Treasury proposals. Unquestionably heavier taxes must eventually be imposed. For, at the present rate of spending, the deficit for the current fiscal year will amount to 12 billion dollars at least, and may go higher. However, further drastic increases in taxes designed to curb consumer spending would fail of their objective if Congress should refuse to establish an efficient system of direct price control over commodities. The two anti-inflation panaceas go together. Moreover, before applying the tax screws more vigorously, the pruning knife ought also to be applied to nondefense expenditures. For unless the President actively supports the movement to cut nondefense outlays substantially, he cannot expect wholehearted cooperation from the public in plans to step up taxes. It is thoroughly inconsistent to fight inflation by cutting down private spending while permitting nonessential government spending to continue.

In other words, inflation has to be fought on several fronts. Taxation is only one, albeit a very important, device for combating it. And, even admitting this, the problem of more taxation should be approached carefully. Congress should be wary of all proposals to increase payroll and income taxes before consumer spending habits have been adjusted to the latest increases. The President optimistically concludes that new taxes on payrolls and incomes could be imposed without increasing the cost of goods. But if the current suggestions for a pronounced boost in payroll levies, plus additional income taxes of 15 per cent, were to be approved, it is safe to guess that these taxes would be shifted in good part to other shoulders. For workers would unquestionably demand higher wages as an offset, and those wage increases would either have to be borne by employers or, more likely, be shifted to consumers in the form of higher prices.

Instead of limiting tax programs to the field of payroll and income taxes, Congress might well turn its attention to general sales-tax proposals. Such levies would, of course, increase the cost of goods, but by that token they would decrease the consumption of goods. And since each individual could adjust his expenditures to take account of sales taxes, there would be less disposition to rebel against them than against drastic increases in direct taxation.

Duty Of The House

Now that the momentous neutrality fight is over, the House may be expected to give closer attention to the case of Representative Hamilton Fish. Compared to the debate on arming ships and sending them with lend-lease goods to Great Britain, this case is of relatively little importance. Yet it has a significance far greater than any information Mr. Fish might give the special grand jury investigating Nazi activities in this country. The United States is still a Nation in which law is supreme. The question before the House is really whether or not it will recognize the orderly processes of the law involving its own members.

Of course, the House is jealous of all its privileges. It would be deeply concerned if a grand jury should attempt to encroach upon the prerogatives of its members. But the special grand jury has not done so. It has merely subpenaed Representative Fish to obtain information which it has good reason to believe is in his possession. A clerk in Mr. Fish's office has been indicted by the grand jury on charges of corrupt perjury. The Congressman's own statements have indicated that he has knowledge bearing on the case. Certainly this is no time for the House to stand upon assumed privileges to prevent the grand jury from getting the information it needs. In a democracy the lawmakers cannot hold themselves above the law without generating contempt for the system which they operate.

No doubt the Judiciary Committee will soon report that no rights or privileges of the House would be infringed by Mr. Fish in answering the subpena. For the precedents are clear in this matter. A member of Congress has no special immunity from being summoned as a witness or even from arrest in criminal cases. But, aside from the technicalities, the House has a great responsibility in a case of this kind. The Department of Justice and the grand jury are making a sincere and conscientious effort to protect the United States from the intrigue of Nazi agents attempting to influence our international policy in this hour of crisis. The solemn obligation of the House and all its members to cooperate in this undertaking, when their assistance is asked, is no less clear-cut than was its obligation to amend the Neutrality Act yesterday. Surely the House will not follow up that vote by sabotaging an investigation of Nazi agents!

Tops

Once more, by consensus of the sports writers, Joe DiMaggio has been designated the most valuable player in the American League. It is the second time in three years that he has been given this recognition, and it is hard to see how it could have been given to any other—to Ted Williams, for example—except on some principle of rotation of honor. In the season lately ended The DiMag eclipsed the records of George Sisler and Willie Keeler for base hits in consecutive games, in itself a sufficient guarantee of immortality. Even before that he was the acknowledged peer of Ruth, Cobb and Speaker, and a pedestal has long been reserved for him in the Valhalla of great outfielders.

A week earlier the sports writers had designated Mr. Dolf Camilli as the National League's most valuable player. Undoubtedly he was. Mr. Camilli's behavior in the World Series was, to be sure, something of a disappointment to his colleagues. All the same, if it had not been for Mr. Camilli's virtuosity at the bat and in the field, there would have been no World Series for Brooklyn at all. The Latin genius, certainly, is beginning to assert itself in baseball with the same assurance and the same classical grandeur that it has exhibited in the other arts.

President Vs. People

Despite the repeated attempts of President Roosevelt to make it appear that "the American people have made an unlimited commitment that there shall be a free world . . ." and that they favor the all-out defeat of Hitler, such statements by the President are absolutely untrue. Neither the people nor their Congress have authorized any such policy. In fact, many citizens admit, including even Dorothy Thompson, that they do not know what the Administration's foreign policy is. Thus, amending of the Neutrality Act by the Senate is not evidence of public support for more warlike action. It is evidence of the effectiveness of the New Deal's political pressure, coercion and handouts in securing the subservience of Senators and Representatives.

However, such incidents as Roosevelt's billion-dollar gift to Russia (pleasing, no doubt, to his Communist supporters), the demand for five billion dollars more taxes and the sacrifice of American seamen's lives should make clear to all Americans the catastrophic disaster into which the New Deal policies are plunging them.

Much of the soaring spending, ostensibly for lend-lease, is actually an insane attempt to buy world support for international New Dealism for which the American people are to be bankrupted. Any all-out effort to crush the Axis will necessitate a huge American expeditionary force and the loss of thousands of American boys. And Government controls now threatened will utterly destroy our boasted freedom.

S. F. MORSE.

Relations With Japan

A bare 19 years have gone by since the great earthquake in Japan destroyed many lives in Tokyo and other cities. The American public rushed to the aid of the Japanese people. For many years the United States has bought a large share of the silk made in Japan. Measure the above by the standard of aid or business given by Italy or Germany for the same purpose and we don't have to go far to see which nation rendered the best values over the years.

Peace is what the American people desire but, in the Southwest, not at any price. Years back when our Government talked of placing better fortifications in Alaska or Guam or any other of our possessions, the Japanese government wailed "This will be considered by us as an unfriendly act," and our lawmakers just pigeonholed the idea and nothing was done about it. Just another way of appeasement.

We down here have always thought first of peace, but at all times we feel that if our Government wants to fortify any part of our mainland or islands, anywhere, at any time, it is nobody else's business.

C. E. GRAVES.

Finland's Status

It is time that we exposed the myth of "Peaceful, Democratic Little Finland." It really is the partner of Nazi Germany—the same Nazi Germany that has already taken the lives of American sailors. We cannot escape the fact that any ally of Nazi Germany is an enemy to the forces fighting nazism and an enemy to us. We cannot give Finland any other treatment than that we give to Fascist Italy.

Defense Volunteers

In The Post November 8 an article with large headlines, "Housekeeping Registrants Unresponsive," makes me wonder if it was not a little unfair to the women of Washington who have been doing defense work since March 8 of this year, inspecting rooms for rent. These women are not wearing uniforms or badges, but they have faithfully continued their work each week, regardless of the heat of summer or the many other more interesting and spectacular projects they might have joined.

I think that one of the reasons for the continued efforts of this small group, was the inspiring talk of Mrs. Roosevelt, who told them how important it was for the people coming here to work to have a decent place to live, and that the listing and inspection of rooms was one of the best ways we could help the defense worker to do good work. I believe there has been registered over 5,000 rooms, and these have all been inspected by volunteer workers. This means driving your own car, parking it after getting as near as possible, many times climbing three flights of stairs, and getting all the information necessary from each home. Because of this work, strangers coming to Washington have been able to go to the office, and find out exactly what kind of a room they would get, where restaurants would be located near the home, what transportation, size of room, etc.

ONE OF THE HOUSEKEEPERS.

Preventive Medicine

Thank you for your editorial on the monstrously neglected subject of "Preventive Medicine," and in which you say: "Still the task of shifting the major emphasis of medical science to the preventive side of medicine remains to be achieved. Perhaps there would be more progress if the work were directed and encouraged by the doctors themselves."

The question sadly crying for an answer in this connection is: How to motivate doctors to teach themselves out of a job? For that is what it would mean, theoretically, at least. The other unanswered question is: How many doctors can agree on a truly fundamental analysis of pathology and therefore how many have a thesis worth teaching?

There are two billion human "machines" operating on this planet, all of them built after the same pattern. It ought not to be so difficult to determine how to keep these "machines" properly fueled, cleaned and oiled up and to teach their owners how to keep them in good running order themselves. Apart from the fact that everything has its "weakest link" the only thing that differentiates these "machines" one from another is the mental element which, in this case, is a pretty big factor and is the principal point where friction enters the "machinery." But recognizing this element for what it is in its relation to health, it should be possible to treat it in such a way as to keep a great deal of friction from entering.

Coast Guard Transfer

Recently the Commander In Chief of the Navy directed the United States Coast Guard to be transferred under the jurisdiction of the Navy Department.

This is a commendable move!

Aside from the fact that the United States Coast Guard has 14 other duties to perform, among which are the protection of public property and the rendering of assistance to vessels in distress, there is another important factor to carefully consider.

For example, it has been repeatedly pointed out that an independent air force is more efficient as a single unit, especially during time of war. An independent air force is construed to mean the combined air forces of both Army and Navy operating jointly under one command.

The Coast Guard and the Navy combined properly constitute a single unit, inasmuch as it is already an established fact that Coast Guard regulations require it to become part of the Navy during wartime, or whenever the President finds it expedient so to direct.

A permanent coalition would serve the public interest, since blanket appropriations could then be made to include the specific requirements of the Coast Guard in line with the performance of its special duties.

FRANK J. SALAMON.

Strategy For War

We have served notice on the Axis that we are determined to see this through. We have regained freedom of the seas, for over 100 years our basic foreign policy.

We know that Germany will shoot at our ships anyway. We did not expect Hitler to back down because of another isolationist defeat.

We have not been neutral in this war at any time. Yet the isolationists will go on talking and acting as though we were. Arguments are raised against our declaring war for practical and moral reasons. But they are outweighed by present realities.

The most important factor is time. Hitler's victories have been over those nations that waited too long. Had Russia declared war a year ago, Hitler would have had his dreaded two-front war. Today even Britain can only hold her own shores.

Russia cannot be considered Hitler's Waterloo. Her counterattacks are wonderful but indecisive. Should Hitler retreat, Russia will quit and take years for rebuilding.

Britain will then be the only fighter left, although a good one; but she is still on the defensive. We know what Hitler can do to nations on the defensive.

If we do not declare war, the United States will ultimately have a two-front war; if we do declare war, Hitler will have it. Common sense dictates our choice. Strategy for war is safer than maneuvers for peace.

Hold That Tiger

The Post Impressionist

Pop

I am not sure just when I became aware of my father. No doubt, at some point in the foggy mists of childhood I discovered that the unquestioned king of our little realm was a short, powerful man with the voice of a Stentor commanding the waves. That impression has changed. I have seen him become gray and old. And age does not rest lightly with him.

Pop would be slightly ridiculous alongside Clarence Day's father. While Mr. Day's respected, if benighted parent is gently satirized, his position as a moderately wealthy, socially secure member of what is pleased to call itself society, is never challenged. Probably Day fils never meant to infer that there were millions like Day pere. In fact, the old boy was almost inimitable. At any rate, I think my dad is a more representative 1941 specimen. In all fairness to the delightfully balmy Days, my father might not have been representative in 1890.

You see, Pop left the olive orchards and lemon groves of Sicily at about the same time that Mr. Day was bellowing at the antics of his unpredictable family. My dad came over, steerage of course, on the Amerigo Vespucci, named for an earlier Italian immigrant. He had less than $25 in his aged jacket and the fresh assurance and brashness of the young and unknowing challenging the unknown. He spoke no English; even his Italian was that dubious, barbaric mixture, the Sicilian dialect. He was unable to read or write even that. What an ineffable mixture of ignorance and courage!

So Pop left the warmth and the "dolce far niente" of San Giuseppe, and after a tortuous journey in which he and the other paesani drank more vino rosso than was good for them, the rickety Amerigo Vespucci docked in New York City. At first Pop was bewildered by the city but, of course, undaunted. Within a day he found quarters in what he still calls "Sabett Stritt" (accent on the ultimate). He won't admit it, but I think Pop rather welcomed that incessant Latin babble of Elizabeth and adjoining streets. Even now he speaks of the neighborhood with a fondness bordering on nostalgia.

Well, Pop had a strong back and big arms. He had no trouble finding work. For a while he worked on the streets with a pick and shovel. Through a friend, a conductor no less! he had met the precinct leader, a countryman, and he was soon working for the city. Make the most of that, you reform politicians!

After a while Pop became aware that America was more than just New York. In a year or so he had picked up a bit of the English language. He butchered it horribly gesticulating for unneeded emphasis. The fact that he punctuated it with eloquent and startling obscenities bothered him not at all. He may not have been aware of it. Anyhow, he heard tell of far-off parts where labor was needed and rewards were rich.

I suppose today it is bad taste to refer to the pirates, the sanctimonious brigands of that age who raped America's wealth with impunity, often with accolades. Nonetheless, it was they who owned and employed; besides, my father was too interested in keeping sturdy body and soul together to be very much concerned with social injustice. He was shipped to a West Virginia town where the company was deified and the foremen apostolized. In these surroundings there was little hope for the naive, illiterate immigrants who manned the mines. He was fortunate, at that. He was not killed or maimed in cave-ins. Many of his friends were less lucky.

Aside from the back-breaking Stygian work and the parsimony of the operators, Pop wanted to move on. Essentially, the Sicilian, be he Archimedes or Pirandello, is a peasant, with all the love of land that the word implies. He needs the feel of his own grass, the smell of his goats, his stables. That describes Pop.

His search for greener vineyards took him to Ohio, where the Erie was offering $1.10 a day. What normal man could not have his de Nobile and his silk striped shirt on Saturday nights with that princely stipend. So Pop stayed on and, miracle of miracles, bought his house, and barn and goats. And paid for them! He still lives there. He has his "pasta con aglio ed olio" and his diurnal quart of wine

Armistice Day was his birthday. It was also the birthday of another, a lesser Italian, Victor Emanuel III, King of Italy—King, as Pop says, by grace of that arch-imbroglione, Benito Mussolini. Quite a character, my Pop. He didn't read my birthday card. He still can't. But he drank that bottle of wine, and at one sitting, too. I'll bet Day's old man, for all his virile "damns," couldn't do that.

C. & O. Danger

The historic Chesapeake & Ohio Canal along the Potomac is a deathtrap for innocent pleasure seekers, and all who have been injured by falling into its empty 20-foot depth, and those who will be hurt or killed in the future may blame the United States Government for their misfortune.

The young man who was so seriously and painfully injured in the canal lock at Seneca last Saturday night did not "lose his balance," as your reporter assumed in Sunday's edition, but walked directly into it, the darkness preventing him from seeing the peril ahead. And he is not the first, I am told, to suffer at this and other treacherous spots along the canal.

The Government has provided fine picnic and recreation areas at Seneca and other locations, but has left the empty canal locks without railings or warning signs to protect those who seek to take advantage of its hospitality. Isn't the safety of human lives worth a few dollars of public funds?

The Crisis For Labor

By Ernest Lindley

Defense Mediation Board Defects

FROM THE BEGINNING, the Defense Mediation Board has been highly favorable to labor. It has recognized that national policy, set forth in the National Labor Relations Act, is to encourage the growth of collective bargaining between employers and genuine unions. It has recognized that with expanding production and rising profits, many wage increases are justified. But it has gone beyond that. Its assignment is to stop or prevent strikes in industries or plants important to defense. It does not include, for example, appraising the effect of wage increases on costs to the Government or on the general price level.

LINDLEY

Coldly viewed, some of the Mediation Board's decisions look as if they were based simply on the belief that it is easier to preserve peace by making the employer give way than by resisting the demands of organized labor. By and large, organized labor has got most of what it asked for, although usually not quite all.

Now, because the United Mine Workers were not awarded the last job, their representatives resign from the Mediation Board. It is true that the argument for a closed shop was about as strong in the case of the captive coal mines as it can ever be made. About 95 per cent of the workers already belong to the union. In several mines the percentage is 97 and 98, and the lowest is only about 80. Moreover, the union already has the check-off for its members.

THE MAJORITY of the Mediation Board recognized the strength of the argument for the closed shop in this case. They recommended that the nonunion workers join the union, at least for the duration of the contract. In effect, they expressed regret that the steel companies had not seen fit to grant the closed shop. They balked simply at using the influence of the Government in behalf of a closed shop to the extent of making a formal award. They pointed out that the union is in no danger from absence of a closed shop. Yet the president of the C. I. O. and the secretary-treasurer of the United Mine Workers resign in a huff.

In Administration circles there is difference of opinion as to whether Philip Murray and Thomas Kennedy resigned because they are afraid of John L. Lewis or because they lost their tempers. Some predict that after cooling off they will return. Others assert that Murray, whose vacillations have been disappointing on more than one occasion, has at last demonstrated that he lacks the strength of character to be a labor leader in his own right; that he has shown he cannot cut the apron strings tying him to Lewis.

IF LEWIS decides to abide by the Mediation Board's decision, he leaves Murray and Kennedy looking rather ridiculous. If he decides to defy it, he almost guarantees that legislation will be passed restricting the right to strike. He almost guarantees also that in the course of quieting turmoil the Federal Government will be forced, in the public interest, to resort to the breaking of unions if they follow leadership which puts a narrow question of union standing or prestige above the security of the United States.

At present 23 C. I. O. unions are holding strikes in abeyance pending mediation by the Defense Mediation Board. Five other cases are pending—four involving A. F. of L. unions and one an independent union. The chances are remote of getting another Federal mechanism for handling strikes which is as favorable to organized labor as the Defense Mediation Board is.

THE PRESENT CRISIS underlines also certain basic defects in the Defense Mediation Board's structure and policies. The first is the presence of representatives of labor and industry. As was pointed out in this column six months ago, the Government's leading experts in mediation felt that the board should be composed entirely of neutral persons. Employer and employe representatives are desirable on boards of arbitration where detailed binding decisions are handed down. Alternatively, on the Mediation Board they could have been useful as advisers formulating a set of principles to guide the board. But the day by day work of mediation is best performed by neutral parties—representing in this instance only the Government of the United States.

The mediation board under the Railway Labor Act is composed entirely of neutral persons, and is the fact-finding board which the President is empowered to appoint, and did, in the current threatening railroad strike. If the Defense Mediation Board had been made up entirely of neutral persons, Murray and Kennedy could not have threatened to disrupt it by resigning.

The second main defect is the absence of an agreement on major policies. As was suggested also six months ago, such an agreement should prohibit use of the strike to enforce the closed shop during the defense emergency.

Whatever happens to the Defense Mediation Board, the period of free sway is ending for labor leadership which does not put the national interest first. The real question is whether organized labor, with the help of the Administration, will be able to hold its gains and extend them at a normal pace, or whether an enraged public will take away much that the labor unions have won, and if they act wisely, deserve to keep.

Princeton, N. J., Nov. 13.—With a special envoy from Japan on his way to Washington to discuss American-Japanese relations, the attitude of the American public toward Japan is less belligerent than in recent weeks, but is still far from conciliatory. The majority of voters polled in a public opinion survey are in favor of taking steps to prevent Japan from becoming more powerful, even if this means risking war in the Orient.

However, fewer voters favor such a course today than did in September.

Institute polls have indicated that the public's attitude toward Japan was highly critical as long as a year ago, when 90 per cent of voters in the United States felt the Government should clap an embargo on all sales of gasoline and other war materials to Japan.

The latest poll on the Far Eastern crisis indicates that public opinion in this country will likely support the Administration if it refuses to accept Japanese demands for hegemony in Asia.

The Institute poll was conducted on the following issue:

"Should the United States take steps now to prevent Japan from becoming more powerful, even if this means risking war with Japan?"

Mrs. Roosevelt And Labor

IN COMMON with many of my fellow citizens I often wonder whether Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt is naive or crafty, and this puzzlement is aroused again by an observation published in a recent installment of her syndicated diary:

"I wonder," Mrs. Roosevelt wrote, "how many of my readers are familiar with a bill now in Congress that requires private employment offices to pay a registration fee and file with the Secretary of Labor information about their ownership and income. Because of the defense effort, this bill is important to employes and employers. Some private agencies have indulged in reprehensible practices. This bill would protect the good agencies and make it difficult for the others to feather their nests at the expense of employer and employe."

REPREHENSIBLE practices, eh? This lady can recognize such reprehensible practices by private employment agencies, some of which are gyps playing both ends against the middle, but not yet in the presence of the most brutal and corrupt shakedown of the common man that has come to light in our time can Mrs. Roosevelt convince herself that union racketeers have been extorting millions of dollars from needy and deserving American citizens, most of them natives, as the price of jobs on war projects.

It is not that evidence of them has been lacking or obscure. The evidence was presented in dramatic style to Mrs. Roosevelt personally one day when she appeared before a Congressional inquiry into this robbery and was told of the testimony of a previous witness, a woman, mother of a destitute migrant family, who said her husband, an electrician, had been barred from a fine job because he lacked $200 for his initiation fee. Mrs. Roosevelt brushed that instance off with the remark that she thought it must have been an exceptional case. But it wasn't exceptional; it was typical, as she could have learned by reading a few pages of the record of this and other investigations and some of the many letters of protest which must have come to her, as they have come to me, from desperate and angry victims of such robbery.

ELSEWHERE Mrs. Roosevelt often has inveighed against racial discrimination in employment. Particularly on Government works in connection with the war effort, and I have agreed with her as, I suppose, most other Americans do. But though she condemns discrimination on account of race she has certainly condoned, and, in my interpretation, has indorsed, the cruelest and most arbitrary and avaricious discrimination against thousands of individual workers, regardless of race or religion, who happened not to belong to unions or lacked the money or had too much spirit to join under compulsion.

These, too, were victims of discrimination, and the mother of the family of tin can tourists who preceded her before the committee had presented a specific case of discrimination under very pathetic conditions. The husband and father was a good workman, the committee was told, and wanted to work and needed the job, but was turned off and forced to accept a job at much lower wages in an unskilled craft.

THE UNSPEAKABLE RACKET known as the hod carriers' union, which only recently, and then under the goad of publicity, held its first convention in 30 years—and a fake convention, at that—has robbed countless families of eating dollars as the price of jobs on war plants. Infested with racketeers of the most vicious stripe, giving no coherent account of its vast loot extorted from the unskilled, strong-back types, this union smells of nepotism in its higher official ranks and, in its locals around the country, has turned men out of their jobs after they had paid for them through the initiation fee and taken on other suckers by the same process. But Mrs. Roosevelt wouldn't know about that. Nor, apparently, has Mrs. Roosevelt heard of the enormous graft gathered by the carpenters' locals and, indirectly by the international, through a similar process.

There are many bills in Congress which would compel such rackets "to file with the Secretary of Labor information about their ownership," and many of them are literally owned by the boss unioneers in control, and about "their income," but Mrs. Roosevelt appears to be unaware of these proposals or of the extortions and other abuses which have made them necessary. A word from Mrs. Roosevelt would help, and a word from the President would practically compel the passage of laws which would stop such "reprehensible practices" and "protect the good" unions and "make it difficult for the others to feather their nests at the expense of employer and employe," but Mrs. Roosevelt is silent on that point.

I said at the start that I often wonder whether Mrs. Roosevelt is naive or crafty. That was just a way of speaking. Mrs. Roosevelt gets about; she knows the facts, and nobody can be that naive.

Inventors And War

By Frank Short

One Removable Bottleneck

A SAYING attributed to the Chinese puts the situation this way: "One picture is worth 10 thousand words."

Where mechanical inventions are concerned one might safely say, "One working model is worth 10 times 10 thousand words." For few indeed are there, even among technically trained men, who can visualize with justice to the invention the possibilities that lie therein, when given only a drawing and description.

Contrary to popular opinion, the Army is as zealous a guardian of the taxpayers' interests in time of peace as it is of the country in time of war. Funds doled out to the Army for equipment and training in time of peace are carefully expended and scrupulously accounted for. Scandal in Army funds is practically unheard of. And funds for development work to prepare for new conditions of warfare are so small that every dollar is examined on both sides before it is allotted to a job—and the job is so thoroughly scrutinized that an undertaking which carries even a normal likelihood of failure is not likely to be allotted a cent. Funds are so few that the Army cannot afford to make even the normal mistakes inherent in the development of anything new.

Long years of operation on this starvation basis has so conditioned the outlook on the invention-handling question that its mental attitude carries over into the war period—when funds are available, lavishly. If an invention is presented that might do something important, but nothing like it has ever been tried, that is a big risk for the taxpayers' money and the proposal cannot be entertained. The Army says to the inventor, "You take the initial risk—bring us a working model and we will test it out."

Just there is a rub. Few inventors are rich—most are distinctly on the poor side. (Inventing is great fun, but it is awfully expensive!) And the inventor can only say, "I haven't got the money."

So there it rests. The Army is willing to try it, but nobody is able or willing to build it to try. We can't make hay until the sun shines a little on the inventor!

The inventor may take it to a commercial concern and try to interest them in risking the model-building expense. But most concerns cannot see how it will repay them for the risk.

First—it may not work.

Second—the Army and Navy may not want it even if it does.

Third—there is no other prospective buyer. So the conservative management says, "No, it looks interesting but the commercial risks are too great to warrant our spending money on it."

At intervals, about as frequent as the proverbial blue moon, the inventor can get an individual with money to gamble on such a thousand to one shot. Why—you may not believe it—a disinterested desire to serve the country! In such rare cases, the model will be built, will get a test, and will fare according to its merits.

But that still leaves a very large majority of promising ideas suspended in mid air, not able to ascend to a class admittedly workable nor to come down to earth in the form of a working model ready to try.

ASSUMING that the mental attitude mentioned above were to change, we still have a high barrier left in the path of an untried invention. For the Army personnel engaged in technical work involved in inventions are so driven by the great task of ironing out the difficulties of production and supply inherent in our present rearmament program that they have not the free time or freedom of mind required to consider new things on a wholesale scale. Government facilities are already overtaxed and could not take on model-building. Any officers assigned to this work would be wide open to censure if they were to hand out sums to inventors to make their own models—and can you imagine the pressure they would be under? Day and night, from all points of the compass, the personnel involved would be besieged.

IN ALL this discussion we have neglected the Government organization set up to consider the inventions that come in from the laymen—the National Inventors Council. At the head of this organization are men of developmental background, from industry, of Nation-wide reputation, above any suspicion of self-interest in their task, and enjoying the complete confidence of the public. Supporting them is a staff of highly competent technical men, specialized in background, and divided into groups which are admirably set up for this job of analyzing and sifting the promising ideas from the hopeless. In the past year they have culled out about one thousand hopeful ideas from the 25,000 submitted. But they are not empowered to do anything more with these selected inventions than to submit them, in turn, to the Military or Naval establishments. The mortality is around 99 per cent at this point.

There must be in that 99 per cent inventions of importance. It is more than likely that these—rejected, many of them, because they are too radical—contain the few radically new inventions that are capable of exerting a real influence upon the outcome of the war. As a nation, we cannot afford to put these on the shelf. In justice to ourselves we must risk some thousands of dollars out of the multi-billion armament program to try out some of these radical inventions.

Government facilities are overcrowded. Commercial concerns cannot take the risk, private individuals able and willing are rare enough to be museum pieces. How can this task then be accomplished?

Suppose we expand the functions of the National Inventors Council and give them funds to spend for the purpose? How would that work?

An inventor would submit his idea in the usual manner for consideration—it is analyzed and found promising. But to show the armed forces what it can do, a working model is required for their test. Periodically, at the board meeting of the National Inventors Council, a modest number of the most promising inventions would be selected which the board unanimously agrees should be followed through to a conclusion. A new branch of the N. I. C. would be set up to estimate the cost of making the model and to supervise the work sufficiently to prevent waste in the expenditure of funds by the inventor in making the selected model. The N. I. C. then grants the inventor the required sum (providing he has a suitable background to competently oversee the construction of his model) and the inventor places with one of the small shops which are now being starved out of existence by priorities, the contract for the required model. The inventor supervises the work sufficiently close to be sure that the model produced represents fairly a working model of his invention.

No one has so much interest in the successful performance of such a working model as the inventor himself. No one is as anxious to have it completed and tried promptly. Under the double scrutiny of the inventor and the new branch of the N. I. C., the model should be completed as promptly as is humanly possible and as inexpensively. No one, however, should have the power to add to or to subtract from the funds available for any given model as the circumstances may dictate. The inventor, if he sacrifices otherwise gainful time of his own, should be compensated at his normal rates so that he is not called upon to undergo hardship during the process.

Upon completion, the model is tried by the armed forces and is taken up or rejected in accordance with its merits. The inventor knows, from personal supervision of the model-building, that the latter fairly represents his invention—even if so inclined he would not be able to contend that others had mutilated his idea and that it should be tried again with a differently constructed model. The technical personnel of the armed forces can see exactly what it does—and if that is important enough, they will undoubtedly carry on from there. In many cases, the function performed holds promise enough to warrant perfecting the invention, in order to have it safely listed in the military "bag of tricks"—ready to produce, not just gathering age in a filing cabinet.

The details of this perfecting process may be handled in any one of several ways. If an urgently needed invention is turned up in this process, the armed forces themselves may wish to take over from then on. Or, they may place a contract with a commercial concern or with the inventor. Or, again, the National Defense Research Committee is admirably organized for furthering such a development, once the military authorities have said "O. K."

BUT does not this method subject the Board of the National Inventors Council to the same pressure for the development of everyone's bright idea? Yes and no. Anyone in the employ of the Government, such as an officer, is in theory an employe of the Congress, and, for all practical purposes, of the whole political family that may be in power at the time. They are under the "Sword of Damocles" at all times. Most of them need their jobs to support their families. You will admit that under these conditions it is extremely difficult to say flatly: "No."

The members of the National Inventors Council are on a wholly different footing. They are giving their time to the Government—they do not need their jobs. The whole of Government can apply pressure and still they are free to say: "No."

Besides this, they come from industry—have been used to spending small and large sums to back their judgment on things new, and can afford to admit betting on the wrong horse now and then. They are used also to pushing things through in any way that seems best, regardless of the rules and regulations that may have been set up to govern more routine matters. Pressure will be applied—have no doubt of that. It is characteristic of the inventor to believe wholeheartedly in his invention; otherwise he could never push anything through to completion. And it would not be unreasonable of the board to decline to accept such an additional burden.

Organized — functioning with high efficiency as far as it is permitted to go—the National Inventors Council has the personnel who could do this job well. A slight, swift change in its paper set-up—plus Government authority and funds—and it is ready to do this vital, neglected task. Let's get going!

Neutrality Policy Motives

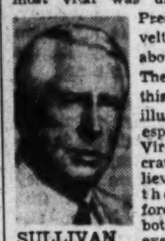
By Mark Sullivan

Congress Fears Encroaching Executive Powers

FOR OPPOSITION in Congress to repeal of neutrality, there were several motives. Of them all, the most vital was disapproval of President Roosevelt's attitude about strikes. The strength of this motive was illustrated by two especially able Virginia Democrats. Both believe strongly in the President's foreign policy; both voted for every step of it. But both came to the end of the road, for an identical reason.



SULLIVAN

Senator Harry F. Byrd, when the measure was in that body, said: "We have menaces at home as great or greater than those abroad, and these home menaces must be dealt with before we can hope to cope with the others." Representative Howard W. Smith said, in the House: "I cannot find it in my conscience to vote for this kind of measure until we are prepared." And he added that he was "reluctantly forced to conclude" we will not be prepared until the President is willing to act about strikes.

There were other motives for opposition. The number whose motive was outright isolation, who wished to preserve the extreme Neutrality Act as it stood, was comparatively small. There were some who opposed repeal because they feel the President is taking the country into war by indirection, and by steps of his own without sanction by Congress—in the debate the word "subterfuge" was occasionally used. But it was the strike motive that counted. The number and character of those who opposed for this motive gave justification and color to men who opposed for other motives. But for the strike factor, the majority for repeal of neutrality would have been substantially as great as the majorities Woodrow Wilson had for his resistance to Germany 24 years ago.

IT WAS all very well to say, as was said over and over, in effect: "First things first—repeal the Neutrality Act, and then act about strikes." But those who resisted this advice knew what they were doing; some knew clearly, others instinctively. They felt, whether mistakenly or not, that there is a domestic peril comparable to the danger from abroad.

The motive for opposition to repeal of neutrality was commonly spoken of as disapproval of the President's attitude about strikes. But the motive was broader. Senator Byrd expressed it accurately when he spoke of it as "menaces at home." The menace, as felt by those who feared it, could be expressed thus: That for defense against war, great powers are being granted to the Executive, including powers having to do with labor; that these powers are being used in such a way as to set up what was called in the debate a "labor government;" that these powers, as used, may result in a permanent change in American society, including an increase of centralized power in the Executive, a reduction of the power of Congress.

FOR MORE than a year, Congress has wanted to legislate about labor. Congress felt that the original Wagner Labor Relations Act had been interpreted by the original labor board in ways that Congress never contemplated. To remedy this, the House, in June, 1940, passed amendments to the Labor Act, by a vote of more than 2 to 1. For largely the same purpose, to restrain excessive use of power by both the labor board and other executive agencies, the House passed, by a vote of more than 3 to 1, the Walter-Logan Act. Both these measures were prevented from final enactment by the Administration and its friends in Congress.

When a new Congress came into being last January, it was disposed to act upon these measures again. But friends of the Administration in Congress took the position that there should be no legislation about labor, except such as the President initiated or approved in advance. At all times, there has been in Congress an overwhelming majority favoring legislation about strikes. At all times action upon such measures has been prevented by deference of leaders to the President.

Meanwhile, Congress has seen agencies of the Administration take steps and adopt policies which nine-tenths of Congress does not approve. Congress has seen a Presidential appointee, Mr. Sidney Hillman, himself a labor leader by career, assume control of labor relations in defense industries. Congress has seen Mr. Hillman adopt a policy of giving defense construction contracts only to such contractors as employ American Federation of Labor workers. Congress has seen a committee of the Senate investigate a conspicuous case, in which Mr. Hillman prevented award of a contract to the lowest bidder, solely for the reason that the bidder did not employ A. F. of L. labor. The Senate has heard the chairman of its investigating committee condemn Mr. Hillman's action in strong unqualified words. But Congress has seen Mr. Hillman hold his ground, with Congress unable to do anything about it.

What the opponents of repeal of neutrality say, in effect, is: "We will not vote to give further war powers to the President until the President's appointees and agencies cease to use those powers, in domestic matters, in ways which Congress does not approve."

Search for Office Space Leads to Destruction of World War Draft Records

By Edward T. Folliard
Post Staff Writer

A veritable mountain of World War draft folders, containing the records of 21 million Americans who registered but were not inducted into the armed services in 1917-18, is being destroyed here.

It probably is the biggest destruction project of its kind in all history, and is a direct outgrowth of Uncle Sam's frenzied search for office space in Washington.

Looked at in one way, it is a case of removing one gigantic memento of the war against Kaiser Wilhelm to make room for the building of an Army which one day may move against Chancellor Hitler.

After the World War, the approximately 24,500,000 cover sheets containing the records of men who registered in 1917-18 were brought here to Washington from the various States and territories and stored at the Army War College, located on the Potomac.

They took up 20,000 four-drawer steel filing cabinets, which in turn took up seven large buildings on the War College grounds. The filing cabinets, if placed in a row, would stretch 50 miles, or, if grouped as in an office, would sprawl over 10 acres. When the United States began to build its modern Army, Maj. Gen. Lesley J. McNair was named chief of staff of a new G.H.Q. His job was to train the new Army, to get it to its maximum peak of efficiency in the shortest possible time.

ARCHIVIST CONNOR

Gen. McNair and the G. H. Q. officers assigned to him set up their headquarters at the Army War College, and before long they were suffering from that common Washington ailment, lack of space.

The War Department made a survey, and found that seven buildings on the War College grounds were being used for storage of the World War draft records, 21 million of them, dealing with men who never served. If those seven buildings could be cleared, Gen. McNair's space problem would be solved.

The War Department asked the Archivist of the United States about it, and the Archivist, R. D. W. Connor, assigned experts to examine the records and make a report. Thereafter Archivist Connor recommended to Congress—specifically to the Joint Committee on the Disposition of Executive Papers—that the War Department be given authority to dispose of the records. In July Congress passed a bill to extend such authority.

For a time, there seemed nothing to do but burn the records. Ultimately, however, arrangements were made to haul the filing cases to the new National Guard Armory, the huge structure just north of the District Jail that is now nearing completion.

Here in the armory the big records-destroying project is being carried out by the Army and the District of Columbia WPA. Capt. Bernard V. Merrick, of the Adjutant General's Department, is supervising the job for the War Department, and H. A. Dorn is supervisor of the 100 WPA clerks who are segregating the folders of the 21 million registrants who did not serve from the 3,500,000 who did. The folders of these latter men are not to be destroyed.

Large as the armory is it is not large enough to hold all the filing cases involved. A good part of these are stored down at Fort Washington, some of them in the old casemates. These are brought to the armory by five Army trucks as fast as the WPA workers are ready for them.

After the papers have been segregated, those marked for destruct on are turned over to a contractor. In the basement, the contractor has set up a machine with a huge blade which chops up the papers and thus prevent a leak of information always considered confidential, information dealing with the registrant's physical condition and dependents.

The paper then is salvaged, and helps make up for a growing paper shortage in the United States.

MAJ. GEN. McNAIR

Supervisor Dorn points out that 55 per cent of his WPA workers are more than 50 years of age, and he says that their patience, diligence and efficiency demonstrate that there is a place in the emergency for older workers, who would be turned down by the Civil Service and by private industry. Capt. Merrick joins in praising the WPA clerks.

As for the records that are gradually disappearing, certain individuals doubtless will be glad to know that they are gone.

Insurance companies, on the other hand, will be sorry to see the records destroyed, for in the last 23 years they have often made use of them. In his report to Congress, however, Archivist Connor said that the three Government departments most concerned—the Social Security Board and the Immigration and Naturalization Service of the Department of Justice—had said that they would not be inconvenienced if the records were destroyed.

Maude and Andy, Who Sell You Papers, Disagree on Headline Sales Psychology

By Bill Brinkley
Post Staff Writer

A striking demonstration of the two extremes in salesmanship, known informally as the Go-get-em and Let-em-come-to-you types, may now be seen at Fourteenth and E Streets Northwest.

"They're beatin' the hell outa Hitler," Maude Mayola Jones, the little newsie with the blue shawl around her grayish hair, yells out in Texas twang on the northwest corner.

Across the way, on the northeast corner, 65-year-old John Paul Muth, better known as Andy Gump, sits philosophically on his box pushing his lips out and then under, but keeping them closed.

Andy's selling the same papers that Maude, who is 58, is. The difference is that in salesmanship, Maude's an extrovert, while Andy's at least a partial introvert. Maude's a part-Cherokee-Indian Texan and hasn't been here long. Andy, a Washingtonian, has been selling papers on this corner for a quarter-century. Maybe that explains something. The competitors speak when they pass, but don't know each other well.

First thing Maude does on getting newspapers is to read all the front-page stories and put her own headlines on them. There is one rule in her stylebook: Hitler must get it in the neck.

When a Nazi general was killed, passersby were soon hearing:

"Another Nazi General Shot! He's Tryin' to Take Charge o' Hell and Git the Demons to Make War on the Devils!"

If there's no news that socks it to der Feuhrer, Maude composes an editorial. "Hitler Wouldn't Make Good Meat for Buzzards," she yelled out one day. "Hitler's in a Submarine A-Wishin' a Whale Would Swoller Him Up," she boomed on another one.

She sings right on the corner, too, lyrics and music by herself. One song goes:

"There ain't a-gonna be, there ain't a-gonna be,
There ain't a-gonna be no Hitler.
No-o-o-o, No-siree,
There ain't a-gonna be no Hitler."

Although she has been selling papers only a month, Maude immediately puts herself on "us people" terms with all her customers.

An elderly lady asked for a certain paper. "I haven't got it right now, honey," she said. A big limousine pulled alongside and she bustled over to it, the snaps of her galoshes ringing like sleigh bells.

"All of them," the precisely dressed man snapped.

"I've just got three of them now, brother," she gave back, the wrinkles down her mouth pushing together like a friendly accordion.

Andy Gump has this same like for persons in common with his competitor, Maude. Neither is a respector of individuals and both get along equally well with the meek and the great. That, no doubt, is because both like people.

A businessman came along and whispered to Andy some joking insinuation about the newsie's regard for women. The man known as Gump whipped back an answer that it is too bad it cannot be printed here. The businessman got a tremendous wallop out of it.

About salesmanship methods Andy says:

"I can set right here on this box, let my old legs cramp, and sell as many papers as I can by jumping up and yelling."

"They're a-gonna git Hitler," a twangy voice sang across the street. "Old Hitler, meaner'n the devil himself."

SMA Stalls, Penny Milk Plan Waits

By Gerald G. Gross

Post Staff Writer

Strange are the ways of Government bureaus. For example, the Surplus Marketing Administration.

This unit of the Department of Agriculture is sponsoring 1-cent milk programs throughout the country for needy undernourished children. After more than a year's trial, it is convinced of the plan's soundness to the extent that Federally subsidized half-pints are growing in geographical scope.

Low cost milk, distributed either free or at a penny a bottle, to underfed boys and girls, is obviously a public health asset. It is, therefore, an important cog in civilian defense, which places stress on the population's health. In addition, it is a boon to the producer, since it provides for a higher price than would be paid if the milk were sold in Class 3 (surplus).

So Nothing Happens

So what? So when District authorities and welfare leaders see the potential value of penny half-pints for this city's thousands of ill-nourished children; when they organize to work for a local program; when they painstakingly draft a plan designed to benefit upward of 20,000 youngsters and still meet every Federal rule, and then, when they ask the SMA to look it over—just look it over informally—what happens?

Nothing.

Encouraged to prepare and submit a program, setting forth which schools in low-income areas shall receive the low-cost milk and presenting figures showing that the plan would boost consumption at least 270 per cent, a special city-wide committee named by the Board of Education has done so.

But the greater part of a week has passed and still the committee has received no reply to its modest request for an audience with someone in SMA who might point out the proposed plan's flaws, if any, so that it can be made shipshape in time for final action by the Board of Education at its meeting next Wednesday.

Days Are Being Wasted

The SMA perusal asked by the Board of Education committe can be accomplished in 30 minutes or less. Days are being wantonly wasted on account of a few minutes.

Dr. Frank W. Ballou, superintendent of schools, requested the favor last Saturday. His letter was addressed to O. M. Reed, chief of the SMA dairy division.

Reed was out of town the fore part of this week. On Wednesday the acting chief, Paul L. Miller, told a reporter action on the letter must await Reed's return.

Back at his desk yesterday, Reed said through a secretary—he was too busy to discuss the matter because he was preparing to leave the city.

Whereupon the reporter reached James D. LeCron, acting chief of the Surplus Marketing Administration. That official got Reed on the telephone and drew from him that, yes, the Ballou letter was duly noted and something would be done about it "very shortly." Or perhaps it was "quite soon."

Would Not Be Pinned Down

LeCron would not be pinned down to a definition of "very shortly," or even "quite soon." Mind you, what the SMA is being asked for is not a final commitment on a Washington penny half-pint project, but simply a few minutes of advice by Reed, or someone delegated by him.

Even if this assistance were granted today, it would be several weeks before 1-cent milk could become a reality here, assuming that SMA approves the application when it is finally submitted.

The Board of Education's special committee, headed by Robert L. Haycock, thought it was saving time by offering its program to the Federal bureau for analysis before recommending its adoption to the school board. This supposition seems to have misfired, no one having warned the committee that SMA might mistake the Ballou letter for an egg and try to hatch it in a filing cabinet incubator.

Kelly Orders Survey to Determine Worth of Accident-Prevention Unit

A "factual survey" to determine the worth of the police Accident Investigation Unit will begin this morning, Maj. Edward J. Kelly, superintendent of police, revealed yesterday.

Inspector Harvey G. Callahan, executive officer, and Milton D. Smith, former commander of the Traffic Division and now officer in charge of equipment and property, and Capt. Oscar J. Letterman of the Third Precinct were named by Kelly to conduct the inquiry "as part of the department's rebuilding program."

Maj. Kelly added that he expects the three officials to recommend to him whether in their opinions the squad of 43 men "shall remain in existence."

Superintendent Kelly pointed out he is systematically investigating every Police Department squad and unit "to determine its worth."

Already he has reorganized the Homicide, Narcotic, Check and Fraud and Robbery Squads in the Detective Bureau and has appointed different commanding officers in 8 of the 13 precincts.

He expects in the near future to order a survey of the Traffic Bureau back inspector's office.

The Accident Investigation Unit, originally called the Accident Prevention Unit, was organized by Inspector Arthur E. Miller, inspector in charge of traffic, in September 1940.

He admitted yesterday that the unit has not produced the expected results but blamed its failure on two factors. He said the squad from the outset was not large enough and that it has not had the proper cooperation from the rest of the department.

Formation of the Accident Investigation Bureau was agreed upon by the Commissioners and Maj. Ernest W. Brown, former police superintendent, after Inspector Miller was a 62-man unit equipped with 10 traffic cars to investigate all traffic accidents 24 hours daily.

Afraid that the Commissioners would refuse to approve such a large squad, Maj. Brown asked for 40 men and 6 cars. This latter request was granted.

Because of this difference in personnel, Inspector Miller said yesterday, the unit has been able to investigate only between 60 and 70 per cent of local accidents rather than all of them.

For this reason, Miller declared, compilation of accurate statistics has been hampered and has prevented a thorough diagnosis of Washington traffic ills and the resultant remedial efforts.

Statistics show, however, according to Inspector Miller, that there has been consistent increases in both arrests and convictions of traffic law violators since the Accident Investigation Unit was formed.

Commissioner Young several times during the past six months has indicated skepticism regarding the worth of the unit and has said he thought there were "too many men investigating accidents which could be handled by precinct scout cars."

Radical treatment of Washington's traffic problem is necessary, Assistant Traffic Director M. O. Eldridge yesterday told the Federation of Churches' committee on civic affairs.

U. S. Defense Problems Rule Out Kitchen Waste

By Martha Ellyn
The Post Food Editor

EXTRAVAGANCE is a word that has been ruled out of the American kitchen. The problems arising out of national defense—increased food prices, a tax on favorite cosmetics, income taxes growing bigger and bigger, and the many other demands upon the pocketbook—make it imperative that the homemaker, who spends about 80 per cent of the family income, revert to her grandmother's thrifty ways.

Martha Ellyn

Not that extravagance has ever been the besetting sin of the cook, but at times the best utilization of food does not occur. There's many a way to preserve, conserve and deserve when it comes to the preparation of food. And it isn't such an unpleasant experience either in being thrifty, and following the "waste not, want not" adage. A feeling of pride comes with being able to accomplish much with little.

There may be arched eyebrows if you set a platter of hamburgers before the family, that is, if this meat has been made into uninteresting, round, overcooked cakes, with little or no seasoning. But try cooking the same hamburg in a ring mold, served on the prettiest platter, filled with creamed or mashed potatoes and flecked with a bit of parsley, and the dramatics will be sure to bring applause.

Save the Minerals

And then there is the matter of jackets—leaving the skins on vegetables and potatoes. In the case of the potato, boil the Irish ones in their skins—then you won't pare away the precious minerals that lie in the layer next to the skin. There's a saying, "A good cook is known by her boiled potatoes."

Baked potatoes, too, are a food that can be eaten to the last skin. To make the skins flexible and fit to eat they should be well brushed and dried, then rubbed with melted fat and baked slowly, about 50 to 60 minutes. You know some people eat the skins of baked potatoes because they like them, and others because of the valuable salts.

Apples should be pared in the same meticulous way, although there is many a dish that can be made from apples with the skins left on—fried apples and baked apples are examples. With apples so reasonably priced they should be used in a number of ways. The applesauce cake eaten by the midshipmen at Annapolis is a dessert that should not be overlooked.

Bread gives excellent returns in nutrition for the money spent. The ways that leftover and stale bread can be used are endless. Of special mention is that flavorsome and delicious dessert, bread pudding. Not the soggy, insipid type, but the kind that is a queen among puddings. It can be a caramel or a chocolate bread pudding and topped with a meringue if desired.

Easy on the Budget

Bread-made dishes are kind to the budget, for not only is bread itself economical, but very obligingly it makes other and more expensive foods go farther. Great as is this virtue, still more important is the fact that bread contributes valuable food essentials to the well-balanced meal. It supplies excellent energy-yielding carbohydrates, as well as proteins, which are economically supplemented by proteins supplied by meat, cheese, eggs, milk, fish and poultry.

Here are a few suggestions for bread-made dishes: French toast sandwich, creamed shrimp in buttercups, brown Betty, crumb macaroons. The recipe for bread pudding with meringue follows:

Bread Pudding With Meringue—Soak 5 cups diced bread for 15 minutes in 3 cups warm milk. Add ¼ teaspoon salt. Combine and beat well 3 egg yolks, ½ cup sugar, 1 teaspoon vanilla and ½ teaspoon nutmeg. Add ¼ cup raisins if desired. Pour these ingredients over the soaked bread. Stir them lightly with a fork until they are well blended. If you don't want to make a meringue on the pudding, whip the 3 egg whites and fold them in at this time, too. Place in a baking dish set in a pan of hot water in a moderate oven, 350 degrees, for about 45 minutes. Cool the pudding. Cover it with a meringue made with 3 egg whites, ¼ teaspoon salt, 6 tablespoons sugar and ½ teaspoon vanilla. Bake pudding in moderate oven, 300 degrees, until meringue sets—about 15 minutes. Serve with cream, hard sauce or fruit juice. If desired, a layer of jelly or stewed fruit may be placed between the pudding and the meringue.

Soups, too, fit well into the thrifty way of cooking. Sturdy vegetable soup, rich with flavor, is certainly a friend to both man and the cook. It was the New Englander who contributed the whole meal soup—chowder. A generous bowl of chowder, with crispy crackers, a vegetable salad rife with vitamins, a dessert and a beverage forms a meal that pleases. There are fish chowders and vegetable chowders. Corn chowder is a nutritious dish that should be given a place on menus frequently. Here is a recipe for making it.

Corn Chowder—Fry out 3 tablespoons diced fat salt pork. Add 1 sliced onion and cook until golden brown. Add 2 cups sliced potatoes, 3 cups boiling water, salt, pepper, and 2 cups canned corn. Cook until potatoes are tender. Add 4 cups scalded milk and reheat. Season more if necessary. Serves six.

While on the subject of New England thrift, the codfish must come in for recognition. Codfish cakes, served with cole slaw and a buttered vegetable like beets or peas, a dessert, some hot bread and a beverage make a meal that helps along the pocketbook.

Penny-chasers also find chopped meat a bright spot on a marketing foray. To get the most for her money, the shopper should use chopped meat from the cheaper cuts like the flank, the shank and the chuck near the neck. And as suggested before with hamburger, chopped meat can be served with a flair. Since meat in the thrift class is used, a meat ball entree can be lifted to new heights with the addition of a few mushrooms. Try this menu:

Dinner Menu

Meat Balls With Mushrooms
Cauliflower With Cheese
Baked Potatoes
Whole Wheat Bread Butter
Apple Crisp Coffee

Meat Balls With Mushrooms—Saute 4 slices bacon, finely chopped with 2 tablespoons chopped onions until bacon is crisp and onion is nicely browned. Add 1 pound chopped beef, ¼ cup soft bread crumbs, ¼ cup milk, 1 slightly beaten egg, ½ teaspoon salt, a dash of pepper and mix well. Form into balls. Fry in fat in hot skillet until meat is done. Saute ¼ pound mushrooms in 2 tablespoons butter until tender. Turn mushrooms over meat balls. Serves 6.

Leftover meats, too, should be treated as assets, and not to be discarded. Hash is an excellent dish when properly made. Blessed with refrigeration, we can save meat for several days, so if you have the leftover bits from several dinners, make them into a shepherd's pie. It is a meal-in-one dish.

Shepherd's Pie—Dice 3 cups cooked meat and sprinkle with ½ teaspoon salt, a dash of pepper, 2 tablespoons flour and mix well. All 1 tablespoon scraped onion and 1 teaspoon Worcestershire sauce. Add 2½ cups leftover gravy and water and bring to a brisk boil, stirring constantly. Turn into greased baking dish. Spread 3 cups mashed potatoes over top, leaving opening for escape of steam. Bake in hot oven, 450 degrees, for 20 minutes, or until potatoes are browned. Serves 6.

Dried lima beans, too, are a food in the low-cost bracket. They are not a prosaic food and you get a lot of food value for your money when you buy dried limas, kidney beans or peas. Follow this recipe to make them appealing fare:

Baked Lima Beans—Soak 2 cups dried lima beans over night. Drain, and simmer in boiling salted water until tender. Add ½ cup canned tomatoes, 1 tablespoon chopped onion, 2 tablespoons butter, salt and pepper to taste. Turn into baking dish. Arrange about 10 slices bacon on top of beans. Bake in moderate oven, 350 degrees, until crisp. Serves 6.

Fine Recipe For Stuffed Eggs

Do you know how good stuffed eggs can be with chopped or sliced ripe olives in the deviled filling? To prepare eight stuffed egg halves, cut four hard-cooked eggs into halves lengthwise. Remove yolks, moisten with four teaspoons cream, and season with two teaspoons prepared mustard and few drops tabasco sauce. Add ¼ cup chopped or sliced ripe olives and blend. The ready-to-use form of chopped or sliced fruit is fine for this purpose. Refill egg halves with olive mixture and garnish with paprika. Serve as salad or garnish.

You'll never be lacking for hurry up sandwich fillings with deviled ham and chopped or sliced ripe olives on your pantry shelf. Onion juice and chopped pickle are optional additions to this satisfying combination.

Better Meals for Less Money

America grew up on beans baked in brick ovens. And they are still good fare to serve when the budget is about to snap. They are an ideal food to serve for buffet suppers

Thrift-minded cooks use plenty of apples. As a budget-balancer they can't be beat. Try serving glazed apple rings with the meat course, as shown here with pork chops.

You get a lot for your money when you eat a potato. And a baked potato, when stuffed and flavored with chives or cheese, puts it in a class to be served to the most fastidious guest

A tempting bread pudding, served hot, dripping with sauce or milk, will put the family in an idyllic frame of mind and keep the budget on the right side of the line

Save Good Linens With Razor Towels

Razor towels whose value the hotels discovered long ago are now appearing in home bathrooms. Housewives are learning that by supplying little outing flannel squares near the washbasin they are not only making it easier for men to wash and dry their razor blades, but they save good towels from being cut.

A yard of outing flannel will make at least a dozen of these little towels. It's a good idea to hem them all around, and to attach a loop of tape so that they may be hung on a hook close to the shaving mirror. The little razor towels are quickly cleansed as part of the regular weekly wash.

Old Favorites In New Wrap

When working for a new effect with old friend potroast, try tomato juice as the liquid instead of water, and season with three or four cloves and a bay leaf.

When you've finished your baked ham, put the bone into the soup pot with the last bits of meat, a finely diced onion, a sliced carrot and any leftover cooked vegetables. Simmer gently 1½ hours.

Relish Tray Gives Sparkle

Introduce a relish tray if you want to crown your well-planned meal with success. This addition to the meal is strictly an out-of-the-can offering which involves no complicated cookery or precious expended effort. When making relish selections it is well to keep in mind contrasts in shape, size, color and, last but not least, good-to-eat qualities. For example, there may be dill pickles, spiced onions, watermelon pickles and ripe olives. Long, round, square and ovular dimensions are represented. The green, off-white, honey color contrasts appetizingly with the rich, shiny black of the ripe olives.

As for taste, there is a touch of dill from the pickles, spice from the onions, sweet-sour from the watermelon, and nutlike richness from the generous fruit oil of the ripe olive. Individually each relish tastes good, and together they offer pleasing contrast with each other. It is a pity to separate the congenial group, hence, if possible, serve on one tray. They may be separated by using individual glass relish dishes. Give your meal a spark with a relish tray.

New Prepared Sauces Lighten Cook's Task

WHEN the homemaker gets to feeling sorry for herself, it is time for her to pause and reflect. She doesn't have to card wool and spin it into warm clothes, she doesn't have to spin flax into linens for her beds and table, she doesn't have to can the fruits and vegetables of the garden, she doesn't have to fry down the sausage meat and put it away in crocks. Those are but a few of the things that manufacturers do for the homemaker—things that our grandmothers and great-grandmothers had to do along with cooking and three meals a day.

And now a thoughtful food company has developed six sauces that the cook can use either for the preparation of regularly cooked dishes or for the utilization of leftovers. These sauces are complete for general use and need no additional preparation. They may be added to the product with which they are to be used, or poured hot over the product at serving time.

These six sauces are meat, a la king, mushroom, au gratin, meatless spagnetti and creole. The meat sauce can be used as a base for gravies or dressings, as a stuffing for fowl, and is excellent for making vegetable stuffings, as for tomatoes and peppers. The a la king sauce is particularly good for use with leftover meats, such as minced chicken or turkey, and seafoods such as shrimp, lobster and crab.

Adds a New Aura

Chopped or diced meats and vegetables will take on new auras with the mushroom sauce. It is also excellent for use as a side sauce with steaks or chops, or as a topping with broiled meats. Preparation time can be cut to a minimum with the use of the au gratin sauce. Where a cream sauce is needed, just use this new au gratin sauce.

Out of every cook's kitchen at some time must emerge a spaghetti dish. It is then that the meatless spaghetti sauce will be appreciated. And the creole sauce is reminiscent of Southern cookery. When making a creole omelet or serving leftover bits of chicken, veal or fish, the creole sauce will be great help.

The following recipes will show the way these flavorsome sauces can be used to make appetizing main dishes in record time.

Broiled Salmon With Brown Mushroom Sauce—Place 1½ pounds of salmon steak on a well-greased broiler with skin down. Broil rapidly until slightly browned. Spread with butter, turn and broil skin side slightly to make the skin brown and crisp. Turn again, spread with butter, sprinkle with salt, and continue broiling until tender. The whole process takes about 20 minutes, depending upon the thickness of steak. Heat one 10-ounce can brown mushroom sauce to boiling point and serve over broiled salmon.

Cauliflower is of excellent quality just now and being sold at an attractive price. Select a large head, and with bread crumbs, grated sharp cheese and a can of the cream au gratin sauce a delicious dish can be made with a minimum of effort. Follow this recipe:

Cauliflower With Cream Au Gratin Sauce—Cut bottom of cauliflower stem off smoothly about an inch from the head so the cauliflower will stand upright. Soak in cold, salted water for 1 hour, then wash thoroughly. Place in kettle with plenty of hot water and cook until tender yet firm. Drain, cut away remaining leaves and lower stem and place in serving dish. Sprinkle with salt and pour on heated au gratin sauce. Sprinkle with ¼ cup fine toasted crumbs and ¼ cup grated cheese. Serve at once. Serves 4.

Mardi Gras Rice is a dish that can be effected with the use of creole sauce. Follow this recipe:

Mardi Gras Rice—Cut 4 slices bacon up fine and fry until crisp. Add 3 cups cooked rice, ¾ cup grated sharp cheese, one 10-ounce can creole sauce, 1-3 cup water and salt and pepper to taste. Mix thoroughly. Bake in moderate over for 35 minutes. Serves 4.

Cabmen Win 10-Cent Trial Boost in Fare

Gen. Kutz, Gregory Hankin, newly named chairman of the PUC, announced a disagreement and said no increase temporary or otherwise—would be authorized pending further investigation.

His remarks were greeted at first with sullen silence by the taximen, but a moment later a dozen or more independent and association drivers were on their feet with loud and indignant protests.

Hankin then made it clear that he was in accord with the industry's request for increased rates and was in favor of at least a trial period until further information could be gathered.

He added, however, that his "colleague"—Gen. Kutz—wanted additional conferences with taxi owners and operators—with no immediate action—in an effort to evolve methods of obtaining more facts on which to base a final decision.

Hankin slapped at the long-inactive P. U. C.—it has been without a quorum membership since February—with the statement:

"This application for increased taxicab rates was filed on August 5. The staff of the Public Utilities Commission could have made an investigation to get the necessary facts. This has not been done and it is now November 13."

Has to Halt Cheers

Prolonged cheers and applause from the "cabbies" who jammed the small PUC hearing room followed and Hankin was prompted, with considerable table pounding, to warn:

"This is not a theater. All of you will please refrain from demonstrations."

His admonition, however, did no good when, a few moments later, Gen. Kutz presented his side, explaining:

"The Commission is divided, but has decided to proceed with the hearing to get what information is possible.

"In taking my position, I thought that while the need for an increase in Zone 1 is clearly indicated, the size of Zone 1 is too large. Not only should the rate be increased, but the size of the zone should be decreased."

Again there was resounding cheers and applause from the witnesses and spectators, which subsided only when Gen. Kutz indicated he was not favorable to any immediate rate increase or decision on enlarging Zone 1.

Announcement that factual study of the taxi problem would take several months and nothing could be done until the complete information is at hand resulted in renewed boos.

Increased Costs Cited

Jack Royer, president of the Taxi Cab Owners Association, which filed the original petition for 30-cent fare in any one zone and a 20-cent charge for each zone entered on a point-to-point trip, then cited increased maintenance costs for cab operators.

He was joined by other cabmen—and one woman—who all agreed that taxes, increased prices of new cars, tires and accessories, left little profit for the individual drivers.

Fish Buys a Train Ticket

HEADED FOR ARMY DUTY—Representative Hamilton Fish (left) was pictured last night at Union Station as he purchased a train ticket. Wearing his officer's uniform, Fish was bound for Monroe, N. C., to join the First Army

House holds no session.

4. That the House shall protect its prerogatives, but that these need not, and ought not, operate so as to shield a member from being compelled to give testimony needed by a grand jury investigating crime.

The direction to "refrain from responding," which has protected Fish while the committee was in session, will not be in effect after the report is made. And it appeared unlikely that such a report would be followed by any House action to supply the New York Representative with another reason for staying away from the grand jury.

Attorney O'Connor came out of the Judiciary Committee yesterday with the statement that he told the members the summons for Fish grew out of his attitude toward the war and that it was part of the "smear" campaign on which Fish has harped since his name began coming into the special grand jury's investigation.

O'Connor's pleading with the committee to keep one of his clients off the witness stand, where he might give evidence against the other, kept him from being in court here yesterday, when Hill's technical attack on his indictment was set for hearing.

Prosecutor Maloney denounced persons "in league with Hill" for "attacking the Department of Justice in cowardly fashion in a forum where we have no voice."

Maloney apparently referred to Fish's "smear" charges in the House and in statements to the newspapers. He said:

"This is a grave situation," Maloney told the court yesterday. "This man is accused of perjury before a grand jury investigating matters which threaten the roots of our national safety. The national interest requires that this defendant be brought to trial speedily. Yet we find those in concert with him raising the cry of 'smear' in another forum. Let them come into court, where the truth can be determined in a public trial."

To Hear Complaints Tuesday

Justice James W. Morris ordered Hill's counsel to be ready to argue the defendant's technical complaints about the indictment at 4 p. m. next Tuesday.

When Hill was indicted October 24, the prosecutors asserted that he was the Washington keyman of a Nazi propaganda ring and declared that he admitted taking $12,000 from sources he would not disclose.

Fish said last night that he knew "perfectly" where this money came from and would "tell the grand jury at the proper time." He doesn't want Hill tried in the press, he explained. What he tells the grand jury will be secret.

Hill pleaded not guilty, but withdrew this plea November 6, substituting a demurrer to the indictment and a demand to see the transcript of all his testimony before the grand jury. Although hearings on such matters usually are held in a week, William F. Cusick, of Hill's counsel, complained yesterday that more time was needed to prepare for argument.

Fish made plans, weeks ago, to put on his reserve colonel's uniform for two weeks of active duty with the First Army.

"And of course they can't serve me with subpena when I am in military service," said Fish last night. "If it turns out from the Judiciary Committee report that I do have to testify, I'll get in touch with the grand jury when I get back."

But he would not say when he would get back.

Later Fish said he must have been misunderstood, because he claims no immunity, but had stayed away from the grand jury to obey the House.

It is now seven weeks since The Post uncovered the fact that Hill sent a truck which hauled off about a ton of franked envelopes from Prescott Dennett's headquarters after Dennett was called as a grand jury witness. Hill had eight mailbags of this material placed in a storeroom used by Fish.

Fish denied the report in a speech in the House. He said he would "willingly appear" before the special grand jury on German agents, before which Special Prosecutors Edward J. Hickey, jr., and William Power Maloney are conducting an investigation.

But Hill did not produce the mailbags until he was threatened with contempt of court action. After Hill testified, he was indicted on two charges of perjury.

About two weeks ago Fish was invited to testify. When a week passed without his coming, the grand jurors ordered him subpenaed. Fish then raised a point of personal privilege in the House, which unanimously ordered him to "refrain from responding" until the Judiciary Committee studied the question of privilege.

Blimp to Aid House Unit's Traffic Study

A House District subcommittee will take to the air in the Goodyear blimp next week for a third dimensional look at the District traffic problems it studied last month.

Representative Schulte (Democrat), of Indiana, the subcommittee's chairman, announced the plan last night after a Senate District special subcommittee completed two weeks of hearings on the same problem.

Senator Burton (Republican), of Ohio, the Senate subcommittee chairman, announced at the conclusion of yesterday's hearing that he would report on both the fringe-parking bill and the House-passed 2-cent increase in the District gasoline tax after he has conferred with Government officials.

Representative Schulte tackled the traffic dilemma at his subcommittee hearings last month with the bold slogan that Washington must be brought out of its "horse and buggy" traffic doldrums.

Monday is the day tentatively set for the flight in which the subcommittee will be accompanied by Commissioner John Russell Young, Traffic Director William Van Duzer and newspapermen, he stated.

While Representative Schulte has advocated construction of a subway and coordination of rail commutation service with buses and street cars to relieve downtown traffic congestion, Senator Burton has confined his hearings to the fringe-parking bill and an effort to determine whether a gasoline tax increase will speed completion of the Whitehurst highway improvement plan.

The Senate subcommittee was told at its final hearing yesterday by Baxter Smith, representing the Federation of Citizens Association, that about 19 million dollars' worth of projects in the 44-million-dollar Whitehurst highway program was a Federal Government obligation.

He reiterated the federation's opposition to an increase in the gasoline tax.

Alfred D. Calvert, president of the Lincoln Park Citizens Association, said that the Whitehurst plan was a waste of the citizens' money and an idea "to make the highways of the District a free public garage for the States of Maryland and Virginia."

Pope Praises U. S. Donors of War Relief

American Catholics who have sent aid to war-stricken peoples of Europe have performed an act of "inestimable value," Pope Pius XII cabled the Roman Catholic bishops of the United States at their annual meeting here yesterday.

The Pope referred to a collection to which American parishioners contributed last spring. Its proceeds were sent to him for "the relief of the suffering and destitute peoples throughout the world." Substantial allocations also were made to the American Red Cross and other relief agencies.

Pope Pius said that: "Saddened in heart by the terrible sufferings and misery all about us, it is our ardent wish to offer to the unfortunate and innocent victims every possible spiritual and material succor."

In fulfillment of that desire, he added, "your gracious generosity and that of your devoted faithful has been of inestimable value and we are confident that in our prayerful remembrance we are joined by those countless thousands who, in their awful need, are comforted by that bountiful assistance."

The message was received at Catholic University, where members of the American Catholic hierarchy have been meeting this week. In reply Denis Cardinal Dougherty said the bishops in this country wish to "reaffirm our profound desire to support the Holy See in carrying on its mission of Apostolic charity in war-stricken countries."

Dr. Yandell Addresses Democratic Women

OPM Aide Proposes International Agency to Control Strategic Materials

A joint international holding company for control of strategic raw materials—with nations putting their assets "on the table" as an offset to lease-lend aid from the United States—was proposed as the basis for a stable and peaceful future world order, by Dr. William Yandell Elliott in an address at the Woman's National Democratic Club dinner last night.

Dr. Elliott, who is consultant to the Office of Production Management, proposed that control or at least equal voting shares and assets of the capital structure be put into the hands of the United States.

The joint possession and control of such resources would be the best ecopomic sanction available against rearmament, he said.

The United States' participation in holding companies which control essential strategic materials of the world would permit the vetoing of exports in any but normal industrial quantities to the nations and would permit withholding them from any nation that systematically attempted to rearm after the war, he said.

Other Nations Will Ask Aid

Dr. Elliott said that in addition to extending lease-lend aid to Britain, the United States would sooner or later be asked to consider further extension to the Free French, Belgian Congo and Dutch empires. He pointed to the vast mineral resources in these empires and suggested that they be placed under the international control plan, at the peace conference "after Hitler is successfully blocked."

Dr. Elliott said that a bank of international settlements, supplied with American gold reserves on a loan from the United States, could be set up with the British and Allied claims to these natural resources "as an asset to be listed against our furnishing of the gold and credits based upon the gold."

Proposes Agency On Development

As an adjunct, there should be established a development corporation in which other nations would be invited to take part through furnishing labor and skills for the organization and development of colonial resources and for reconstruction of Europe and China, he said.

Dr. Elliott spoke on "America's Place in the Future World Order" at a dinner at the clubhouse. He is a member of Harvard University faculty.

Mrs. Curtis Shears, president of the club, presided and introduced the speaker. Among those at the speaker's table were Justice and Mrs. Wiley Rutledge and Mr. and Mrs. Milo Perkins.

G. W. U. Tea to Honor Home Economics Leader

Miss Gladys Branegan, of Bozeman, Mont., who is president of the National Home Economics Association, will be the guest of honor at a tea Sunday given by Mrs. C. M. Jansky, Miss Frances Towne and Miss Frances Kirkpatrick at the home of Mrs. Jansky, 3020 Tilden Street Northwest.

The guests will be the home economics students of George Washington University and the members of the Alpha Gamma Delta International Fraternity, of which Miss Branegan is a member.

Big Ten Alumni To Dance Nov. 29

The Big Ten, composed of alumni and former students of the Big Ten universities, will have a dance at the Wardman Park Hotel Saturday, November 29.

Dr. Sterling Bockoven heads the committee composed of Mrs. Al F. O'Donnell, Earl J. Lombard, Miss Lyle Nash Wastembl, M. C. Farber, Miss Alice Scaaf, Miss Lois Niswanger, C. H. Jeneks, Miss Gertrude M. Louis, H. Breimeyer, Clifford S. Stephens, Lieut. W. A. Sundell, Miss Evelyn Blodgett, George E. Worthington, Clifford Betts, Mr. and Mrs. Alex R. Among members entertaining guests at the luncheon was Mrs. Frank Morrow, whose party included Mrs. Cyrus McCormick, Mrs. Edward Everett Gann, president of the local league; Countess Castellane, Mrs. French Meyer, Mrs. Wade Ellis, Mrs. Walter Tuckerman, Mrs. John Jenkins, Mrs. Sidney Cloman, Mrs. William Culbertson, Mme. ## Women's City Club To Mark Birthday With Tea Nov. 26

The Women's City Club will celebrate its twenty-second birthday November 26 with a tea in the afternoon and further entertainment in the evening.

Mrs. Harry L. Richardson, assisted by members of the house committee, will have charge of the tea. The evening program will be presented by members of the Junior Guild under the chairmanship of Mrs. John T. Lucker.

The following new members have come into the club: Miss Mildred A. Ehret, Miss Helen P. Krout, Miss Janet R. Lewis and Miss Aubrey C. White.

The club's last forum luncheon for 1941 will be held at 1:15 tomorrow afternoon when Miss Meredith Smith will speak on "The Effect of the New Order on Your Dress," it was announced by Mrs. Laura Waters, chairman.

Dr. Douglass Visions New Culture Growth

Washington's new position as a world center of culture—drawing noted scholars from other parts of the Nation and from other countries—offers an opportunity for its institutions to develop a great educational program, Dr. Paul F. Douglass, president of American University, told the civics-education section of the Twentieth Century Club yesterday.

Cultural opportunities here make possible a "great nonteaching university" for persons above the undergraduate level, he said at the luncheon at the Y. W. C. A.

Dr. Douglass told of some of the moves in which American University is cooperating, in broadening the scope of its program. A group of 50 students from other universities is coming here for a period of study and discussions the latter part of this month, he said. A group of political science majors from Mount Holyoke College plans to spend a "reading period" here in January, he added. Several young men from other schools are spending three weeks, with American University as their "base," while making a field survey in social sciences, he said.

"Education is not life on a campus, but life in society, although the campus may be a base," he added. "We are losing the provincial idea of learning."

Mrs. Edgar B. Meritt, chairman of the section, presided at the luncheon.

Junior Hadassah To Dance Tomorrow

Girl of 14, Who Has Never Had Dates, Asks How To Attract Attention of Boy Who Belongs to Most Popular and Exclusive Group in Her School

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am a girl of 14. I have many friends, although none of them could be called a "close friend." I am rather good looking and do my best to be friendly, agreeable and not sarcastic (as many of my friends are inclined to be). But I have never had a date and I am rather despondent over that fact, because all of my girl friends have dates regularly. I have never known many boys, as friends; because I lack the "gift of gab." However, I am concentrating on that point and believe I am making great progress.

For the past year, I have been especially interested in one boy. Several times I have been to his home, visiting his young sister, who is 11 years old. But he has never taken any notice of me, except to say, "Hi!" He belongs to the so-called "popular" (and most exclusive) group in our school. I would appreciate it very much if you would tell me how I can attract this boy's attention; and get dates generally. R. M. S.

DEAR R. M. S.: The fact that you, a girl of 14, have leisure-time interests in common with a girl of 11 suggests that you have not yet entirely outgrown the "little girl" phase of your development,—even though a number of your girl friends, just your age, are already blossoming into some semblance of "young ladyhood." Yet, even if you were quite as much of a "young lady," in appearance and behavior, as any of your classmates, your association with a girl of 11 probably would give casual beholders to think you were still more interested in dolls than beaux.

So, if you have been cultivating the friendship of your hero's young sister, mainly for the purpose of making a "come-hither" dent on his consciousness, you have done more to defeat than to promote your objective—in the immediate future, at least. As a member of the "sophistication" set in high school, he probably would ridicule, as a "cradle snatcher," any fellows who would signify sentimental interest in girls who played around with his "kid sister"—who is still in grade school. An dit would scarcely occur to him that a girl in the "pig tails" classification was dreaming of having dates with him. Therefore, I advise you to discard the strategem of cultivating his sister, as a supposed means of "getting through" to his heart.

If there is a chance of getting him to notice you as a possible "girl friend," it can only be developed by bidding for his attention from other angles. For instance, you will find it helpful to dress the part of a "date-age" girl. To this end, study the garb of the girls in the "popular group" at school, and copy thei style. If your mother has been dressing you in genteel "little girl" fashion, implore her to stop it.

Explain to her how terrifically important it is, to your social "rating" for you to have the sort of clothes the popular 14-year-olds are wearing—the kind so fetchingly pictured in early fall fashion issues of the magazine "Mademoiselle," for example, under the heading of "campus clothes." Much as conservative parents may deplore it, school girls from the age of 14 upwards now use lipstick; and many of their hair, as a matter of course, their hair, as amatter of course, in order to maintain that attractive "long-bob" effect, which seems to be the perennial favorite in school girl "hair-dos."

When your wardrobe, hair-do and cosmetic finish give you an air of schoolgirl chic that puts you on a fashion-par with the popular girls in your age-range at school, your leisure-time activities should be comparably stepped-up, to include such recreational activities as tennis and swimming in summer, and bowling and ice skating in winter,—and party-giving the year round. And you simply must know how to dance. In order to attract beaux and take your place socially, among girls who "get around," you must be a stirrer-upper of amusing things to do. You must be capable not only of participating casually and well in group activities of a social kind; but also, in a position to dispense hospitality to "the gang," from time to time.

Knowing "the right girls" leads automatically to friendly association with the sought-after boys. Thus, you should be consistently gracious—without seeming "pushy"—to the girls you most want to know at school. Make opportunities for talking with them, when you meet them in the halls or elsewhere. Compliment each girl on the qualities you most admire in her—as Jane's gorgeous hair, for instance; or Sara's wit; or Ann's style sense; or Barbara's scholarship; or Martha's masterly work on the school paper. You might single out one particular girl in your hero's crowd as your object of special admiration; and after shyly and faithfully courting her good will for weeks, invite her home one evening for supper; telling her to come "any evening this week she can make it."

A cozy talk after supper might lead to the discovery of hitherto unsuspected mutual tastes and interests, resulting in the formation of a genuine friendship. Plans for going bowling and seeing movies together might follow,—and your newly-made friend might be singing your praises to others in her crowd from then on. Supposing you could interest her in coming home more or less frequently, say once every week or two weeks, you would then have a reason for bringing John (your hero) into the picture, as a neighbor of yours and an old friend of hers.

Either you could ask him to drop over after supper, to play such games as monopoly, Chinese checkers, etc., in a threesome; or you could suggest to her strolling over to his house, while waiting for supper, to say "hello." In this way you would be bringing yourself to his attention as his age-equal—who seems to "fit in" with his group of friends. And thereafter, when and wherever you met him, you could "talk his language"—concerning personalities and events of interest at school. M. H.

Make-up Enhances Beauty of Ears

Hollywood, Calif.—Since ears have come out from under and are much in view, Mary Astor has a suggestion for displaying them to best advantage.

It was Perc Westmore who gave Mary an idea when he put make-up on her ears, which were exposed in the very sleek coiffure she wears in a current picture. Now Mary never steps out without using her foundation cream and a slight dab of powder to complete her facial make-up right to the tips of her ears.

Heirloom Lace Finds Many Modern Uses

Lace Collection From Britain Exhibited Here

By Jane Driscoll
The Post Fashion Editor

If you have a valuable piece of lace on your grandmother's party gown or in an old trunk in the attic, now is the time to get it out. For according to Miss Dora Miller, fashion authority, "You can't have a war without lace."

Always in the early stages of a war, Miss Miller points out, women bedeck themselves with lace and feminine fripperies. The plain, utilitarian clothes come later. Further proof that women right now are going in for the ultra-feminine is evidenced by the fact that sales of filmy black underwear have skyrocketed within the last few months.

Miss Miller, who represents the lace industry for International Fashions, is here with a collection of British heirloom lace. The display is to be shown tomorrow afternoon at the British Embassy in a private preview under the auspices of the British War Relief Society Incorporated.

To Aid Children

Later this collection will be seen by the public at a local store. After this it will be taken on exhibit throughout the country and subsequently sold. The proceeds will go for the rehabilitation of children in Britain. Pieces in the collection are valued from $5 to $20,000.

This lace was contributed by Queen Elizabeth, Dowager Queen Mary and other distinguished British women. Included in the collection are rare pieces which belonged to Napoleon I, Queen Alexandra, Marie Antoinette and Queen Charlotte.

Attached to a delicate piece of lace which was presented to the Royal Society of Needlepoint in England for the collection, was this note:

"Mrs. Wilde presents her compliments to Lady Smith-Dorien (head of the Society). In response to her appeal for lace, she is sending some old point lace that has been in her family for years and originally belonged to Queen Charlotte. She hopes it may be some help in raising money for the fund appealed for."

Have Modern Use

Most of the pieces in the collection can be utilized in modern costume. They may be made into fichus—single and double, dog collars, cuffs and jabots. There are also tiny ladies mitts with the pattern so fine it must have been worked under a microscope. Some of the pieces are still in their original shapes and others have been worked into more modern pieces, as the jabots mentioned.

Exquisite mantillas shown might be used to grace bare shoulders or trim a basic hat. As a matter of fact, the millinery designers, Lilly Dache, Sally Victor and Florence Reichman, have each contributed a chapeau using the lace to decorate their creation. The hats will be sold later for the value of the lace trim only.

Although some of the lace dates to the seventieth century, it is not fragile—due to the fact that lace lasts better when in use. There is every rare type lace imaginable from Limerick to Chantilly. Lovely handkerchiefs, tablecloths and a wedding gown are among these types.

Lace is so important now, not only because of its wartime psychology of feminine allure, but also because of its scarcity. "Two years ago," as Miss Miller stated, "there was unemployment in the lace industry in America. Now, because of the fact that there are no foreign importations, the lace industry is working 24 hours a day."

Make-up Base Requires Care In Selection

By Carolyn Abbott.

Is your make-up base just another cream that you dab on your face to lessen the shine? Or do you select it carefully to blend with or to bring out definite skin tones? If so, do you apply it correctly? (Most women don't.)

The main purposes of a make-up base are: protection from elements (wind, cold and sun), protection from powder and rouge; to hold make-up on outside of skin where it belongs; to flatter and complement the skin. This is the opinion of Miss Wanda D'Amato, special representative of a New York cosmetic firm who is in the make-up bar of a local department store this week to give advice on the proper selection of cosmetics.

"Foundation lotions should be chosen with the same care as rouge and lipstick," said Miss D'Amato. "In general, the foundation should be a shade darker than powder, so that it will come through a deeper but natural tone. It should seem to come from within (skin) to banish a drab, mature look."

For evening—a base with an undertone of orchid or green will give the skin a translucent appearance.

To apply foundation cream effectively, place a tiny bit on cheeks, throat and forehead and blend over the entire face.

Don't put the heaviest amount on nose, chin," cautioned Miss D'Amato," for the sebaceous gland runs through center of face—that is, tracking from forehead through chin.'

"Also, match your foundation lotion to your costume," said this beauty expert, who first analyzes your skin tones, then blends the foundation base to complement your complexion.

Advertising Art Self-Taught By Easy Method

DO YOU have an ambition to draw? Don't, in looking at successful illustrators' work, get an inferiority complex. Their stunning heroes and heroines may have developed from simple figures much like those square-and-oval people you drew as a child.

At home, with the aid of charts, you can study this easy method of learning to draw—developing figures from geometric forms.

You first put down an oval for the head, then with two parallel lines you indicate the supporting column of the neck, add an oblong for the troso and so on.

Features are started in as simple a way, as our diagram shows in booklet. You notice where the nose is, how the head is titling. Then you draw a vertical line down your oval, placing the nose, and a horizontal line (tilting the way your head is) which places the eyes. These lines help you to place other features.

As you sketch you educate your eye to details. Soon with instruction in picturing action and expression you're drawing people like those you see in the illustrations. When you're good you'll get real money!

Send 15 cents in coins for our booklet, "A Simple Course in Illustration and Advertising Art," to the NEW YORK OFFICE of The Washington Post Home Institute, 109 West Nineteenth Street, New York, N. Y. Write plainly your name, address and the name of booklet.

Last Stand

So long as I can cling to hope,
That come tomorrow,
I'll change my figure and my weight,
(Though 'twill be sorrow)
And that I'll rid myself of petty faults—
Thus my soul enhancing—
I still fend time and hold at bay
The years advancing.

Today's Social Notes

(From The Truthtown Torch)

Mrs. Thornburry Flitt just back from attending the night club and theater openings in New York is trying to decide whether to spend her Christmas holidays at Miami Beach, Palm Springs, Sun Valley or Bermuda.

The party to present Miss Celeste (Ducky) Tinfoil to society will be held next week, her mother, Mrs. Otis Tinfoil announced yesterday. The debut was originally planned for the Christmas holidays, but was hurried up so that Miss Tinfoil could enter a secretarial school without delay

"We simply had to get Ducky properly introduced," said Mrs. Tinfoil, "so that she could go on with her career."

Opening of Truthtown's new night club the Hot Tamale, Wednesday night, brought about several fisticuff engagements and melees before the evening was over. Supporters of a dozen or more best dressed women who were present were drawn into heated arguments and even blows concerning the merits of the out fits worn by their favorites. Climax of the evening was a slugfest outside the club between the chauffeurs of Mrs. Radcliffe Uppercut and Mrs. Slinker Hopping as to which leader possessed the more chic.

Job Contest

The social feud of Mrs. Parvenu Popinjay and Mrs. Roswell Clymer has taken a new turn. Each is trying to beat the other at becoming a dollar a year woman, Mrs. Popinjay has the backing of several senators, while Mrs. Clymer has letters of recommendation from some of the foremost leaders in cafe society.

"I feel I could serve the Government in a most effective way in any work involving the meeting of people," said Mrs. Popinjay yesterday. "I love people and I have always been a great student of human nature."

Mrs. Clymer said that while she preferred work that would enable her to use her talents as a hostess, she also was fitted to do interior decoration, or flower arrangements. "I also enjoy travel and adventure," she said, "and would be glad to be sent to interesting spots."

The Stay at Home

"Are you going to hear the Raven chorus?"

"I should say not! Those things bore me to death."

"Well I hadn't intended to go but Grace Trippit talked me into it."

"Oh, is she going?"

"Yes, she says when she was in Boston last month everybody was talking about it."

"Well I've simply made up my mind to stay home for awhile and get some things done."

"So have I. But when Lucia Gadd and all the girls kept talking about it yesterday at the luncheon——"

"Oh, are they all going?"

"Yes, Hortense Daubler and Marie Stepp and Sylvia Putter, and Ada Dove—"

"You don't mean Ada Dove's going!"

"Yes, she and Sam are having a line party."

"Of all things! Why they hardly ever go anywhere."

"Oh yes, and Mrs. Leonidas Luker's taken a box."

"Is that so!"

"Yes and the DeLamcey Duffers are taking a lot of people and so are the Eddie Merryfeathers—"

"Well I don't care, I said I was going to stay home and I'm going to keep my word."

"Oh, and Bert said a lot of the people from his office were going—that is, if they could get tickets."

"You don't mean it's hard to get tickets."

"Yes, there was a big line yesterday at the box office."

"Well you know, I wonder if George wouldn't like to go. Is Bert going?"

"Yes, if we can get anyone to stay with the children. You see I promised this maid she could go—

"You don't mean SHE'S going?"

"Yes she's taking her mother and her little girl—say what are you doing?"

Kaaren Verne Offers Eye-Refreshers

Hollywood. — Eye-refreshers, picked up by Kaaren Verne while working under brilliant lights are equally effective for eyes strained in the sun or from bending over a typewriter.

Kaaren contends that too little care is given to the eyes by the average woman. She begins a simple treatment at bed time by bathing her eyes with warmed boric acid solution. Follows a few minutes of eye exercise. Finally, a gentle rotary massage from a point just beyond the outside corners of the eyes up into the hairline is comforting to tired eyes.

Mrs. Dewey Gives First In Series of Parties

Mrs. Leo d'Erlanger, the London Banker's Wife, Is Guest of Honor

By Hope Ridings Miller

"If I only had a larger house!" wailed Mrs. Albert Dewey yesterday as she gathered in a comparatively small group of guests for a cocktail party and buffet supper at the home she and Mr. Dewey have leased at 2811 Dumbarton Avenue. Not half the size of spacious Uplands, the Harriman house that the Deweys had last year, the one in which they are now living was crowded to the walls late yesterday afternoon and last evening. Since a large party in such close quarters is out of the question, Mrs. Dewey decided several days ago she would give a series of small, informal get-togethers; and yesterday's event was the first on the list. Incidentally, their new home in Georgetown, now being remodeled, will be ready for them in a few months.

Hope Ridings Miller

Guest of honor at yesterday's party was attractive Mrs. Leo d'Erlanger, of London, who arrived here not long ago and has taken a house in Georgetown for the winter. Her husband, the well-known banker, is staying on at home-office headquarters and, much as his many friends would like to have him in Washington, no plans for his coming here any time soon have yet been made.

Mrs. Dewey is one of the few Washington hostesses who personally arranges every blossom and every sprig of greenery in every bouquet when she is entertaining and guests yesterday were admiring her handiwork during the entire party. An all-pink-and-green motif was beautifully carried out, with dainty pink chrysanthemums stemming from silver and crystal vases and contrasting nicely with the pale green walls.

Receiving informally, Mrs. Dewey wore a frock of green velvet cut on simple lines. Standing with her was her guest of honor and the opening hour of the party had no sooner struck than guests began to come in. A special center of attention was Lieut. Comdr. Rodman Wanamaker, who arrived in Washington on leave early yesterday, and was accompanied by his pretty wife. Justice Frank Murphy, another especially popular guest, was gently denying the report that he is among the many candidates for the post as next United States Ambassador to Mexico.

James H. R. Cromwell moved from one group to another, stopping now and then to remind somebody about the dinner he is giving tomorrow night. "I'm one who won't be there," said merry Mrs. Lionel Atwill, his sister. "I'm going to Fred Roy's party for the Ralph Hills."

Party Planned For Mrs. Sterling

On her forthcoming calendar is another important fete—the dinner she is planning in honor of Mrs. Frederick Sterling on December 1. Seems that for years and years—ever since they were debutantes, in fact—she and the former Dorothy Williams have given each other a party a-piece each winter, so, the date for Mrs. Atwill's now being set, Mrs. Sterling will probably announce plans for hers almost any time now. Incidentally, Mrs. Atwill is planning to shake the dust of Washington from her feet along about December 15. She will go to California to spend the remainder of the winter.

But to get back to the Dewey shin-dig—who else was there? Oh yes, the Brazilian Ambassador and Mme. Martins, both of whom paid particular attention to their hostess' lovely flower arrangements; Representative and Mrs. Charles Dewey, chatting with Mrs. Robert Low Bacon, and Tinsley Garnett, asking Miss Natalia Askenazy when she expected to leave for Moscow.

The Hon. and Mrs. Charles Winn, of London, were exchanging homeland reminiscences with Mr. and Mrs. Humphrey Clarke and the guest of honor and Myron Hofer and Clarence Hewes were talking about that "perfectly brilliant dinner" that Percy Blair gave Wednesday evening. Mrs. Gore Auchnicloss once more denied reports that she was planning to be married again any time soon; and Mrs. Robert Low Bacon asked almost everybody who came in for the latest reports on the House vote on the neutrality bill revision.

Mrs. George T. Pettengill was there without the Admiral, who is too busy to get away from his desk for any party these days. Still others enjoying the pleasant party were Mrs. Kent Legare, the Arthur Krocks, Mr. and Mrs. C. Mathews Dick and the Snowden Fahnestocks.

Newsy Bits From Here and There

In New York, on leave from his newspaper post in Panama, is Benjamin Welles, son of the Undersecretary of State, who will return to his work next week. Meanwhile, however, rumors are going the rounds that he may take back with him a bride—June Cox, daughter of Mrs. M. Dyson Cox, of New York, and one of the six lovely blonde models who occupied a box each night at the recent National Horse Show . . . Now "doing publicity" for the Free French in Brazzaville, French Equatorial Africa, is my former assistant, Dudley Harmon . . . A letter from her en route includes this newsy bit: "Believe it or not, I have not talked with a woman since I left New York! The few women aboard this boat are missionaries, headed for Liberia! The good old U. S. A. is beginning to seem unreal." . . . Senator Elbert D. Thomas, of Utah is the only person in Congress who can speak Japanese, and also write it. He learned back in the years when he was a missionary in Tokyo. Amazing men, these Mormons . . . A lot of hitherto unpublished data about a late President will come to light, so I understand, in the new play, "Woodrow Wilson," which starts rehearsals in New York early next month. When Howard Koch came to Washington to collect little-known facts about the war-time President, he interviewed scores of celebrities who knew Wilson well; but the President's widow declined to talk to the playwright . . . A diplomatic daughter now enjoying a New York debutante whirl is pretty Lispenard Seabury Crocker, former pupil at St. Timothy's in Catonsville, Md. Her father, Edward Savage Crocker, is First Secretary of our Embassy in Japan. She and her mother returned to this country several months ago and are spending the winter with Mr. and Mrs. William Marston Seabury, grandparents of the debutante . . . When she was 5-weeks-old Lispenard was taken to Warsaw, and since then, has had an address in many foreign capitals . . . Incidentally, she had her first lesson in an English-speaking school at St. Timothy's last autumn . . .

Lord, Lady Halifax Entertain at Embassy Dinner

The British Ambassador and Lady Halifax entertained at a dinner last night at the Embassy.

Present at the affair was U. SaH, the Prime Minister of Burma, who is staying at the Embassy a few days en route to Burma from a recent London conference.

On Sunday Viscount and Lady Halifax will leave for Canada where they will be the house-Governor General of Canada, at Governor-General of Canada, at the Governor's House in Ottawa. Lord and Lady Halifax expect to return to Washington next Friday.

The bride-elect is the daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Charles McIlvaine Harris, of Warrenton, Va., the former of whom was Miss Aileen Kerr, of Washington. Dr. Rutherford is the son of Mrs. Leslie Rutherford, of Peoria, Ill., and the late Dr. Rutherford. Miss Harris attended the Warrenton School and made her debut here and in Philadelphia. Dr. Rutherford attended the University of Illinois and was graduated from Northwestern University Medical School. He is now stationed in Washington as a lieutenant in the Army Medical Corps

Mrs. Cockran Marks Birthday

According to a written clause in the deed given to her by Robert Louis Stevenson, Mrs. Bourke Cockran must celebrate her birthday in a specified fashion every year or the date will be forfeited and given to the President of the United States. So yesterday, feeling that the President definitely does not need another birthday, Mrs. Cockran fulfilled all the requirements at her home, 1136 Fifth Avenue, New York, just as she has done since 1891.

On that long-ago date, in far-off Samoa, Mrs. Cockran, then little Anne Ide, congratulated Robert Louis Stevenson, who was living on the islands, on having November 13 for a birthday. She also complained wistfully that her birthday was no good to her because, being on Christmas Day, no one ever remembered it was her birthday, too. The author thereupon willed her his own birthday to the daughter of his old friend, Henry Ide, at that time land commissioner of Samoa.

The deed was drawn up in proper fashion, signed and sealed before witnesses and presented very formally. Among other things it specified that it must be observed each year by "the sporting of fine raiment, eating of rich meats, receiving of gifts and compliments and copies of verses." Little Annie was also required to promise "to use my said birthday with moderation and humanity, to have and to hold and enjoy."

And so yesterday guests gathered for dinner, champagne flowed freely and the old parchment deed was brought out and read again. To top off the evening Mrs. Cockran took her guests to see "The Wookey." For many years Mrs. Cockran celebrated her "deeded birthday" in Washington while the late Mr. Cockran was Representative in Congress from New York. For the last few years she has made her home in New York with only occasional visits to her many friends in the Capital.

Dale Collection Of Art to Be Shown Tonight

Tonight will be "art night" when Washington society is expected to turn out in force to attend the preview showing of the Chester Dale collection of nineteenth century French paintings at the National Gallery of Art. Adding social touch to the event will be the half dozen or so dinners preceding the preview.

David Edward Finley, director of the gallery, and Mrs. Finley will entertain at a dinner in honor of Mr. and Mrs. Chester Dale, and Mr. and Mrs. John Walker—he is chief curator of the gallery—will also entertain. James Clement Dunn will be host at a dinner in his home on Observatory Circle. Mrs. Dunn, who is in Florida with her daughter, Countess de Baillet-Latour, is not expected back in the Capital until the end of the month.

Still other dinners will be those given by Mr. and Mrs. Eliot Wadsworth, Mr. and Mrs. Duncan Phillips and Mr. and Mrs. Albert Dewey.

Erteguns to Honor Daughter and Four Friends

The Turkish Ambassador and Mme. Ertegun have selected December 29 as the date on which they will entertain at a dance in honor of their daughter Selma, and four of their daughter's former Cathedral school classmates.

One of the girls to be honored on that date by the Turkish envoy and his wife is Miss Elene Essary, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. Fred Essary, who will take one of the five early cuts allowed her from Sweetbriar College make her own debut here on December 1 at Blair House, the historic Pennsylvania Avenue home of Mrs. Gist Blair and the late Maj. Blair, old friends of her parents.

Though unable to get away to spend Thanksgiving with her family, Miss Essary will arrive the day afterward with a classmate, Miss Cynthia Thompson, for a weekend round of parties.

On December 21, Miss Betty Frost will entertain in honor of Miss Essary at a cocktail party in the Chevy Chase home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Norman Frost; and the vening of December 29, Mr. and Mrs. Essary will entertain at dinner in honor of their daughter preceding the Ertegun dance.

Hurleys Issue Party Invitations

Mr. and Mrs. Patrick Hurley have issued invitations to a reception on Thursday, November 20, in honor of their debutante daughter, Miss Ruth Noel Hurley.

The party will take place at 2412 Massachusetts Avenue, the house to which the Hurleys recently moved from Belmont, from 4 until 7 p. m.

Socialites of Capital Stream To Piersons' Festive Party

By Patricia Grady

It was scheduled as a "six to eight" party, but few of Mr. and Mrs. Warren Lee Pierson's guests took the last part of the invitation seriously. Streaming in and out of the Sulgrave Club yesterday afternoon were dozens of top-flight Capital socialites who came from every segment of Washington society, with the emphasis on the Latin-American diplomatic corps—for Chairman of the Export-Import Bank Pierson and his pretty blond wife have spread much south-of-the-border good-will since their recent treks to the Latin countries.

Receiving at the top of the stairs, Mrs. Pierson, whose chic black dress boasted an intriguing up-in-front draped skirt and a yolk of acquamarine, directed her guests into the adjoining room, where a long bar was set up along the wall. Secretary of Commerce Jesse Jones took up a strategic position in the hall and acted as unofficial greeter to the myriads of people whom he seemed to know.

Host Pierson, deciding that his novelist wife could attend to the receiving end of the party, circulated here, there, and everywhere. Mrs. Woodrow Wilson, accompanied by Mrs. Bernard Jones, was one of the first to arrive and first to leave. Senator Tom Connally, greeted by friendly hails on every side, said he was going on to the Shoreham for dinner. The Colombian Ambassador, Gabriel Turbay, engaged in a gesticulating conversation in Spanish with the First Secretary of the Argentine Embassy, Adolfo Scilingo. Mrs. Claude Wickard, who wore a blue be-feathered brown chapeau with her brown suit, had to rush home to get her husband ready to leave for Boston last night.

Mrs. Jesse Jones Wears Black Frock

Mrs. Jesse Jones, who accented her jet-trimmed black frock with a pink rose, found things to talk about with floor-length gowned Mrs. Bruce Smith, who was assisting. Senorita Cristina Michels, who represented her parents, the Chilean Ambassador and Senora de Michels, saw that her friend—"who is partly Chilean"—Miss Yvette Wilcox, met everyone. Mr. and Mrs. Barnet Nover, wearing evening clothes, kept close tab on the time as they were going on to the Attorney General and Mrs. Francis Biddle's dinner. The Dominican Minister and Senora de Troncoso—she wearing a Kelly green hat with her orchid-bedecked silver fox jacket—were greeted effusively by Mrs. Thomas Burke, who husband was not far away. Mrs. Stanley Hornbeck, another assistant, explained that her husband was held to his State Department desk but would be along soon. Mrs. Thurman Arnold nodded at Mme. Emmanuel Lombard, whose pink frou-frou blouse peeked out from her black tailleur, from across the room. The Chinese Ambassador, Hu Shih, drank glass after glass of tomato juice with reckless abandon. He will leave soon for New Orleans to make a speech. Mme. Espil, wife of the Argentine Ambassador, chatted in the hall with a group. Mme. Procope, wife of the Finnish Minister, kept on her Persian lamb-trimmed black coat. Kenneth Watson came without his attractive wife who is spending a few days in New York.

Petite Mrs. Will Clayton, who wore a black pancake hat with her matching dress, came in with her handsome, white-haired husband, who is Deputy Administrator of the RFC. Mme. Fotitch, whose husband the Yugoslav Minister made one of his rare social appearances, topped her mink coat with a hat of matching fur. She and Mrs. Ernest Draper discussed plans for the Yugoslav benefit scheduled to open December 1. Mrs. R. D. Young—she in a paillette-trimmed black dress—chatted with Mme. Yu of the Chinese Embassy. Mrs. Paul V. McNutt, in an eye-catching American Beauty velvet hat, mentioned Ann Archbold's approaching Chinese fete whenever she got a chance and Mrs. Harold Walker—her daughter, Mrs Lawrence Wood Robert was also there—said that too many people pronounce "fete" differently than she did and that she would hereafter refer to it as a "benefit."

Many Notables Seen in Passing

Seen in passing were Mrs. Thurman Arnold, Mr. and Mrs. David School, the Second Secretary of the Argentine Embassy and Mme. Gouthier, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Eaton, Mrs. A. Mitchell Palmer, in a gay red hat; Mr. and Mrs. O. Max Gardner, the Cuban Ambassador and Senora de Concheso, Nelson Rockefeller, Mrs. Eugene Carusi, White House Secretary, Mrs. James M. Holmes, in conversation with Robert Lincoln O'Brien; Mrs. Newbold Walmsley, all in black; the former Minister of Uruguay, J. Richling; the Venezuelan Ambassador, Diogenes Escalente; Mrs. J. Lawrence Houghteling, George Abell, the Military and Air Attache of the Cuban Embassy and Senora de Munilla, she swathed in silver fox; the Philippine Commissioner, Joaquin Elizalde, and literally dozens and dozens of others.

Mme. Soong Entertains China Relief Workers at Oriental Luncheon

Plans for Chinese Fete at Archbold Home Are Discussed

A Chinese hostess, a Chinese menu and a group of prominent Washingtonians working for China Relief combined to make a luncheon yesterday at the home of Mme. T. V. Soong, one of the outstanding parties-with-a-purpose of the season.

The "cause" is, of course, the forthcoming Chinese fete to be held at Mrs. Anne Archbold's home, 3905 Reservoir Road on Tuesday, November 25, from 2 to 5 o'clock. Funds raised thereby will go to the Chinese Industrial Cooperatives and plans for the event as a whole are already being noised abroad by some of Washington's most prominent women.

At luncheon time yesterday most members of the committee in charge, including Mrs. Archbold herself, were making their way into Mme. Soong's home on Woodland Drive. The hostess, trimly turned out in a native costume — black crepe, edged with a narrow band of cerise velvet—was a lovely illustration of what the well-dressed Chinese woman is wearing this season. According to the latest decree of Shanghai designers, the long, loose-fitting Chinese robe is "out," and very much "in" is the knee-high frock, with a snugly fitted bodice and short sleeves.

Hostess' Sister Among Guests

Several ladies of the Chinese Embassy assisted the hostess, and also among those present was Mme. Soong's sister, Mme. Shih, who recently arrived here from China for an indefinite stay.

The menu, served up in authentic Oriental style, was prepared by a master hand—a Chinese cook who came to Washington from his native country only a month ago and has been busy supplying recipes to many of Mme. Soong's friends ever since. Soy bean soup, piping hot, was served first; then came chicken and rice, roast pork, chow mein, shrimp and green tea. Final course was almond soup and a sweet dumpling, light as a feather and delicately flavored.

Mrs. Archbold, who spent a good many months on a Chinese junk and has made numerous extended visits to China, had no difficulty eating with chopsticks. Mrs. Gifford Pinchot was another who managed her meal in the native manner without any trouble. All the Chinese ladies present used the chopsticks, of course, and a few others took a hurried lesson in how to hold them. Fortunately, however, for the uninitiated there were knives and forks, all put to use in good time.

Many Notables Attend Luncheon

Over the luncheon table, guests completed plans for the Chinese fete that will have as one of its outstanding features the sale of numerous Chinese objects of art many of which once were effects of Mrs. Archbold's famous junk, the Cheng Ho.

Mrs. William D. Connor described in detail how she had happened to come into possession of a prize Pekingese that will have a prominent role at the sale. Mrs. Paul V. McNutt, smartly attired in black frock, trimmed with ermine and a matching hat, wondered if provisions should be made for District police to handle the crowd expected at Mrs. Archbold's home on November 25. Mrs. J. L. Houghteling, Mrs. Charles L. McNary, Miss Elizabeth Howry, Mrs. John Allan Dougherty, Mrs. Warren Lee Pierson and Miss Anne Randolph were others offering valuable suggestions as to the working out of final plans for the fete.

Mrs. Harold Walker was the only one present who could boast of already having sold a block of tickets. "I disposed of 50 yesterday afternoon," she said, "and most of them are going to the British."

Walker Party Set for Today

Mrs. Walker, incidentally, will entertain at a tea this afternoon in the interest of further plans for China relief. The party will take place at the home of her daughter, Mrs. "Chip" Robert, at 2110 Le Roy Place. Receiving with the hostess will be two junior members of Washington society, little Alice Birnie Robert and Charlotte McNary, wearing the "very latest things" from Peiping, China. Also in gay Chinese costumes will be Mrs. Robert and Mrs. Warren Lee Pierson.

Features of the afternoon's entertainment will be informal talks by Mrs. Pierson and Mrs. Gifford Pinchot, who will briefly describe the work of the Chinese industrial cooperatives. Every State in the Union will be represented among the guests and everybody present will be asked to cooperate in making the Chinese fete on November 25 an outstanding success.

Assisting Mrs. Walker at her tea this afternoon—from 4 to 6 o'clock—will be Mrs. Archbold, Mrs. McNary and Mrs. Paul V. McNutt, who is chairman of the fete.

Mathews Dick will be hosts. Tuesday Mrs. Kent Legare will entertain them at dinner, and the following day Mr. Reed will sail.

Dramatics is her real love and she has just finished playing in the three-week run of the Civic Theater's "The American Way." She is also putting in her bit for defense and holds down a job in the Department of Agriculture.

Miss Kirby, who is the daughter of Maj. Maxwell Kirby, U. S. A. (retired), has led the life of an Army child, attending schools in California and Hawaii. She has also taken a business course more recently. She is a gifted pianist, horsewoman and dancer.

Mrs. Stewart, Mrs. Gordon Greet Friends

By Carolyn Bell

Cave-dwelling society had its innings yesterday afternoon at the party given by Mrs. Gustav Stewart and Mrs. English Gordon at Mrs. Stewart's lovely residence on R Street. Something of a "homecoming" was yesterday's fete, for Mrs. Stewart has only recently opened her house here for the season. She will be joined for weekends by Mr. Stewart, who is engaged in business in New York. Mrs. Gordon has a full-time defense job on her hands and will be here more or less indefinitely.

Wending their way up the curved stairway, guests had a chance to glimpse the lovely old tapestries and fine old paintings hung on the wall. Receiving in the drawing room at the head of the stairs were the two hostesses. Mrs. Stewart wore a chartreuse dinner frock with a peplum of black chantilly lace. Mrs. Gordon had chosen an amethyst crepe that swept the floor.

"I call this extension town," said R. L. Jenkins—one of the few nonWashingtonians—who was down from Philadelphia. He is a great friend of Mrs. Stewart, the former Ruth Hitchcock, daughter of the late Senator Gilbert H. Hitchcock. Mr. Jenkins, who is here doing defense work, maintains that you get nowhere in this town, without an extension. "Why I can't even talk to my best friends," he wailed.

Mrs. Merryman Pours Tea

Guests gathered in clusters in the candlelit drawing room . . . in the adjoining room, where a bar had been set up and in the lovely dining room, where tea and coffee were being dispensed. Mrs. Buchanan Merryman, wearing a bright red feather in her hat, poured tea at one end and Mrs. George Barnett, clad in a smart ensemble, was offering coffee at the other. Later Mrs. Gilbert Hitchcock took a turn at the urn. Huge silver candelbra held tall lighted tapers and were placed in other points of the room and a large bowl of red roses centered the room.

This lovely old home was formerly leased to the Minister and Mrs. Nevile Butler until their return to England recently. Mrs. Edward Finkenstaedt, wearing a smart wool frock in a grape shade, chatted with a group of guests. An early arrival was James H. F. Cromwell, who was immediately the center of attention. Not far away, Mrs. L. W. Robert held court with a gay group.

Senator Tom Connally, easily discernible by his flowing locks, chatted with the Minister of Luxembourg and Mme. Le Gallais. She wore a smart broadtail coat over her all-black ensemble. Miss Alys Dowing was there, as was Mrs. George Maurice Morris, whose black hat sported a flowing wimple. Mrs. James Houghteling was glimpsed dashing down the steps wearing a bottle green ensemble trimmed in skunk.

Mme. Wessel Attends Party

"Do you know I have a house in Washington that I can't rent!" and this from Mme. Wessel, wife of the Military Attache of the Swedish Legation, who wants to move and can't. Yesterday she wore a wine colored coat trimmed in lynx and a matching hat. Clarence Hewes was there, as were Mrs. McCeney Werlich, wearing a white hat with her dark frock; Robert O'Donnell Hinkley, Mrs. John Allen Dougherty, George Abell, in a dinner jacket, and the Misses Patten.

The Hunt Country

By Nina Carter Tabb

THIS WILL BE a very gay week in Virginia, with numerous parties being planned. At her estate, Montpelier, Mrs. Marion du Pont Scott will entertain at her annual buffet luncheon at noon before the Montpelier Hunt races are caled at 1:30 p. m. There are five races on the card, including two hurdle races, a flat race and two races over the brush.

Feature of the day is one of the latter, "The Noel Laing Steeplechase Handicap," about 2½ mile for 4-year-olds and upward, which is named after the late Noel Laing, one of the best and most popular amateur riders of America. The owner of the winner receives the Perpetual Trophy, which he keeps until 30 days prior to the next running of the annual race. The names of the winning horse, its owner and rider are inscribed on the trophy, and in addition the owner and rider each get a replica of the trophy as their absolute property.

Judging by the number of entries, G. Dudley Gray, secretary of the race meeting, expects this to be the best year they have ever had. On the committee are Mrs. Marion du Pont Scott, William du Pont, jr., G. Dudley Gray, Hugh B. Craig, F. Wallis Armstrong, Carroll Bassett, John W. McComb, Jack Skinner, and Richard Wallach, jr.

Another before-the-races luncheon will be given by Mrs. Gray Dunnington at noon at her home, Montebello, near Grange. Other parties this weekend include the wild game supper Saturday that Mrs. Frances Parkinson Keyes and Mrs. Frank Mason Dillard have sent out invitations for at Tradition, Mrs. Keyes charming home in Alexandria. It is being given in compliment to the collaborators on Mrs. Keyes new book, "All That Glitters."

MANY PARTIES will be given from now until November 22, the wedding day of Miss Rosalind Huidekoper and Dr. Hugh Judge Jewett, of Baltimore. Mrs. Prescott Foster Huidekoper, the bride-elect's mother, has sent out invitations to the marriage for 4 o'clock at Christ Church, Millwood, Clarke County, Va. A reception will follow immediately at Long Branch, the home of the bride's grandmother, Mrs. Hugh Nelson.

The attendants Miss Huidekoper and Dr. Jewett have chosen include her sister, Mrs. J. Cornelius Rathborne, of Westburg, Long Island, formerly Miss Nancy Huidekoper, of Baltimore and Millwood, who will be matron of honor, and her other sister, Miss Page Huidekoper, of Washington, who will be maid of honor. Bridesmaids are to be Miss Dagmar Pierce, of Milton, Mass.; Mrs. Lincoln Davis, of Marblehead, Mass.; Miss Katrine Greene and Mrs. Sherman Joost, jr., of New York City; Miss Agnes Mitchell, Mrs. Henry Post Mitchell, Miss Eloise Page and Miss Margaret Della Mead, of Millwood and Boyce; Miss Rosalie Nelson, of Winchester; Miss Anne Jewett, sister of the bridegroom, and Mrs. W. Page Dame, jr., of Baltimore; Mrs. Ellason Downs and Mrs. Robert N. Downs 3d, of Wilmington, Del.

The bride will be given in marriage by her brother, Prescott Foster Huidekoper, jr., of Harvard University, who will come to Virginia for the wedding. Dr. Jewett will have John Scott Keech, of New York, as best man, and ushers will be Charles Fendall Cushing, of Cleveland, Ohio; Dr. Hugh Warren, of Rochester, N. Y.; Dr. Arthur Greely, of New York; John Silver, of Chestnut Hill, Pa.; Dr. Samuel Vest, of Charlottesville, Va.; William Marbury, jr., Dr. John Parsons, Dr. R. Carmichael Tilghman, Bayard Fonda, S. Colston Young, Francis Williams and Alston Vander Horst, all of Baltimore. Among those who are planning parties for the couple are Mr. and Mrs. William Bell Watkins, Capt. and Mrs. Ewart Johnston and Miss Agnes Mitchell.

The Federal Diary

By Jerry Kluttz

Weather Bureau Hums With Defense Activity

Weather Bureau is a bustling defense agency. Several hundred new employes have been and will be hired . . . the bureau is being reorganized and decentralized . . . all because of the demand on the agency for information on the weather. Everyone talks about the weather but now the bureau is doing something about it . . . by giving us more information to talk about. Special forecasts are made in the areas where munition factories are located. It seems that special precautions are taken in a factory when there is a thunderstorm and the bureau must sound the warning by its forecasts to safeguard the all-important factories.

Shipping of defense goods, chiefly on the Great Lakes and inland waterways, is dependent on the weather and the bureau now makes special forecasts for shippers. Both the Army and the Navy have thousands of additional planes in the air . . . and plane travel is determined by the weather . . . another big and growing job for the bureau.

Faced with additional duties and larger personnel, Weather Bureau Chief F. W. Reichelderfer is reorganizing his agency to prevent future hardships on employes. The stock system of Federal chiefs is to build up a large staff here and decentralize later. This policy causes untold hardships on the employes who are transferred. Reichelderfer is reversing the procedure. He's setting up regional offices and staffing them with new and old employes already in the field. His system makes sense.

Reichelderfer said yesterday that not more than half a dozen employes here would be moved to the new field offices. And the employes being transferred will be given better jobs. The bureau is being divided into seven regions with headquarters at Atlanta, Seattle, San Francisco, Fort Worth, Kansas City, and New York besides Washington. One of the problems facing the bureau is adequate personnel. There's a shortage of meteorologists and the bureau has instituted comprehensive courses to train its employes for the jobs.

The Rosenman Report

The Rosenman report on the dozen Federal housing agencies is reported to have been sent to the White House yesterday. An interesting rumor surrounds the Rosenman study . . . that it covers only such things as a huge post-war housing program to make jobs . . . building materials and the like . . . that the report didn't deal with personalities which were left squarely up to the President. Samuel Rosenman, the New York justice who made the study at the suggestion of the President, is said to have recommended a plan designed to coordinate the defense housing agencies.

Apparently the President himself will have to make an effective shake-up of the defense housing heads, if there is one. There's no question about it that plans already have been made to shift Brig. Gen. Philip Fleming from Wage and Hour to the Federal Works Agency. Federal Works Agency Administrator John Carmody would be placed in another job. The easing out of USHA Administrator Nathan Straus also was under consideration but Straus has played good politics for himself by screaming about the inefficiency of the housing agencies. If Straus were given any other job now it would appear to be retaliation. A shake-up of the office of Defense Housing Coordinator Charles Palmer also was studied.

Straus yesterday confirmed a story first revealed here weeks ago, that USHA was planning to move its five regional offices out of Washington. He told the House Public Building and Grounds Committee that the Budget Bureau was studying a request for $100,000 to move 320 employes to the regional offices. It was first estimated that 600 employes would have to be transferred.

Reinstated Federal employes must redeposit funds with the Civil Service retirement fund in order to be eligible for a retirement annuity. Thousands are being reinstated now as the Government expands. The redeposits must be made with interest. Installment payments will be accepted . . . Civil Service test: general construction inspector, $1620 to $2600.

Is There a Bugler Around?

Remember the old World War song about some day I'm going to kill the bugler? Well, times have changed. Private Neal Lozins, the present bugler at Fort Meade, Md., is due for a discharge soon. And the boys are worried. Reason? A late reveille for the detachment would mean withholding of week-end passes. And for those passes the men would go through fire and water.

Answer Collect, Adolf!

Apparently taking a cue from Congressional action on the Neutrality Act, the Eastman Kodak Co. boldly defied Hitlerian authority in District Court yesterday. The company filed suit against Friedrich Deckel and Michael Burger, of Munich, Germany. It charged patent violations and requested that the court order the defendants to answer.

British Women Take War In Their Stride, Speaker Says

It's not only a woman's world. That business in Europe is a woman's war, 250 members of the gentler sex were assured last night by a woman who has observed bombings in England for a year.

The speaker was graying, soft-spoken Mrs. Hume Wrong, wife of the Counselor of the Canadian Legation here, and her story at the fifth annual Wilson Teachers' College Women's Club mother-daughter banquet was how their sisters under the skin in Britain are taking it on the chin—and coming back for more.

"I know of an old grandmother," she said, "who was so delighted at the sound of a whistling bomb that she got out of bed to tell her son about it when her first one came down.

"This old woman told her son she was very interested to hear how a whistling bomb would sound.

"That," added Mrs. Wrong, "is the stuff the people of England are made of. Hitler will never beat the British by ruthless bombing. It has the opposite effect."

Mrs. Wrong was in England from February, 1940, to January, 1941.

Miss Dorothy Bowen was toastmistress at the banquet, held in the Lee Sheraton Hotel. Dr. Walter Hager, president of the college; Mrs. Henry Grattan Doyle, president of the Board of Education for District public schools; Miss Jessie LaSalle, in charge of research for the schools, and Miss Anna Halberg, faculty adviser to the Women's Club, were among those extending greetings.

Chest Drive Nets $135,633 In First Day

You can trample on them without moving a foot, or strangle them without moving a finger. You can do them the most harm by doing nothing. They're weak and poor and sick. The persons aided by the Community Chest can't put up much of a fight alone against the world.

So yesterday, for the fourteenth year, Washington set about doing something about such needs in 1942.

The Community Chest, at its first campaign meeting in the Hotel Willard, announced that it had collected $135,633.35, or 6.76 per cent, of a two million dollar quota for carrying out a city-wide program of help.

The meeting itself was not unusual. There were the customary speeches and courtesies. But behind it all was dynamic force.

It meant that on the way is food, shelter, clothing, medical care—and hope, for thousands who are in want of them.

The intention was that during the two-week campaign, as there are more meetings and as receipt of more and more money is announced, the need will finally be met.

The Government Unit of the Chest, it was announced yesterday, had collected $34,485 of the total; the Group Solicitation Unit, $72,098.35; the Metropolitan Unit, $27,410; the District Government Unit, $1645.

That money gave hope for a future to thousands of persons aided by 39 social agencies in and around Washington.

Yesterday's meeting, and the meetings to come, give a green light to the hundreds of volunteers and low-paid workers who for years have been striving in these agencies to help unfortunate neighbors.

Yesterday's meeting was the first of eight. It was presided over by John Clifford Folger, general campaign chairman, and was attended by about 700 workers.

Policemen Bag 12 In Jaywalking Drive

Two Second Precinct Station policemen went on an antijaywalking crusade last night and within a couple of hours picked up 12 persons and charged them with violation of the pedestrian traffic-control law.

Privates R. E. Bright and E. A. Johnson started out at Seventh and K Streets Northwest and by the time they had reached S Street an even dozen violators had been arrested, while a score of others were warned.

White House Yule Talk Plans Made

President's Message On Christmas Eve To Be Delivered From South Portico

President Roosevelt's annual Christmas Eve message to the Nation will be delivered from the White House south portico this year for the first time.

The public will be admitted into the spacious grounds of the Executive Mansion for the community tree lighting ceremonies and a public address system geared to accomodate 50,000 pairs of ears will be installed.

These and other plans were disclosed yesterday at the first meeting of the full committee on arrangements, headed by Miss Sybil Baker.

Shifting of the program to the White House grounds is reportedly at the President's own request. It is believed he asked that the ceremony be held there to heighten the feeling that the Nation's community tree is being illuminated right in the homes of each of the millions of radio listeners who will hear the 30-minute broadcast.

Two spruce trees are now being transplanted in the lower south grounds, Edward J. Kelly, Office of National Capital Parks, informed the committee. The present plan is to conduct the Christmas Eve ceremony at the White House every year henceforward, alternating the two trees.

The public address system will be provided by the Navy, Miss Baker said. Music will be by the Marine Band.

Anticipating a mammoth turnout, Capt. Mark Raspberry, of U. S. Park Police, recommended that spectators leave their automobiles at home to keep traffic congestion and parking problems down to the minimum.

Chairman Baker was authorized to appoint a national committee, as was done last year, whose chairman will present Mr. Roosevelt to the radio and in-person audiences.

Next session of the arrangemen's will be on November 28 at Taft House Inn, where yesterday's meeting was held.

Concert by Salzedos Displays Harpists' Deft Adaptations

C. C. Cappel presents the Salzedo Concert Ensemble (Carlos Salzedo, harp and piano; Marjorie Call Salzedo, harp; Rene Le Roy, flute; Janos Scholz, violoncello) on Thursday night in Constitution Hall. Program of music by Handel, Bach, Faure, Davidov, Widor, Roussel, Debussy and Salzedo.

Before memories of their two concerts last summer in Meridian Hill Park had begun to fade, the Salzedo Concert Ensemble appeared in Constitution Hall last evening with a program partly reminiscent and partly new. Whatever they play has the charm of unfamiliarity, for the tonal combinations of two harps, flute and violoncello is one not frequently encountered. In fact, its rarity has necessitated the arrangement of many of the compositions they use, and the adaptations have been skillfully done by Carlos Salzedo.

BROWN

An instance fo his deftness was displayed in Handel's Trio Sonata in D major with which the concert started. Originally scored for two violins or flutes and thoroughbass, the work had to be translated into terms of different tonal textures and weights, without essentially distorting the balance of parts.

Salzedo's arrangement for two harps of Bach's sixth French suite resulted in some interesting effects of magnification. The set of dances sounded as though they emanated from two harpsichords of remarkable resonance and sustaining power, such harpsichords as might have been dreamed of but never constructed. A comparable enlargement of tonal vibrancies was manifest in the transcription of Debussy's "Children's Corner" for the entire ensemble.

It was pleasant to hear again Widor's attractive Chorale and Variations for harp and orchestra, even with the orchestral score reduced to pianistic dimensions.

Rene Le Roy introduced a novelty in Albert Roussel's "Joueurs de Flute," a suite of four pieces which are studies in styles of flute playing. First one hears the "fine, careless rapture" of Pan in roulades and cadences of no definite pattern, then the pastoral pipings of Tityros, the Hellene prototype of all shepherds. In "Krishna" the composer tried, not altogether happily, to present a Hindu raga.

Mr. Salzedo's solo was devoted to his own extraordinary "Scintillation," a piece which utilizes through dance forms all possible devices of harp technique: Janos Scholz chose for his single numbers an arioso by Bach, a transcription of Faure's beautiful song, "Apres un Reve," and Davidov's "Am Springbrunnen."

Treasury's Red Cross Unit Exhibits Work

Products of Treasury Department Red Cross volunteers—from bandages to knitted "beanies"—were modeled at the Bureau of Engraving and Printing auditorium yesterday in celebration of a birthday.

Treasury employes were dismissed from work at 3:30 p. m. to attend the rally and exhibit, which marked the first anniversary of the Treasury Department Unit of the American Red Cross. More than 3000 of them attended.

Models paraded before the audience in samples of the 47,413 knitted garments and 26,444 sewn garments turned out by the unit during its year's existence. Others presented tableaux and booths to exhibit the work.

The products represented 159,920 hours of work, said Mrs. Henry Morgenthau, wife of the Secretary of the Treasury and honorary chairman of the unit, who told the volunteers she was "delighted and astounded" when she learned how much had been done.

Other speakers included Mrs. Nellie Tayloe Ross, director of the Mint and general chairman of the unit, and Miss Mabel T. Boardman, of the American Red Cross.

The bureau of accounts took first place in a contest for the best booth exhibit. First place in modeling competition went to the office of the register, which presented a tableau.

Meantime it was announced that Mrs. J. W. Flett, a member of the home nursing committee of the District Chapter, will present certificates to members of a graduating class in home nursing today at 2 p. m. in the home of Mrs. Vitile K. Gelman, 2730 Wisconsin Avenue Northwest, instructor.

At the graduation exercises Mrs. Raymond C. Mackay, vice chairman of District Chapter, volunteer special services, will speak, as will Mrs. Charles A. Goldsmith and Mrs. Morgenthau.

150 Pupils Hold Open House to Demonstrate Skill

Spurred on by the demands of the defense program, the Dennison Vocational School is shuttling its pupils—all girls—through an intensive course of training and sending them into private industry and the Government service to take jobs as trained workers.

The school's 150 pupils held an open-house celebration last night to show the public how they acquire skill as office workers, beauty operators, waitresses, dressmakers, and old-fashioned housewives by actually doing the job in school.

Mrs. Mary Resh, principal, said the girls get jobs as soon as they acquire the necessary training. Last year 50 per cent left school before graduation; this year, more than 75 positions have been left unfilled.

The defense program has created a tremendous demand for office workers, waitresses and beauty operators, Mrs. Resh said.

"It may seem funny to class beauty operators as defense workers, but they do an important morale job, you know," she said.

One of the courses trains the girls to take care of children. Working mothers leave their children in the care of the school where they receive the "latest" in scientific child handling.

A special feature is the brides' course with a completely furnished apartment to use as a laboratory. In the cosmetology course, the girls keep each other's hands well manicured and each other's hair set to conform with Dame Fashion's most pressing demands.

Fall Victim's Death Declared Accidental

A certificate of accidental death was issued by Deputy Coroner Christopher J. Murphy yesterday after an autopsy was performed on the body of William D. Dixon, 33, of 1832 Biltmore Street Northwest, who died at Emergency Hospital.

The post mortem disclosed that Dixon died of head injuries received when he fell from a porch at his home Monday. His fall was caused, Murphy said, by an attack of dizziness.

Easing of Rule On Rooming Houses Is Hit

Current proposals to amend the zoning regulations so as to permit the establishment of rooming and boarding houses in restricted and semirestricted areas was opposed last night by the American University Park Citizens Association.

Civilian defense and air raid precautions plans were discussed by Col. S. F. Mashbir, deputy air raid warden, and A. A. Murphy, area civilian defense chairman.

Congress Heights

J. Louis Gelbman was elected president of the Congress Heights Citizens Association for the third time last night. Other officers named were: First vice president, Benson Taylor; second vice president, Mrs. Maude Liebrand; corresponding secretary, Mrs. Edna Dulin (for the sixth time); financial secretary, Mrs. Alma Allen; treasurer, Mrs. Loretta Landon. Delegates to the Federation of Citizens Association are Benson Taylor and Emil E. Chapman.

The association went on record asking for a better water system and greater water pressure in case of fire. It also asked for ten additional policemen in the Eleventh Precinct because of the rapid growth of the area.

Compulsory Parking Plan Is Indorsed

Commission Backs Proposal Requiring Builders to Provide For Auto Facilities

All office and apartment buildings erected in the future should be required to provide off-street parking space for their occupants, the National Capital Park and Planning Commission held yesterday.

Opening their two-day monthly meeting, the planners approved proposed amendments to the District of Columbia Zoning Act which would effect the reform.

For private structures, residential or business, the size of the parking facility would be left to the Zoning Commission to decide. For Federal office buildings, the space would be sufficient to accommodate at least 10 per cent and no more than 20 per cent of the building's workers, according to the planning body's recommendation.

Decision was reserved on a proposal to relax zoning regulations by permitting householders in single-dwelling neighborhoods to take in more than two roomers or boarders. A public hearing on this plan, which is an outgrowth of housing congestion in the Capital, is scheduled to be held at the District Building December 3.

The commission directed Harland Bartholomew, one of its consultants, to try to determine whether there is a furnished room shortage and, if so, whether the need would be remedied by adopting the proposed change.

Speeding other housing expansion along toward reality, the planners indorsed a War Department program for a 70-unit community to be erected on a corner of the St. Elizabeths Hospital farm for Bolling Field officers and enlisted men and an Alley Dwelling Authority plan for a 500-dwelling project on Stanton Road Southeast.

Approval also was given the construction of a dormitory building for women defense workers at Fifteenth and Euclid Streets Northwest, provided that the building is set back far enough to permit widening of Euclid Street and thereby eliminate the present intersection bottleneck.

Full approval was withheld for the huge residential project which Metropolitan Life Insurance Co. is building on the outskirts of Alexandria, pending submission of evidence it will not run counter to zoning regulations and will not interfere with the Alexandria street plan.

Police Shake-up Shows Results

By John Singerhoff
Post Staff Writer

Washington, today, is not the crime-ridden city a Congressional subcommittee found it to be last July.

The Metropolitan Police Department, held then to be responsible for "disgraceful crime conditions in the Nation's Capital," has been rejuvenated and reorganized, as the subcommittee demanded it should be.

Effects of the rebuilding have been far-reaching and such that scornful Congressmen of a few months ago now applaud the local force.

Following is an account of what has happened to date:

The superintendent of police was retired. His two assistants —the director of personnel and the chief of detectives—were told to request retirement. A third inspector was ordered retired by the Commissioners.

New commanding officers were assigned to 8 of the 13 precincts.

Five new inspectors, six new captains, six lieutenants and eight sergeants were named.

The Detective Bureau, admitted to be the "weakest link in the Police Department," by the then chief of police, Ernest W. Brown, has undergone a complete metamorphosis: The chief of detectives retired. His assistant was promoted "out of the bureau." Squads were enlarged. Detectives were centralized, and new squad heads were assigned or reassigned.

More than a score of lieutenants and sergeants were transferred.

With things done, new life began to flow through the Police Department. There was more enthusiasm. The morale-breaking "fraternalism" of the old regime disappeared.

Before the House District Committee, outraged by the rape-strangulation of Jessie Elizabeth Strieff, appointed the investigating subcommittee, Commissioner John Russell Young had indicated his desire for a general "weeding out of dead wood."

He had conveyed his ideas to Maj. Ernest W. Brown, then superintendent, and as a result Inspectors I. H. Edwards, personnel director, and Bernard W. Thompson, chief of detectives, both assistant superintendents of police, had been told to ask for retirement.

Inspector William G. Stott, custodian of all police equipment and property, was retired by executive order.

These changes had been made before the subcommittee hearings began.

But the probers were not satisfied that enough had been done. Neither was Commissioner Young who attended all of the hearings. The committee's final report insisted upon a complete reorganization. In full agreement, Young promised "drastic changes."

Maj. Brown decided to retire and on August 15 left the department to exhaust some 80 days accumulated leave.

Inspector Edward J. Kelly was immediately elevated to the rank of assistant superintendent, filling Edwards' vacancy, and was designated "acting superintendent."

His orders were to reorganize. He carried them out with vigor.

He named Harvey G. Callahan, progressive young commander of the First Precinct, executive officer and second in command of the department. He chose Capt. Richard H. Mansfield of the Ninth Precinct, "a man with detective experience," as chief of detectives. He put Capt. Milton D. Smith, a disciplinarian, in charge of all police equipment and property.

He demoted the chief of the homicide squad from the grade of acting lieutenant to detective sergeant and transferred him. He enlarged the squad and put Detective Sergt. Jeremiah Flaherty in command.

Results were immediate and brought praise instead of condemnation from Congress.

Jarvis Catoe was arrested and he confessed the murders of Rose Abramowitz and Jessie Strieff. He confessed also killing Ada Puller, Lucy Kidwell and Mattie Stewart, Negroes.

Three other vicious rape cases were solved and their perpetrators given the death penalty.

Representatives William A. Schulte (Democrat), of Indiana, chairman of the subcommittee, and F. Edward Hebert (Democrat), of Louisiana, most outspoken of the prober-critics, both commended the new police administration.

"It is gratifying to see the progress that the Washington Police Department has made under the direction of Maj. Kelly," Representative Hebert said. "You wouldn't think it is the same organization."

Congressman Schulte addressed a communication to Maj. Kelly after Catoe's arrest, congratulating him "for the good work."

After Maj. Kelly established a new high command in the department, he turned his attention upon the commanding officers in the precincts. Three precinct commanders were transferred and newly-promoted captains were assigned to four other precincts and the Traffic Division.

In the meantime, Ira E. Keck, who was acting chief of detectives during the Congressional survey, was "passed over" for the Detective Bureau post in favor of Mansfield. Keck was made a district inspector, however, by way of compromise.

It was explained at that time, Maj. Kelly wanted "all new blood" at the helm of the Detective Bureau and wanted none of the old policies carried over.

A fifth inspectorship, vacant since last spring when Inspector William E. Holmes retired, was filled by the promotion of Capt. Clarence Talley, of the Seventh Precinct. He was made night supervisor, a job which was abolished several years ago because "no inspector would work nights."

In the precincts, Capts. Oscar J. Letterman, of the Twelfth Precinct, and Walter Storm, Third Precinct, were ordered to change places, and Capt. Clement P. Cox, Eighth Precinct, was moved to the Ninth Precinct.

Five lieutenants were made captains and assigned as follows: Robert C. Pearce, First Precinct; Archie M. Winfree, Seventh Precinct; Arthur C. Belt, Eighth Precinct; Clarence Lutz, Tenth Precinct, and William J. Cunningham, Traffic Bureau.

Lieut. Robert J. Barrett, Third Precinct, and former ace detective, was promoted to the rank of acting captain and was made assistant chief of detectives.

Capt. John H. Fowler, Thirteenth Precinct, considered one of the ablest executives in the department, was ordered to police headquarters to serve in an advisory capacity and to organize the Washington Police Academy, a training school for detectives.

Maj. Kelly abolished a "Special Investigations Squad" headed by Acting Capt. Earl P. Hartman, a group which several policemen in their testimony to the committee had declared was made up of spies on their own activities.

Hartman was demoted to a lieutenant and transferred to the Seventh Precinct, and the personnel of his squad was split up. Some of his men were sent to precincts. Others continue their work of investigating subversive activity but are assigned to the Detective Bureau.

Command of the latter investigations was returned to Detective Lieut. Horace Lineburg from whom the work was taken when Hartman's squad was organized.

Disbandment of the spy squad brought three cheers from the department. It had been a bogey man to the man on the beat, and it was for this reason that Kelly dissolved it.

As detective chief, Mansfield found that detectives were working at odds with patrolmen and that there was much overlapping of effort. He ordered all 70 detective sergeants centralized at the Detective Bureau. Previously, 22 men had been assigned to various precincts.

A general assignment squad was organized "to do away with so darn many specialists." It is Mansfield's opinion that detective sergeants should be qualified to work in all sections of the city instead of only in particular districts. Assignments in the new squad are meted out in order "and the men will work, or else."

At the outset, Mansfield told the investigators they were "starting with a clean slate."

"But I warn you," he declared, "you will be held accountable for your assignments and any man not able to hold up his end will be discarded."

In order to keep a closer check on the men, Mansfield abolished the system of "rotating" cases on the Detective Bureau arrest book. Only the name of the man who made the arrest now appears on the book. Before, cases were rotated and many times a man on vacation would get credit for the work of another.

An office duty detail was ordered, relieving all but four detectives of the necessity of spending 24 hours every two weeks on office duty. Four veterans were assigned to the job on a full-time basis.

Mansfield established an "up-to-date" system in the Identification Bureau, a fundamental police necessity heretofore not available because "it was too much trouble to keep up."

Six new detective sergeants were named and eight new precinct detectives were appointed. The robbery, homicide, check and fraud and general assignment squads all received new squad leaders.

Inspector Callahan dug his teeth into the administrative work of the department. He discarded outmoded files and substituted streamlined methods in place of antiquated ones which had not been changed "for 50 years."

He directed appointment of a new trial board which was decided upon by Maj. Kelly and the Commissioners. He approved a plan whereby precinct commanders have authority to try men under their command for minor breaches of discipline rather than citing the man before a trial board.

Callahan also brought about a four-man night inspector detail. Previously there was only one or two men doing this work. This detail travels the precincts and checks on observance of police regulations.

Maj. Kelly is proud of the Police Department today, "but I haven't finished yet," he asserts.

"There are still many changes to be made. And then all department investigators will attend the Police Academy in the future. This training should increase their efficiency and make all men good investigators.

"I have done what I think was necessary to make our department an outstanding one," he states. "And I will continue to do the best I know how for the Commissioners and the citizens of the District."

This Morning

—With Shirley Povich

We will always consider that the prize for platitudes was attained by the stunned fan who, on leaving Griffith Stadium where he had just seen the Chicago Bears nose out the Redskins, 73-0, last year, remarked: "Well, the best team won."

POVICH

Come Sunday, they'll meet again—the Bears and Redskins—this time at Chicago, and, if he likes, our bright observer can utter another truism: The Redskins won't be suffering from overconfidence.

The Redskins are supposed to be an improved team this season and on that theory we can work out a simple arithmetical equation; Granting that the Bears are no weaker than in 1940, the Redskins could improve 70 points and still lose to the Bears by the margin of a field goal.

Of course the Bears will not beat the Redskins again by anything resembling that 73-0 score, and it is even conceivable that the Redskins might win. Certainly things like that can happen in football and we have to take you no farther than three weeks before the 73-0 slaughter when the Redskins licked the Bears, 7 to 3.

On that latter Sunday afternoon you had a Redskin team that, three weeks later, was to get beat by 11 touchdowns, beating their conquerors-to-be rather decisively. Make no mistake, the Redskins clearly outplayed the Bears in that 7-3 game. And they took the field as favorites to win the game they lost, 73-0.

Bears Fueled With Animus

That 73-0 game was, of course, a freak of football that may never be paralleled. The last half dozen Chicago touchdowns came cheaply, with the Redskins desperate, demoralized and in panic. The Bears were staging a merciless show of rubbing it in on a team whose owner they didn't like. The same T-formation that couldn't score a touchdown against the Redskins three weeks before was fueled with animus.

On Sunday, the revenge motif will be on the side of the Redskins, and Coach Ray Flaherty, who always lays great store by such circumstances, is thankful for that. It eases his job of firing up his athletes for the task at hand. Flaherty doesn't have to point out or drive home the fact that beating the Bears is a task. The Bears pointed it out to the Redskins very eloquently in that 73-0 game.

However, Flaherty may have been the victim of a brutal break a couple of weeks ago when the Bears were sailing along unbeaten this season. The Redskin coach would have preferred that the Bears come up to the Redskin game unbeaten for his own psychological purposes, but the Green Bay Packers ruined his little dream by slapping down the Bears. That means, as far as Flaherty is concerned, that the Bears on Sunday will not be suffering from too much cockiness. That defeat by the Packers roused the Bears to new fury against Cleveland last week. That fury is very apt to endure through Sunday afternoon.

It hasn't been a very happy week altogether for the Redskins. There was that beating by the Brooklyn Dodgers and the injury to Dick Todd. Of all the men the Redskins can ill afford to be without when they face the Bears, with the exception of Sammy Baugh, Todd heads the list. He is the best safety man on the squad and the only Redskin who could have overhauled George McAfee, as Todd did, on the 3-yard line, in the last minute of the Redskins' 7-3 victory.

Redskin Line Shoved Around by Dodgers

Sunday's game is the game in which Flaherty hoped to have all his speed available, but with Todd out for the season, and Ed Justice, another fast back also injured, the Redskins' speed on defense has taken an awful beating. With the Bear backs' habit of breaking through the line and turning the ends in their sorties into an open field well known, the Redskins' secondary defense will be carrying a terrific load.

There was more misery for Flaherty last week at Brooklyn. Just when the Redskin coach was beginning to acquire complete confidence in his line, his line was vastly outplayed by the Dodgers. Brooklyn broke through to block a Sammy Baugh kick and convert it into a touchdown, and that Dodger line was giving the Redskin forwards a fine shoving around in scoring territory.

It is no comfort to Flaherty that the Bears have a better line than the Dodgers; at least it is so rated. Add it all up and you'll probably come to the reasonable conclusion that Sammy Baugh, on Sunday, will be toting almost the complete offensive burden of the Redskins. The Redskins are apt to go only as far as Baugh's passes will take them. He's a good guy to have on your side, but there's a limit to even Baugh's skill.

On the Line

—With CONSIDINE

New York, Nov. 13.—What interests you, buddy?

BOXING?—Two heavyweights who have sweated their ways down into the light heavyweight division will fight for that title tomorrow night at the Garden. Gus Lesnevich, a game old plodder who holds the tarnished crown that once gleamed brightly on the head of the likes of Bob Fitzsimmons, steamed down from 185. Tami Mauriello, his flashy opponent, came down from 180.

CONSIDINE

They'll be fighting for the light heavyweight title, but neither will be light heavyweights by the time the gong rings. They'll start bloating up immediately after the weigh-in. No dame who ever pummelled herself black and blue, to get back into that winsome size 14, ever suffered as much as Lesnevich. His heft is old heft, and thus hard to shed. Mauriello, the younger man, found the job easier. But regardless of the outcome of the fight, neither is expected to remain long in the division.

With little fanfare the two put on a rowdy brawl the last time they met. The referee gave Mauriello the fight; both judges ruled that Lesnevich had won eight rounds to seven, so Lesnevich won the match and the title. Mauriello, the challenger, is a Bronx Italian with a flailing, boring-in style and consequently no bore. He would lend a little color to the title if he could win it, and if he could stay under 175 pounds long enough to defend it a couple of times.

But the division is a transient one. The boys keep moving along to the richer fields of heavyweight campaigning, as did the only first-class light heavyweight in the country, Billy Conn, who is still a light heavy.

Interesting story on Mauriello's style: He always advances, and never retreats, not only because he's a doughty soul, but because his right ankle was chewed up by a truck when he was a kid, and it pains him badly to move backward on it.

BASEBALL?—Well, the boys picked the right men for those most valuable awards. There will be a lot of fans who'll think honestly that Ted Williams was gypped; that any man who does the things he did should be named most valuable. This is no effort to scoff at Ted's great .406 batting average. But to have deprived Joe DiMaggio of the American League's most valuable would have been to kick the spirit of the contest in the teeth. Williams outhit Joe 49 points, and became the first .400 hitter the league has seen since 1923, a fine individual performance. But Joe won the pennant for his ball club. His 56-game batting streak began when the Yanks were in fifth place; when it ended they were in first, and far in front. He was indeed "most valuable" to his team, which is the theme of the poll.

The same is true of Dolf Camilli. There were a few individuals who outshone him in the National League, but none of them meant to his team what Camilli's work-a-day pounding and fielding meant to Brooklyn.

HORSES?—R. M. Banks, a contributor to horse magazines, writes, in connection with a recent piece, that stimulation of race horses by narcotics is necessary, "... else we would have no racing." Banks states that 70 per cent of our horses now in training have been nerved. Nerving, as you know, consists of operating on or removing sore tendons, nerves and the like from ailing parts of the horse. Presumably it removes the pain from the ailing member, plus some of the horse's speed, which is turn is compensated by "speed-ball" injections.

The figure of 70 per cent seems high to us and pretty arbitrary, but there certainly is no doubt that many horses have been nerved and thus are forced to risk their lives each time they run, because their systems spread no warning signal of pain when something is about to buckle under the strain of racing. Almost as vicious is the freezing process, commonly administered by putting the ailing legs of a horse into a pair of overalls, binding the bottom of the overalls around the horse's pasterns, and filling the pants legs with ice. The ice freezes out the pain for a short period, but the trouble is only aggravated during the subsequent running.

Undefeated, Untied Ranks Due Another Paring This Weekend

Duquesne-Mississippi State Hard to Figure; Northwestern Last Big Obstacle for Irish

By Eddie Dooley

Famous Football Expert

While football's line of march is fast nearing the finish line, a number of important skirmishes are yet to take place. Last Saturday saw the number of major unbeaten and untied teams reduced to four, and tomorrow's games may see them cut down to one or two.

Two of the East's most interesting tests tomorrow are the Columbia-Michigan and Pennsylvania-Army meetings. No titles are at stake, but the intersectional game between the boys from Ann Arbor and New York will help clarify the atmosphere considerably by revealing that there is really little difference between good and mediocre elevens. And the Army-Penn battle will be a consolation clash as Army will be trying to rehabilitate its record after the sound trouncing by Harvard, while Penn will be attempting a comeback after its defeat at the hands of Navy two weeks ago.

Michigan having downed Michigan State, Iowa, Pitt, Northwestern and Illinois is obviously vastly superior to Columbia, which has won only three out of six games, and which didn't make 5 yards all afternoon by running against rugged Georgia. On the basis of man power and statistics, this game should be a rout, with the Wolverines of Fritz Crisler running wild. But you can bank on it, nothing like that will happen.

Lions Always Tough

A Columbia team coached by Lou Little, is never routed. It may lack heft, and brilliant players, but it has a fighting spirit that cuts its highly favored opponents down to its own size. The chances are it will outplay Michigan's formidable forward wall, and keep the Wolverines worried all through the game. I believe Michigan will win because Westfall and Kuzma are more dependable backs than Governali and McIlvennan, although they too are very able. It should be one of the most interesting intersectional contests of the year.

I doubt if more than two touch-

Illinois Board Asks Federal 'Ringer' Law

By International News Service

Chicago, Nov. 13.—Still indignant at the "ringer" coup perpetrated last September at the Hawthorne race track, the Illinois Racing Commission tonight called for a Federal law making it a felony to transport a race horse across State lines under a new name in an effort to deceive the public and racing officials.

Maj. Ednyfed H. Williams, chairman of the commission, said he had dispatched to Senators C. Wayland Brooks and Scott W. Lucas, of Illinois, and other members of the Illinois Congressional delegation copies of a suggested bill which would cover such practices.

Copies also went to the National Association of State Racing Commissioners and to the Jockey Club of New York.

The commission recently ruled four persons off the turf for life and yesterday suspended indefinitely three other persons in the Hawthorne case in which the horse, "Hasty Notion," was shipped to Illinois as "Rapid Bone" and run in two races, winning one at long odds and losing the other.

Notre Dame Denies Report That Team Will Play in Bowl

By the United Press

South Bend, Ind., Nov. 13.—The Rev John J. Cavanaugh, vice president of Notre Dame and chairman of the athletic board, repeated today that Notre Dame will not play in any bowl game or a postseason football game of any kind.

In reply to a report ready for publication in tomorrow's edition of the Florida Catholic, a weekly newspaper in Miami, Fla., Cavanaugh said Notre Dame's policy against such games remains intact.

The newspaper report said that Notre Dame "is ready and willing to play in the New Year's Day Orange Bowl game if asked."

N. C. State Alumni Rally Here Tonight

Local North Carolina State alumni will hold a pep rally tonight at 7:30 at the Y. M. C. A., in conjunction with N. C. State's football game with Georgetown tomorrow afternoon at Griffith Stadium.

This will be the first gridiron meeting of the two teams and more than 100 alumni from Washington and vicinity are expected to be on hand.

Hoyas Likely To Lose Reiges For Tomorrow

Quarterback Lou Falcone and Wingback Benny Reiges yesterday reversed positions in the Georgetown backfield "injury derby" for tomorrow's game with North Carolina State at Griffith Stadium.

This means that Falcone now is expected to be able to play against the Wolfpack, but that Reiges probably won't. Wednesday it was Reiges who was expected to play and Falcone who was expected not to play.

Generally, however, the situation is just as bad for Georgetown. Without attempting to compare Falcone and Reiges in worth, it will suffice to say that the Hoyas are weakened materially when either is sidelined. And with sophomore Fullback Joe Gyrogydeak still "definitely out" the Georgetown backfield is in none too promising shape.

Reiges, whose trouble is a bad shoulder on his right, or passing arm, is one of the Hoyas' three leading passers. Until last week when Frank Dornfield found his throwing eye against Maryland, Reiges had been splitting up the passing with Benny Bulvin.

Now that Bulvin is ready to resume his place in the Georgetown lineup at tailback, Reiges' loss won't be as serious as it might otherwise have been.

Georgetown held dummy scrimmage yesterday, with the varsity on defense against freshmen using North Carolina State plays. At the finish Coach Hagerty said his first lineup for State would be practically the same as for Maryland.

Today, in their final workout for the game, the Hoyas will sharpen up their own passing and punting, and have a final look at State's passing attack, which is expected to prove troublesome with Art Faircloth, the former Ancostia High star, doing the pitching.

Army-Navy Game Complete Sell-Out, Say Both Schools

By International News Service

West Point, N. Y., Nov. 13.—All tickets for the football game between the Army and Navy in Philadelphia November 29 have been sold, according to a joint statement issued today by the athletic associations of the service schools.

Officials of Army and Navy attributed the rapid sale of the ducats "not only to the excellent record of both teams but also to America's great interest in national defense."

P. G. A. Title Tourney Now Worth $14,200

5 Per Cent of Total Purses Deducted For Tournament Bureau Expenses

By the Associated Press

Chicago, Nov. 13.—The Professional Golfers Association of America increased the prize money for its annual championship tournament from $6000 to $14,200 today, and approved a deduction of 5 per cent of its total tourney purses to cover the expense of operating the tournament bureau.

The prize money increase will raise the winner's share from $1100 to $5000, the runnerup share from $800 to $2000, with the losers in the semi-final round getting $1000 each. Quarter-final losers will receive $500 apiece.

It had been reported that there would be strenuous opposition to the 5 per cent deduction plan, which previously had been approved by the executive committee, but it was adopted after a brief discussion. The deduction is expected to provide about $10,000 on the basis of a prospective $200,000 total pot for next year.

It also was voted to reduce the number of qualifiers for the title tournament from 64 to 32, but to retain the two-day qualifying round. Match play will be at 36 holes through the event where formerly the longer battles started with the quarter-finals. Nonqualifiers for match play will still get mileage to and from the tournament.

T. Mauriello, Gus Lesnevich Fight Tonight

By the Associated Press

New York, Nov. 13.—The appetites of fighters being what they are, Gus Lesnevich, of Cliffside, N. J., and Tami Mauriello, of The Bronx, are due to fight 15 rounds at Madison Square Garden tomorrow night for a title that neither is likely to defend again.

Gus and Tami are two important members of a group of fighters who are trying to eat their way up into the heavyweight division and big money. Tomorrow they'll fight for the light-heavyweight crown which Lesnevich now holds.

Lesnevich just did manage to get down to the required 176-poundage last August when he won undisputed recognition by beating the Fordham fist flinger in a scrap that left plenty of arguments as to who won. He was up around 185 pounds when he started training for this brawl and one reason why Mauriello has been made a 15-to-10 favorite is that a good many fight followers think Gus probably has left his fight in the gymnasium along with those extra pounds. Tami, a middleweight contender last spring, had grown up to 180 pounds a few weeks ago.

Both May Move Up

After tomorrow both of them likely will follow the example of Billy Conn, who gave up the 175-pound title and attempted by vigorous use of a knife and fork to build himself up to the stature of a real heavyweight title contender. They'll get some competition in that line from such fellows as Booker Beckwith, who has been mingling with heavyweights around Chicago; Billy Soose, recently abdicated middleweight ruler; Al Hostak and Johnny Colan, who have grown out of the middleweight division and don't want to tarry long among the 175-pounders.

It isn't exactly a fight to make the fans tear the doors down in their efforts to get in, but Promoter Mike Jacobs expects it to "do pretty good" at the gate. Both have strong local followings and there was enough uncertainty about the decision last time to attract a good many neutral fans.

Post-Season Contests Out For Middies

By the Associated Press

Annapolis, Md., Nov. 13.—Because of the shortened Naval Academy course, Navy's gridiron warriors will not participate in any postseason football games this fall, Rear Admiral Russell Willson, academy superintendent, announced today.

Before its first defeat at the hands of Notre Dame at Baltimore last Saturday, the Middie eleven was mentioned prominently as a possible Rose Bowl participant.

Last week Navy officials turned down an invitation for their team to play a West Coast service eleven after the Army-Navy game. Just before the Notre Dame contest Senator Connally (Democrat), of Texas, suggested that Navy play either the University of Texas or Texas A. and M. in a Cotton Bowl game at Dallas, Tex.

He said he was informed by Lewis Bailey, editor of the Dallas (Tex.), Journal that Cotton Bowl officers would invite Navy to play regardless of the outcome of its later games.

"Due to the graduation of the first (senior) class in December," Admiral Wilson declared, "and the heavy schedule of the other midshipmen involved in the three-year course, the Naval Academy will not consider any postseason football game."

The national defense program caused the academy course last summer to be reduced from four to three years. Seniors will be graduated next month, six months ahead of schedule, and the juniors next June, a full year ahead of time.

Bill Chip, reserve blocking back, broke a finger and Wes Gebert, sub back, has a charley-horse, Larson said. Both, however, are expected to be ready for the Tiger clash.

Minnesota Fans Hear Gopher Game

The Minnesota State Society will stage its seventh football party of the season at 2 p. m. tomorrow at Hotel 2400, featured by an account of the Minnesota-Iowa game, starting at 2:30.

Owing to the fact that the game will not be heard locally by radio, special arrangements were made for a telegraphed play-by-play account. Dancing will follow.

Best Seller Is Second By 2 Lengths

Eads Rides 3-Year-Old To Beat Old Record By 1 1-5 Seconds; Pays $4.60 for $2

By Walter Haight

Pimlico, Baltimore, Md., Nov. 13. Setting a new track record while coasting into the wire, Lou Tufano's Market Wise won the twenty-ninth running of the Governor Bowie Handicap, the $10,000 added feature of the closing day of the most successful meeting of the Maryland Jockey Club since 1931. Finishing two lengths in advance of E. R. Bradley's Best Seller and an additional two lengths in front of G. H. Bostwick's Nellie Bly, Market Wise registered time of 2:43 1-5, knocking a second and one-fifth off the mark for the race and the track record set by C. S. Howard's Kayak II in 1939.

The winner of the 1941 Pimlico Special made amends for his rather poor showing against Haltal by overcoming a poor start today to come from last position in the gruelling test of a mile and 5 furlongs. Market Wise carried 124 pounds, some 22 pounds more than Best Seller and 15 more than Nellie Bly.

The crowd of 9000 made Market Wise the favorite but not with the enthusiasm that went with Alsab yesterday. The son of Broker's Tip never was below even money in the wagering and paid his backers $4.60: Jockey Wendell Eads turned in the winning ride and Market Wise added $9750 to his earnings for the year.

Bryson Entry Leads

Considering the marathon distance, the race was fast at all stages. With Trois Pistoles, the E. K. Bryson hope, setting the pace, the quarter was clocked in 0:23⅘, the half in 0:48 and the three-quarters in 1:13. When Best Seller got to the top at the mile the figure was 1:39⅘.

The start of the Governor Bowie was delayed more than ten minutes. E. D. Axton's Bala Ormont, the longest shot in the field, tossed Apprentice Jockey Donald MacAndrews as the parade approached the starting point. The boy, who escaped injury when Easter Holiday fell here last Tuesday, suffered a badly bruised arm and Jockey Darrell Madden was substituted. Jockeys dismounted and waited until Bala Ormont was returned to the track.

Market Wise walked out of the gate and Jockey Eads allowed the son of Broker's Tip to race on his own courage. While settling into his best stride, Market Wise improved his position gradually. Trois Pistoles went to the front at once with Best Seller and Tola Rose close up. Trois Pistoles opened a three-length advantage after the opening quarter while the other boys were rating their mounts.

Western Today Gets Last Chance to Defend Football Title

Must Defeat Central for Finals Berth

Vikings Big Favorites, On Basis of Records, Need Only Tie to Drop Raiders From Race

TODAY'S SCHEDULE

Wilson at Roosevelt, 3:15.
St. John's at Eastern, 3:15.
Devitt at Fairfax, 3:30.

TOMORROW'S SCHEDULE

Tech at York (Pa.) High.
Landon at St. Andrew's (Middleton, Del.)
St. James at St. Alban's, 2 p. m.

Western High, defending public school football champion, gets its last chance for a defense of that title today when it faces Central at the latter's stadium, the outcome deciding one contender in the Thanksgiving Day championship game. Starting time will be 3:15.

Western's only hope is a victory. Trailing Central by a half game going into this final clash, the Red Raiders will see their Clifton Street rivals earn a playoff berth against Anacostia with a mere tie. Added to their troubles is the Vikings' heavy favoritism, figured largely through the fact that Western could only tie the same Woodrow Wilson team which Central romped over by five touchdowns.

On the other end of the last inter-high double-header of the year is Wilson's meeting with Roosevelt in Petworth. The supplementary card of six games is headed by St. John's invasion of Eastern.

With one exception, Western will hurl the same club which has carried the burden all year at Central. The change gives young Duke O'Connell, start of the Raiders' triumph over Eastern, a starting berth at left halfback. Henry Pratti, erstwhile starter, will be saved for considerable use later. On the ineligible list is Davis Morris, reserve guard.

Improving the invaders' chances is the return to health of Bill Mardowe, plunging star of 1940. So far the husky ball carrier has been plagued by such ailments as hay fever, a cold, a cut eye and a charley horse, but he's finally rounded into shape.

Central's main lineup change will concern Wilbur Rock, its stellar tackle, who will be replaced by Sam Richwine among the starters. He'll be in there later, his recent bad cold having disappeared.

Bob Hill, burly end, moves back into the wing slot he vacated early in the season because of a skull injury, and Maurice Horton has assumed full command of the fullback spot since Stan Valanos moved to the sidelines with a damaged left leg. Nick Chacos, reserve fullback, also will see little action because of injuries.

Smith, Armour Tie for Lead At Pinehurst

By the Associated Press

Pinehurst, N. C., Nov. 13.—Horton Smith, of Pinehurst, and Tommy Armour, of Chicago, tied today in the first round of the 36-hole Mid-South Open Tournament with 2-under-par 70s over Pinehurst's No. 2 course.

Armour had 34, 36—70; Smith, 36, 34—70.

Johnny Bulla, of Greensboro, was in third position, with 71. Clayton Heafner, of Linville, and Henry Poe, a Durham boy registered from the Reading (Pa.) Country Club, were tied at 72.

Gene Sarazen required a 78 today and worked hard to keep from going over 80.

Leading the amateurs were Jimmy Hunter, of North Adams, Mass., and Wes Ferrell, former big league pitcher. They had 79s.

Six players were bracketed by 73. These were Errie Ball, of Charlottesville, Va.; Jim Turnesa, of Elmsford, N. Y.; Paul Runyan, of White Plains, N. Y.; Bobby Cruickshank, of Richmond, Va.; Terl Johnson, of Norristown, Pa., and Charlie Farlow, of Burlington, N. C.

With the opening of the upland game season tomorrow morning throughout the States of Virginia and Maryland, the sportsman who likes fast shooting should be able to get his fill.

From all sections come reports of record-breaking numbers of game. Hunting conditions are not the best, however. At this time the woods are extremely dry and the ground is covered with loose dry leaves. The leaves are still too thick on the trees and underbrush, and a heavy rain with wind is needed to strip the leaves from the trees.

JACK BELL

In hunting, as in fishing, seldom does everything click. The cry from the angler we so often hear is fish won't bite because the water is high, or they will not bite when the water is low. Another is that they will not bite when the water is murky, also when it is about to clear.

The waterfowl season now two weeks old is no exception. Wild ducks and geese by the thousands, reports from everywhere are that they are all high-flyers and wily owing to the warm, calm weather.

State Game Warden E. Le Compte declares that this season should be one of the best in years. Starting at the close of hunting season last year, the State Game and Inland Commission carried on a program of planting various species of game, which with ideal breeding conditions this past spring assures the nimrod of plenty of game.

More than 13,000 bob-white quail were raised and released; over 11,000 cottontail rabbits were purchased from out-of-State trappers and released throughout Maryland, also 400 wild turkeys.

Virginia joins Marland in predicting a banner 1941 hunting season. The Virginia Commission of Game and Inland Fisheries announced that the "current hunting season should be the best Virginia sportsmen have ever experienced."

This claim is based on the liberation of nearly 15,000 head of game, with a record distribution so far for the season of 10,000 quail, as compared with last season's total including the after-season spring planting of 10,000. In the spring the commission will plant an additional 4000. Along with this planting, the game covers have been stocked with 1000 wild turkeys and 365 white-tail deer.

Hunters going into the woods and fields are warned to be very careful with matches, cigarettes and fires. Be sure they are out.

Turkey shoots and more turkey shoots. This is one of the oldest of all shooting competition. In the old days, the shooter used to try to shoot the turkey's head off, if he did the turkey was his. The turkey shooter is not so crude in his methods. He now shoots at a target and the best man wins; Mr. Turkey in that way escapes having every Tom, Dick and Harry take a crack at his head.

Last Saturday and Sunday the Bethesda-Chevy Chase Chapter of Izaak Waltonians held two very successful turkey shoots. These shoots are to be continued every Saturday and Sunday, starting at 1 p. m. Saturday and 10 a. m. Sunday until the first of the year.

The shooting grounds are located along the East-West Highway, beyong the Meadowbrook Club.

Arlington-Fairfax Virginia Chapter of Waltonians also are starting their season of turkey shoots at 1:30 p. m. till 10 p. m., Saturday, November 15, and are to continue through every Saturday—November 29, December 6, 13 and 20. The grounds are located along Lee Boulevard, at the Arlington-Fairfax line.

The Alexandria Ike's have been conducting turkey shoots in the Skeet Club, rear of 2600 Duke Street, Alexandria every Monday night since October 27, to run through every Monday night to November 24. These shoots are entirely under floodlight conditions, starting at 7:30 p. m.

So there is your choice, pick your place and date and see if you can bring home a turkey.

Little Hoyas' 95-Lb. Eleven Scores Again

Ninetty-five-pound Connie Harrell made two touchdowns for his Georgetown Prep lightweight eleven at Garrett Park yesterday to aid in the defeat of St. Michael's in the Little Hoyas first undefeated season in ten years.

In the third quarter, Connie was handed the ball by his brother, Jackie, who had faked a kick, and ran 60 yards for the score, managing to convert a moment later. He had been held out of the first half because of a bad leg.

The Preppers' Guyer hit center from the ten in the first quarter for another touchdown, and in the final stanza, Connie Harrell made another smart play as he ran 40 yards to the Saints' 4 and then plunged over the goal line. O'Connor kicked the extra point.

Bears' Record Far Superior To Redskins'

By Merrell W. Whittlesey

The Redskin backers who have deserted the team at all reasonable odds against the Bears in favor of asking from 10 to 25 points for Sunday's game in Chicago, will probably boost their requests after a glance at the performances of the clubs on paper.

Both teams have played seven games, the Bears against considerably stronger opposition, but the Bears have scored 150 more points than the Redskins, gained 1200 more yards and show a surplus of 40 first downs. The Bears have averaged 6½ yards every time they come out of the huddle.

The defending league champions are on the way to a grand slam smash of most all existing records for strict power performances, led by George "One Play" McAfee, who may be the first player ever to win ground gaining and scoring honors. He is fourth and second, respectively, in the two divisions and moving fast.

Usual Favorites

The Bears were 6½ to 5 favorites in the regular season game here last year and even after the 7-3 defeat were 7-5 choices in the championship playoff. The Bear backers are offering 2 to 1 and up this year but the Redskin followers are laying off in favor of touchdowns instead of odds.

Washington fans are apparently forgetting that the last team to beat the Bears before the Green Bay Packers won by two points a week ago Sunday was the Redskins, simply by holding the Halasmen to a mere field goal.

They cannot forget the sight of those ten Chicago touchdowns last December 8 at Griffith Stadium and the seven conversions which added to 73 points an unbelievable total for two teams termed evenly matched.

Three Backs Absent

Give the Redskins the 33-man squad that started the season and they would be held in more respect, but they face the game they have been looking forward to for nearly a year without three backfield stalwarts. Bob Hoffman, Wilbur Moore and Dick Todd, the number two scoring threat.

Ed Justice is still taking it easy with his leg muscle torn in the Ram game and Frank Filchock must favor an ailing shoulder, but as both are players who insist on action with nothing short of a broken arm or leg, it's safe to say they will be in playing condition by Sunday. On the other hand the Bears will be in just about the best shape of the season.

The Redskins will work out this morning in Griffith Stadium and leave tonight at 5:45 for Chicago. They will work there tomorrow, probably on Loyola University field, which is close to the hotel. Sunday's game time has been moved up to 1:30, Central standard time. The team will leave on a special train at 10 p. m. Sunday, arriving in Washington at 5 o'clock Monday afternoon.

Bears Respect Skins

Several members of the Bears were quoted on the outlook of the game yesterday in Chicago and the consensus of opinion was that they considered the Redskins as the toughest opponent of the season. They also added it was all right if the Redskins forgot the playoff score of last year.

The Redskins will be up against the masters of the lateral pass as in 20 lateral attempts this year the Bears have missed only once. The Redskins have tried and completed one. The Bears are still the rough club in the league, or at least get caught the most, as they have been penalized nearly 200 yards more than any team in the league.

Neither the Bears nor Redskins boast a leader in any of the individual scoring columns although McAfee is near the top in two and Sammy Baugh is close to both passing and punting honors. Baugh has completed 45 out of 84 passes and Sid Luckman, the Bear aerial leader, 38 out of 66.

The Redskin office will close both game and train ticket sales today. The special Baltimore & Ohio excursion tickets for the train leaving Saturday at 5:45, will remain on sale until 2 p. m., while game tickets will be available at the Ninth Street office until 4 p. m.

Marines' 603 Leads Federal Pin League

The Marines team in the Ladies' Federal League at Arcadia were in top form last night and chalked up an all-time record team game of 603 which they followed with a high set of 1630. Mary Volkart sparked the big effort with her 370 set. Beth Minson, District League star of the Labor quintet, ran off with individual highs after pinfalls of 150 and 378 and helped win three from FHA.

QUEEN PIN

Holloway's 155-406 for the Redmen topped the Southeast League at Queen Pin and helped his team win a trio over Capitol Restaurant. Ed McReady's 374 for Hayden's Restaurant helped win team highs with a 644 game and 1839 set, the latter a season high, and a sweep over Lank Woodworking as well. Ed Fortune's 365 for Louis' Restaurant won three from Quality Shop, while a 355 by Joe Kahle sparked the tail-end Outlaws to the odd skirmish over the leading Brinkley's.

SPILLWAY

Bill Strickland's 166 for Charpal Grill led a two-game win over Carry Ice Cream in the Businessmen's League at Spillway. Ed Newcomer's record 405 individual set was high for the night. Chuck Tolson had 153-393 but his Outlaws dropped two to Effers. Bresnahan Tavern and Naval Air both won odd tilts from opponents.

COLUMBIA

Paul Friedman of Flood Control with 147 and Erwin Schuler of the Auditors with 367 led the War Department Engineers loop at Columbia. Miscellaneous had 584 for high team game but dropped the odd contest to Map Collections while River and Harbor Board took two from the leading Auditors and posted high team set of 1589. Fortification won three over Procurement while Maintenance was whitewashing Legal.

Italian Claims New Discuss Mark

Turin, Nov. 13 (AP).—The Gazetta Del Popolo said today a new world's record for the discus throw would be claimed for Adolfo Consolini, young Italian peasant who hurled the discus 53.34 meters (175 feet) at Milan October 26.

This was 8 centimeters (3¼ inches) farther than the American star, Archie Harris, of Indiana University, accomplished last summer, when he sailed the platter 174 feet 8¾ inches in the N. C. A. A. Championships at Palo Alto, Calif.

The previous record was 174 feet 2½ inches set by Willi Schroder, of Germany, in 1935.

First Sectional Triple Tie Is Possible in Pro-League

The possibility of the first sectional triple tie in the National Pro Football League, between the Redskins, New York Giants and Brooklyn Dodgers in the Eastern Division will be knocked out if one of the three loses this week.

The Dodgers invade Pittsburgh, where the cry is reported to be "Remember Pitt over Fordham." This is supposed to be the setup for the biggest upset of the National pro season, for the Steelers want to win one for their new coach, Walt Keisling, and at the same time want to beat Jock Sutherland, the Dodger coach and former Pitt mentor.

Redskins—Must beat Bears, Packers and Eagles and lose to Giants.

Giants—Must beat Redskins and Rams and lose to Brooklyn.

Dodgers—Must beat Steelers twice and Giants.

If this should happen the three clubs would play off on December 14 and 21 for the Eastern title and play for the championship December 28.

Singh, Fraley Win Mat Bouts

Nanjo Singh, the heinous Hindu, relied on his disabling Cobra Clutch to dispose of durable Milo Steinborn in the cofeature of the wrestling card at Turner's Arena last night. However, the Oriental had to make three attempts with his Sunday maneuver before it was finally successful after 26½ minutes of struggling. On the second effort Singh secured the grip, but Steinborn broke loose purely through bull strength. Then Milo put the pressure on Singh with a bear hug. Nanjo eased out of this and found the clutch combination, and it was lights out for Steinborn, who had to be assisted out of the ring.

In the other half of the main attraction, Pat Fraley downed Rudy Dusek with a series of body slams and a press in 24 minutes. Patrick worried Rudy no end when he persisted in mauling the good Dusek ear, and Rudy protested this horseplay bitterly. Once Rudy caught Fraley in a rocking-chair cradle hold that Pat was hard put to work out of. This visibly embarrassed Pat, for the posture was most ridiculous.

Top match was provided Lou Plummer and Jim Henry, nee the Green Hornet, who worked to a draw. Lou, a thespian at heart, was in rare form last night and his footwork was a thing of beauty. It may not have been good, but it was spectacular. Both lads were rough all the way, and Plummer insisted that the rule should be "anything goes."

Stubby Freddy Carone bowled over fat Herbie Freeman in 16½ with a cradle hold. Carone, who looks like Exhibit A for the Darwin Theory, suffered mightily at the hands of Freeman, who spent most of the evening puffing like a goldfish after an Atlantic crossing.

Rifle Club Holds Initial Event Today

The first open gallery rifle tournament registered in the District by the National Rifle Association will be sponsored by the United States Aggies Rifle and Pistol Club tomorrow and Sunday at the N. R. A. Range, No. 10 G Street Northwest.

Features of the program will be the four-man team and three-position matches, and a special women's match to be fired from a prone position.

A turkey match and several other individual matches will round out a program designed to please every rifleman, no matter what his speciality.

With the District already recognized as one of the most active rifle and pistol centers in the country, prospects are bright here for the development of good tournaments for the gallery shooters.

Colonials Slight Underdog Against Bucknell Tonight

G. W. Seeks 2d Victory At Stadium

Visitors Have Veteran Team; Knupp, Gore Are Big Stars; Bisons Hold Edge in Series

By Jack Munhall

At 8:15 kick-off time the Colonials will be seeking their second victory of the season and also their second victory over the Bisons since they started relations in 1908. About 6000 fans are expected.

Even when circumstances have favored George Washington, it has had great difficulty in taking the Lewisburg team. This year the G Street boys will enter the game as slight underdogs, and perhaps the cycle will swing about in their favor.

Last year George Washington was figured to beat Bucknell, but they tugged and pulled to an unexciting scoreless tie. G. W.'s last victory over the visitors was in 1939, by 7 to 6. The rivals opened their series in 1908 with an odd 5 to 5 tie.

On record, Bucknell should lick George Washington. The Bisons have won four and lost three, while the Colonials have won only one, tied one and dropped five, and they have scored in but two of those seven games.

Gudmundson Out

Troubled all sason by unexpected losses and injuries, George Washington will face Bucknell in subpar condition, with Scott Gudmundson, regular tailback, out of the fray with a broken hand, and Ellis Hall, first string guard, unlikely to play, also because of injuries.

Gudmundson's loss is not expected to be felt as much now as it would have in past weeks, since the Colonial sophomore backs, improving rapidly, are now thought to be ready for their prime effort. Jim Graham and Johnny Pollock, a pair of talented youngsters, will fill in for Gudmundson.

Bucknell, upset last week by the surprisingly strong "little" Gettysburg eleven, will open the game with a veteran line-up, comprising eight seniors and featuring Co-captains Mel Knupp, left halfback, and Fred Gore, left end. The co-leaders can supposedly team up in a dangerous passing attack and that's one department of offense against which the Colonials so far have been very weak.

Besides Knupp, who is back in condition after a long injury, enforced seige of inactivity, Bucknell's outstanding players include Quarterback Walter Wenrich and Right Halfback Fred Fahringer. The Bisons have beaten Lebanon Valley (12-7), Muhlenberg (13-0, Boston University (6-0) and Western Maryland (26-7.)

George Washington defeated Mount St. Mary's, 25-0, in its opener and since has been winless. The Colonials lost to Manhattan (23-0), tied W. and L. (0-0), bowed to Georgetown (25-0), to William and Mary (48-0), to Clemson (19-0) and last week to Furman (13-0).

Tonight's game probably won't set any records for excellent football playing, but it should prove close and hard-fought. We like George Washington by about 13-7.

Claudio Villar Is Raskin's Latest Threat to Joe Louis

Spanish Heavyweight Remembered for Bout With Savold Here in Summer; Beat Scott

Brother Harry Raskin, that astute trainer of ring champions, is back in town after a sojourn in the Southland, and with him is Claudio Villar, the Spanish heavyweight who scored a hit in his other Washington appearance at Griffith Stadium against Lee Savold last summer.

Raskin quietly returned home, and if it wasn't for three phone calls, one letter, and numerous visits to The Post Sports Departments, plus an ear-bending session at Turner's Arena, we wouldn't have known he was here. But he is back singing a new song. He's voicing the promising possibilities of his new fighter Villar.

According to Raskin in a story which he relates in a few thousand words—Villar has the making of a great ring prospect. The Spaniard was hailed as some shucks as a fighter in Europe before hostilities between nations broke out.

Two-year Delay

He was on the way to a budding career as a heavyweight when he was caught in the Spanish civil war, and having sympathies for the other side, Villar was thrown in the clink by Gen. Franco and remained there for two years. This little stretch in a concentration camp put a halt to his fistic career, temporarily at least.

After being released on escpaing (Raskin doesn't make it clear) Villar made his way to Cuba, where he hooked up with Jess Losado another Spaniard who is now Col. Marine's right-hand man as far as Cuba's sports program is concerned. Losado brought Villar to this country where he engaged in a pair of fights in Tampa.

Villar knocked out Jay D. Turner in four rounds and chilled Al Williams in one. With such an auspicious start, Villar was brought north and signed to meet Pat Comiskey in Washington. That was on the Bill Poland-Eddie Blunt card at the ball park in August. Comiskey failed to make an appearance for his engagement and Savold was substituted.

Bout a Card Saver

Savold scored a technical knockout but not until after one of the most bruising fights of the season. The encounter saved the ill-fated Blunt-Poland card from being a complete washout. Villar offered no alibi for the Savold loss, if an alibi was needed.

Since the Savold match, Villar has beaten and drawn with Buddy Scott in two matches.

This is where Harry (The Horse) Raskin comes into the picture. He used to handle Scott and worked in his corner when Buddy drew with Villar. But after that fight Raskin shifted heaves and now is grooming Villar to meet "anyone who'll fight him."

Goldfaden, Former G.W. Player, Joins Pro Brewers' Team

Ben Goldfaden, 6-foot-2-inch star who used to chuck 'em in the hoop for George Washington University, added his name to the roster of the Washington Brewers professional team of the American League.

Goldfaden, who has been working in Greenbelt, conferred with Mack Posnack, coach-manager of the Brewers, yesterday and came to terms for the playing season. Signing of the erstwhile Colonial ace, raised to two the number of pros now under contract. Signed on Tuesday was Nat Frankel, valuable member of the 1940-41 team and one-time star of the Kate Smith's Celtics.

Used at center, forward and guard last season, Goldfaden will be marking his fourth season in the American League, his sixth with the Heurich club.

With the preleague game with the world famous, Renaissance colored team scheduled next Friday night, November 21, at Turner's Arena, Frankel and Goldfaden will be among those attending the first workout next Monday.

Terps. V. M. I. Renew Old Grid Rivalry

The second biggest football rivalry involving Maryland—from a standpoint of number of games played—will be renewed for the nineteenth time tomorrow when the Terrapins engage Virginia Military at College Park.

Maryland and V. M. I. began their gridiron relations in 1906 and have been meeting annually since 1927, making tomorrow's game their fifteenth consecutive contest.

The Terrapins hold a slight edge in the series, having won nine, lost eight and tied two, but this edge is expected to disappear tomorrow when the Cadets shoot their powerful backfield against Maryland's light line.

Muha Fast

Joe Muha, Bosh Pritchard, Nelson Catlett and "Woody" Ward, V. M. I.'s starting backfield, appears one of the best in this section of the country, with Muha having run wild against every team he faced except University of Virginia. Pritchard, a flashy triple-threater, likewise has been poison to all opponents, including Virginia despite the fact that he left a sick bed to face the Cavaliers.

With this backfield and a fair-to-middling line, the Cadets would have gone far this season were it not for their appalling lack of reserve strength, especially along the line.

Those fans who see V. M. I. in the first half probably will be amazed at the ability shown by a team with such a poor record as the Virginians—which is two victories and five losses. The Cadets are big and fast and tough—in the first half—but from then on they gradually weaken.

Strong Resistance

V. M. I.'s last week's 21-0 loss to William and Mary was typical of what has been happening to the Lexington squadron. They held the powerful Indians scoreless in the first quarter and were scored on in the second period only by means of a blocked kick. This tenacious resistance steadily slackened in the third and fourth periods, with William and Mary putting over two more touchdowns and threatening constantly.

The Cadets' superior power gives them a decided edge over Maryland, but the Terps' passing game may make it a very close battle.

Keydets Drill

Lexington, Va., Nov. 13 (AP).—V. M. I.'s Keydets engaged in dummy and signal drills and heavy scrimmage in today's workout in preparation for the game with Maryland Saturday at College Park.

The V. M. I. squad will leave Lexington Friday morning at 8 o'clock for College Park and will work out there Friday afternoon.

Kearney Stars As Landon Wins

Sparked by the all-around play of Dexter Kearney, the Landon Prep 115-pounders defeated St. Alban's, 33 to 7, at Landon yesterday. Kearney began his scoring in the first quarter when he ran over from the 7-yard stripe and then converted. St. Alban's also scored in the early moments.

In the second period, Rohrer darted 20 yards around left end and Kearney again converted, making the score 14 to 7. The third quarter score came when Kearney passed to Stanley Harris, who went over for the touchdown, with Kearney making his third convension in as many tries.

Lions Beaten By New Haven Eagles, 2 to 0

By the Associated Press

New Haven, Conn., Nov. 13.—The New Haven Eagles, leading the Eastern Division of the American Hockey League, turned back the Washington Lions, 2-0, tonight in an evenly played game in which the fast-skating Gus Mancuso largely turned the balance in favor of the Eagles.

Goalie Phil Stein, recording his first shutout of the season, also was an important factor in the victory, but his excellent play was very nearly matched by Phil Bibeault, the Washington net-minder.

It was the diminutive Mancuso who set up the first score in the first period, driving a shot which rebounded from Bibeault's pads, enabling George Patterson to snare the puck and drive it home easily.

Providence Beats Buffalo Bisons, 7-4

By the Associated Press

Buffalo, N. Y., Nov. 13.—The Providence Reds handed the Buffalo Bisons their sixth successive American Hockey League defeat here tonight, 7-4, before 5532 spectators.

The visitors staged a remarkable exhibition of sharpshooting to break a 3-3 tie in the third period after the Bisons had outshot the Rnode Islanders, only to be balked by Goalie Mike Karakas repeatedly.

Maple Leafs Top Canadiens, 4 to 2

Toronto, Nov. 13 (AP).—Scoring in every period, the Toronto Maple Leafs trounced the Montreal Canadiens, 4-2, in a National Hockey hockey game here tonight. The win was the second in three starts for the Leafs.

45 Football Games in 4 Years Is Record for St. Mary's Sandig

Associated Press WIREPHOTO

Curtis Sandig, St. Mary's University back, shown with his wife, has played 45 football games in his four years at the school and has scored 83 points this season

Ruling Permitting Frosh on Varsity Aided Star's Busy Schedule; Has Gained 3 Miles

By the Associated Press

San Antonio, Tex., Nov. 13.—Curtis Sandig has played in 45 games—every game on the St. Mary's University schedule in four years and that ought to be a record in college football.

And unless illness or injury step in he will finish out his string December 13 with a total of 49.

How did he do it?

Well, when the 175-pound Sandig came to St. Mary's, the Alamo Conference had just voted to allow freshmen on the varsity.

He got in the first game of the 1938 season San Francisco University and averaged 5.7 yards each time he carried the ball. Since then, no one has even thought of St. Mary's playing a game without the brilliant Sandig.

Another thing that contributed to his remarkable logevity as a college player was the Rattlers' extended schedules—15 games in 1938, 11 in 1940 and 12 this year.

In his 45 games, Sandig has gained more than three miles by rushing or pass receiving.

"He punts, passes, runs, receives passes, returns punts and kick-offs better than the average back and he is a constant threat," explained the coach.

"From the midfield stripe he could score a touchdown in 5 seconds so you see why, even though we may be behind, the opposition never feels safe until the final gun."

Izaak Walton Group to Hear Rutherford

Effects of the national defense program on American wildlife conservation will be the chief topic of the regional council of the Izaak Walton League on Sunday at the Raleigh Hotel.

R. M. Rutherford, representative of the Fish and Wildlife Service, will point out the highlights of the defense program in relation to conservation and the importance of maintaining wildlife population and other natural resources.

Izaak Walton League chapters from West Virginia, Virginia, Maryland and the District of Columbia will be represented by the presidents of the various member chapters at this meeting, which will assemble at 2:30 p. m.

Nominations of new regional council officers for the year 1942 also will be held.

Dr. Lewis Radcliffe, national vice president of the Izaak Walton League, and Dr. William Holton, national director, will discuss current problems on wildlife conservation.

The contributions that wildlife conservationists have made to the national welfare are small compared with what they can be, but programs for future accomplishments are under way and the prospects for their success, if continued, are deemed encouraging.

Final Maryland Race Meeting Will Open at Bowie Today

14-Day Card May Be Best Since 1931

Maryland's 1941 racing season begins its last stand with the opening of a 14-day meeting this afternoon at nearby Bowie. With Havre de Grace, Laurel and Pimlico having enjoyed their most successful fall sessions since 1931, there is every indication that the Prince Georges County track will keep in step. Following two weeks of the sport on the Defense Highway, only the 18-day meeting at Charles Town will remain before the bangtails hibernate fort he winter or head for the campaigns in Florida, California and Louisiana.

Although Bowie is not offering a first flight handicap on its Friday program, Racing Secretary John B. Campbell has lined up a well-balanced card, with most of the events assured limit fields of a dozen starters. With steeplechasing not a part of the sport, Bowie will have eight flat races each day with post time for the first race scheduled at 1 p. m. As usual, the daily double will be on the first and second events and the "double" windows will close at 12:45 p. m.

The fact that the New York season has closed has accounted for the influx of many good horses to add to those already on the Maryland scene. Five stake races as well as minimum purses of $1200 serve to keep in this section many leading stables which otherwise would either head South or go into winter quarters.

The first of Bowie's big races will be contested tomorrow with the annual running of the $5000 added Thomas Kirby Lynch Memorial. This is an all-age affair at a mile and a sixteenth and closed with 29 nominations.

DUDIE was within striking distance from the start, came to the outside of SLOW MOTION and wore down the latter while under strong handling. SLOW MOTION took command at once, shook off OAK TAR, but could not resist the winner. SPARROW CHIRP, sluggish early, improved his position steadily and showed a good effort. TOY FOOT, CIRCUS and STOP LOSS were in tight quarters entering the stretch.

Daily Double—COMEDIAN and DUDIE Paid $84.80.

WIRE ME, closer than usual in the early stages, responded well to punishment, but was no match for the winner. HERESHECOMES was hard rushed early to keep up and then faltered. SLAVE CHARM closed well after being outrun early. STREAMER had speed for a half.

REDTHORN was steadied when unable to get to the front early, responded when taken to the outside and withstood a long drive. SILVER GRAIL was off poorly, improved his position on the inside and closed full of run along the rail. TOWN HALL dropped back approaching the stretch and closed with good energy. ONE LINK moved up with a rush and hung in the final drive.

FIFTH RACE—One mile and 70 yards. Purse, $1500. For 3-year-olds and upward. Handicap. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 3:28. Off at 3:28. Winner, Gustave Ring's br. f. NIGHT GLOW was closest to the pace of ROUGH TIME from the start, rallied when asked to take command entering the stretch and drew out to win with something in reserve. TOTAL ECLIPSE lacked early speed, came out for racing room and closed with a bold rush. LUMIERE was well placed from the break and held on with good energy. SUN LOVER moved up menacingly and hung in the final 70 yards.

SIXTH RACE—One and five-eighths miles. Purse, $10,000 added. For 3-year-olds and upward. The Governor Bowie Handicap. Start good. Won easily; place driving. Went to post at 4:07. Off at 4:07. MARKET WISE dwelt at the start, was allowed to better his position gradually, rallied when placed to a hand drive and disposed of BEST SELLER to win with some speed in reserve. BEST SELLER was steadied closest to the pace of TROIS PISTOLES, took command when the pacemaker faltered, could not resist the winner, but closed gamely. NELLIE BLY saved ground throughout and closed willingly to show a good effort. TOLA ROSE was sent to the front between calls and, after a mile, weakened gradually thereafter. SHOT PUT rallied mildly. TROIS PISTOLES was first away, set a good pace and tired badly. FILISTEO failed to show speed at any stage.

SUERTERO moved into contention after 1 mile, moved with HELEN'S LAD at the three-eighths pole, fought it out willingly, was carried out through the final three-sixteenths and appeared to have gotten up. HELEN'S LAD was never far off the pace, was allowed to drift out in the stretch and held on gamely. CONNIE PLAUT, lacking speed as usual, came well on the inside in the last quarter. BLUE TWINK was shuffled back early, moved up boldly and then weakened.

Josie's Pal Wins In Disqualification

By the Associated Press

Salem, N. H., Nov. 13.—A disqualification resulted in C. J. Amendola's Josie's Pal being declared the winner of the featured race today at Rockingham Park.

Eddie Haughton's Holl Image crossed the wire first, but Jockey Teddy Atkinson, aboard W. Drees' favored French Trap, claimed a foul.

A conference at the stand resulted in Josie's Pal being given first place, French Trap, second, and Mrs. Willie Robinson's County Cork, third. The time for the mile and a sixteenth was 1:47.

Josie's Pal paid $6.80, $3.20 and $2.80. French Trap returned $2.80 and $2.40 and County Cork $3.40.

At The Post

Selections at Bowie.

Dear Al.

I see by the entries that Walter Haight, the colt, is in the lineup for the first race today. He is just about as low as he could be on a list of entries. He is last on the "also eligible" list in a 2-year-old maiden race for Maryland foals. I understand a dog food company has bid $25 for his carcass. All of which sounds like this is the end of a beautiful friendship with Alan Clarke. Art Brown has been pepping up those race results on the WOL sports page with the distances taken from our charts. I hope he doesn't think he is fooling me. The Maryland Horsemen's Protective Association is going to make a bid for $1500 minimum purses on the major tracks and $800 on the half-milers. We shall see what we shall see. I haven't heard any "More" suspension on Jockey Don Meade or didn't he foul Bless Me in that race with Alsab? Don't be surprised if the horsemen make a move to have a representative in the stewards' stand next year. Did you know that the home stretch at Bowie is the longest in the State—1760 feet from the turn to the wire. Donald Hay, the No. 1 mutuel manager, will be in charge of the betting at Bowie. Jimmy Sager, the sage of Park Road, says Bless Me will win the 1942 Kentucky Derby. Jockey Roscoe Goose rode Cardigan, a 2-year-old, to victory in the first race ever run at Bowie. Trainer Sidney Boniface has taken over the conditioning of the horses owned by Mr. Henry Hecht and will accompany the stable to Florida. Boniface's brother, William, is the turf writer for the Baltimore Evening Sun. Lou Tufano, owner of Market Wise, said yesterday that he will ship the handicap star to Jamaica, N. Y, and that there is a possibility of his going to Florida later in the season. Here it is again because somebody asked for it: The largest daily double pay off in Maryland was on Charles F and James Boy, $6,754.50, on November 16, 1938. I did not have it. See you on the rail—BILL.

First race—FLYING REICH appears ready to graduate from the maiden ranks in this field. Needs only the right ride. LIT UP had speed last out and is dangerous. BAYBERRY closed like the wind in that last and might take it all.

Second race—ZOSTERA likes this oval and will be ready for the best despite the 120-pound assign

N.Y.U. Tackle May Miss Game With Tulane

By the Associated Press

New York, Nov. 13.—Jack Ryan, regular right tackle of New York University's football Violets, who sprained an ankle in the game against Missouri, hurt it again today in practice and was deprived of a chance to start in the Tulane tussle Saturday.

His place in the line-up was taken by Irvin Kintisch in the long signal drill with which Coach Mal Stevens closed the workout.

Jasper Star Back

New York, Nov. 13.—Manhattan's hopes against Holy Cross were bolstered today by the return of the Jaspers' regular quarterback, John Fesko, who had been troubled by a bad wrist and an upset stomach. He rejoined the team in good health and Coach Herb Kopf said he would make no changes in his backfield this week, using Fesko, Ed Finkoski, Charles Kiesecker and Charley McNulty.

A squad of 33 players will leave for Holy Cross tomorrow morning.

Idle Rams Drill

New York, Nov. 13.—Although they have an open date Saturday, the Fordham Rams were driven through another long practice session today by Coach Jimmy Crowley in preparation for their affair with St. Mary's next week.

There was no contact work and most of the attention again was turned toward pass defense with Steve Filipowicz, Fordham's ace thrower, joining the second string to toss repeated aerials at the varsity.

Injuries at Army

West Point, N. Y., Nov. 13.—Army's injury-riddled football squad held its final heavy workout today before tackling Penn, the team that last year handed the Cadets their worst beating in the Military Academy's gridiron history.

Backs Ralph Hill and Jere Maupin, End George Seip and Ray Murphy, guard, are all nursing injuries suffered in the Notre Dame and Harvard games, but are expected to be ready for Saturday, however, with the possible exception of Maupin.

Elis Work Hard

New Haven, Conn., Nov. 13.—Yale's football forces today ended heavy work for the "Big Three" battle with Princeton here Saturday with a burst of spirit and speed.

The Elis engaged in a dummy scrimmage during which Coach Spike Nelson emphasized the Blue's aerial attack. Ed Taylor and Jack Ferguson, the sophomore tailbacks; Jigger Harrison and Tim Hoopes, wingbacks, ran through Yale's passing players in excellent style.

Elected to office with Miss Urnet are Elizabeth Cooper, instructor in physical education at Alice Deal Junior High School, who becomes vice president; Virginia Junkin, who takes over the job of secretary; and Evelyn Patterson, instructor in English at Arlington Hall, who was named treasurer.

Nebraskans Drill On Passing Attack

Lincoln, Nebr., Nov. 13 (AP).—Passing was again the major item in Nebraska's final heavy workout before Saturday's football meeting with Pittsburgh here. Maj. L. M. Jones, Cornhusker headman, forbade contact work to avoid adding to the already long injured list, but devoted some time to punting, kickoffs and field-goal attempts.

Irish Eleven Northwestern Selected Over

If Army can whip Penn, the service classic will take on added significance despite the unfortunate fact that both teams have already been beaten. Navy this year as in the past has been unable to cash in on its marvelous man power. For years Annapolis teams have been powerhouses of ground-gaining ability between the two 30 yard lines, but as they approached the goal line, they seemed to lose their drive, or kick away their scoring opportunities by using poor judgment.

Navy Sluggish

Maj. Swede Larson, present coach, has done more than any Navy mentor in recent years, to make Navy scoring minded. But not even the genial major has been able to overcome the traditional and fatal idiosyncracy of Midshipmen outfits. Navy is like a giant that doesn't know his own strength. It raises havoc in getting to its goal; but when it reaches it, instead of romping across, it lies down for a nap on the wrong side of the line.

The Duquesne-Mississippi State contest will be one of the hardest-fought games of the day. State has beaten Florida, Auburn and Alabama. Duquesne is unbeaten and hoping for a Bowl bid. At first glance it appears as though Mississippi State has been playing in a different category and that Duquesne has had easy sailing. But any team that can trim Villanova, an accomplishment credited to Duquesne, is a good ball club, for Clipper Smith's outfit has size, coaching, and spirit.

Cornell and Dartmouth renew their old rivalry, and while much of the glamour usually associated with this game is gone this year, because of previous defeats, it should be a well-played and interesting struggle. I think Cornell will defeat the Big Green, which looked rather ragged at times against Princeton.

Irish In Test

Northwestern's grapple with Notre Dame is the highlight of the Middle Western schedule. Minnesota should breeze through Iowa, and Ohio State ought to run down Illinois. The Purdue-Wisconsin game will be the most evenly contested of all Western Conference meetings, with the honors going to Wisconsin.

If Notre Dame can get by Northwestern the Irish team will be entitled to a high place in the national ranking. A victory over the Wildcats will completely erase the depressing effect of that scoreless tie with Army on a muddy day at the Yankee Stadium. And it will mean that the same skill which Frank Leahy showed at Boston College where he piloted his team to two bowl games in two years, is still with him, and that he is entitled to the claim of being the outstanding coach of the year.

I was talking to Elmer Layden the other day, and he told me he has been watching Notre Dame this year, and that Angelo Bertelli is a boy who really pitches strikes. It is Bertelli's superb passing that has made the difference between an average and a winning team at South Bend. Leahy believes in protecting the passer, to allow time for spotting and completions, and Bertelli never lets him down. I am inclined to favor Notre Dame over Northwestern on the basis of the former's excellent aerial game

Duke Favored

Duke should trim North Carolina in their game at Durham. And Duke by the way is already packing for the trip to Pasadena, although nothing official has been done about it yet. If the Blue Devils don't miss fire, it is hard to see how the Rose Bowl can pass them up, even though the schedule of the Southerners has not been too impressive.

Texas, which ran into trouble with Baylor last week when it took the field minus some of its regulars, may run into more trouble with Texas Christian tomorrow. And Texas A. & M. will not have clear sailing with Rice, although the Aggies should win this one, after a bit of trouble. Tulsa plays Baylor, and with the encouragement the latter received in holding high stepping Texas, Tulsa will have to play over its head to avoid a defeat.

Stanford sticks its neck out at Palo Alto tomorrow, where erratic but dangerous Washington State starts swinging at the Indians' chin. Clark Shaughnessy's boys have been fairly consistent, dropping only one game so far, but another defeat would be disastrous, and Washington State has just enough on the ball to turn the trick. I think Stanford will win, but there is danger of a setback for the Palo Altoans here.

Boston Univ. over New Hampshire.
Cornell over Dartmouth.

An accelerated pace in Washington department store sales was reported last night by the Federal Reserve Bank of Richmond. Department store sales in the week ended November surged 34 per cent above the same week last year and were 8 per cent better than in the previous week, the bank's weekly survey showed.

In the four weeks ended November 8 local store sales were 19 per cent heavier than in the same 1940 period.

D. C. Holds Sixth Place

Washington building permits in the first ten months this year aggregated $41,677,325 as contrasted with $32,615,545 in the like 1940 period, Dun & Bradstreet, Inc., reported yesterday.

Continuing to hold sixth place in the Nation, Washington permit valuation was exceeded only by New York City, Los Angeles, Detroit, San Diego and Chicago.

The review noted that building permits for October displayed a slight gain over September but fell below the volume for the corresponding month of 1940. The October, 1940, figure set a record for that month since 1929.

Permits issued in October in 215 cities totaled $124,735,069, according to the survey. This was an increase of 4.8 per cent above September but was 9.1 per cent below the previous October total.

Bankers to Dine

Extra Pay Voted For Employes of Two N. Y. Banks

New York, Nov. 13 (AP).—The Chase National Bank and National City Bank, the Nation's largest commercial banks, announced today they had arranged for "supplemental compensation" for officers and employes in the United States in recognition of present economic conditions.

Eligible for the additional compensation are employes and officers receiving annual salaries of $6000 or less. The benefits will apply to the period October 1-December 31. The arrangements are subject to change from time to time. Amounts of the extra payments were not disclosed.

Several other large commercial banks in New York previously announced plans for similar extra compensation to ease the effect of increased living costs.

Studebaker Sales Halved in Month

South Bend, Ind., Nov. 13 (AP).—Studebaker corporation has reported its retail deliveries in the United States during October totaled 8641 passenger cars and trucks, making a total for the first ten months of the year of 106,517 units.

Studebaker reported factory sales in October of 8897 cars and trucks compared with 14,709 in the same month last year. For the first ten months of 1941 factory sales were 109,176 vehicles compared to 96,245 in the same period of 1940.

Metal Lath Standard To Conserve Steel

The Commerce Department predicts a "substantial conservation of steel" as a result of a new Bureau of Standards code of simplified practice in the making of metal lath.

The department said dealers would be able to reduce their stocks of metal lath about 30 per cent because there won't be so many different kinds of metal lath in use.

Congress May Seek Broader Powers for SPAB

A bipartisan appeal to President Roosevelt for the centralization of control over priorities and defense contracts in one agency was reported yesterday to be under consideration in Congress.

The move grew out of complaints that the defense program's drain on materials was forcing many small businesses to suspend operations.

Administration lieutenants were reported to have asked opposition leaders if they were willing to join in a protest to the President that some small firms were being unnecessarily denied the materials to produce nondefense products.

While there was no attempt to agree on specific recommendations, most of those interested in the move appeared to feel that the problem might be solved if the Supply Priorities and Allocations Board were given broader powers over the distribution of materials and defense contracts.

SPAB, of which Donald Nelson is executive director, was set up by President Roosevelt as a general clearing house for the defense program, with a division headed by Floyd Odlum directed to deal with the problems of "Little Business."

However, one legislator, who asked to remain anonymous, said a personal investigation had convinced him that the board's effective authority extended to not more than 30 per cent of the defense contracts that were let.

This legislator said it was his understanding that SPAB efforts to channel contracts to smaller business firms had been overriden many times by Army and Navy officials who, clothed with legal authority to let contracts, had insisted that the orders be given to larger companies to avoid possible production delays.

Senator George (Democrat), of Georgia, said he had received many complaints that small firms had been denied necessary basic materials. He said he believed that the only solution lay in centralizing authority over the entire defense program, a course that has been urged strongly by Senators Vandenberg (Republican), of Michigan, and Taft (Republican), of Ohio.

Senator Maloney (Democrat), of Connecticut, told the Senate recently that unless some action was taken swiftly, thousands of little businesses were going to be forced to the wall. His colleague, Senator Danaher (Republican), of Connecticut, joining in this plea recalled that the Senate Finance Committee had received testimony that 160,000 firms employing up to 20 persons each were likely to be put out of business by denial of priorities.

OPM to Survey Rubber Distribution

Donald M. Nelson, priorities director, ordered rubber processors yesterday to file distribution reports within 15 days to enable officials to determine whether rubber is being equitably divided among plants throughout the country.

If the distribution ratio based on reports covering July differed materially in subsequent months, the processors must submit additional reports showing the reasons.

"In any case in which it appears that such a change in ratio was not justified or proper," Nelson's order said, "the Office of Production Management will take such action as it may deem appropriate."

The order applies only to processors operating plants in more than one community. Officials said the reports would permit closer scrutiny of rubber distribution by large processors and would enable the OPM to determine if distribution has been so uneven that severe labor displacement has resulted in any community or that the manufacture of rubber products has been unnecessarily curtailed.

Oil Burners Returned to Priority Rating

The OPM Priorities Division announced yesterday that oil burners for defense housing construction on the Eastern Seaboard had been restored to the list of building materials on which priority assistance may be obtained.

Such burners originally were dropped from the list because of the threat of a petroleum shortage in the Atlantic States area.

At the same time, the division disclosed it was assigning higher preference ratings than formerly to defense houses built for rent. The step was found desirable, an OPM announcement said, because rental of homes rather than purchase of them, was regarded as better suited to the needs of defense workers. The OPM was not specific as to the new ratings.

Wholesale Commodity Index Continues Rise

An increase of 0.1 per cent in the general level of wholesale commodity prices for the week ended November 8 was reported yesterday by the Bureau of Labor Statistics.

The bureau's index of nearly 900 prices rose to 91.7 per cent of the 1926 average.

Wholesale prices of grains and grain products were somewhat higher during the first week of November. Corn and oats were up about 5 per cent, barley more than 4 per cent, wheat 3 per cent, and rye 2 per cent.

Livestock prices were 2.7 per cent lower than the preceding week, and average prices for meats were slightly lower. Dairy products were up 0.6 per cent.

O'Mahoney Wants OPM to Detail System

Senator O'Mahoney (Democrat), of Wyoming, offered a resolution yesterday calling on the Office of Production Management for detailed information on the operation of its priorities and allocations system by which materials are channeled into defense industries.

O'Mahoney told the Senate that while the economic system of the country was being "completely revolutionized by the effect of priorities on thousands of businesses, all the Senators knew about what was going on was what they were able to learn from newspaper headlines and stories.

His resolution would require the OPM to furnish information on the general policies adopted regarding priorities, methods of allocating materials and the program being followed by the OPM to protect business from the consequent withdrawal of supplies.

Senator McNary, of Oregon, the minority leader, urged O'Mahoney to seek immediate consideration of the resolution, but Senator Connally (Democrat), of Texas, said he hoped the matter might be delayed until Monday, and O'Mahoney agreed.

New York Cotton

New York, Nov. 13 (AP).—The cotton futures market today overcame some early losses to close with most positions 15 to 30 cents a bale net higher. October ended 40 cents a bale down.

Chicago Grain

Chicago, Nov. 13 (AP).—Wheat, rye and oats prices struck a recovery trail today after yesterday's sharp retreat, but corn and soy beans, weakened by more favorable weather for long-delayed harvesting, continued to decline.

Losses of as much as 4 cents in beans and a full cent in corn disturbed the entire market at times, and wheat declined as much as ¾ cent, while oats and rye were fractionally lower at one stage. However, reports of improved flour business and better demand from professional traders resulted in rallies in all pits.

Bank Excess Reserves Soar $113,000,000

By the Associated Press

The Federal Reserve Board yesterday estimated that lendable excess reserves of member banks increased 113 million dollars to a total of $3,540,000,000 in the week ended November 12.

The principal cause of the rise was Treasury spending.

The board's statement said:

"During the week ended November 12 member bank reserve balances increased 113 million dollars. Additions to member bank reserves arose from decreases of 126 million dollars in Treasury deposits with Federal Reserve Banks and 32 million dollars in November deposits and other Federal reserve accounts, and increases of 16 million dollars in Reserve Bank credit and 5 million dollars in gold stock, offset in part by increases of 51 million dollars in money in circulation and 18 million dollars in Treasury cash. Excess reserves of member banks on November 12 were estimated to be approximately $3,540,000,000, an increase of 130 million dollars for the week.

Changes in member bank reserve balances and related items during the week and the year ended November 12, 1941, were reported as follows:

Refined Copper Supply Slumps To 12-Year Low

By the Associated Press

The Commerce Department said yesterday "the end of September found producers' stocks of refined copper at the lowest position on record since 1929."

The department said producers' stocks on hand totaled 63,670 tons at the end of September compared with 183,313 tons on the similar date last year.

While supplies were going down, the department added, "actual consumption advanced to a new high, reflecting the intense industrial activity in filling defense contracts."

The department noted, however, that both domestic production and imports of copper were on the upgrade. Recently the Metals Reserve Co., a subsidiary of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, bought 68,000 more tons of Chilean copper, the report said.

Stocks Resist Further Drop, Close Uneven

By the Associated Press

New York, Nov. 13.—The stock market got its back against the wall today and stemmed the price assault that had knocked down many leaders to the lowest levels of 1941.

Steels led an early rally in fairly fast dealings and, while numerous issues refused to participate, gains of fractions to 2 points or so were distributed in the forenoon. The pace slowed and trends receded in most cases after mid-day. Final quotations were no worse than moderately mixed.

The Associated Press average of 60 stocks was unchanged at 39.2 after having suffered its sharpest relapse since October 16 in the previous session. Transfers totaled 830,860 shares compared with 1,017,630 the da before.

Tax Selling Levels Off

There was no particular change in the news picture. Establishment of income tax losses leveled off to some extent but still was regarded as a buying handicap. Principal retardent remained in the threatening labor situation although hope revived that Washington would be able to avert railway and coal mine strikes. Pessimism again was evident anent the tension between the United States and Japan.

The bidding that appeared, brokers said, apparently was based on the idea the lengthy downswing called for at least a temporary "correction."

Among the few constructive business signs were the official figures indicating last week's freight loadings were off from the previous week less than seasonally and 90,000 cars or more ahead of the corresponding week's in 1940 and 1939.

U. S. Gypsum Strong

Stronger share performers included American Can and U. S. Gypsum which were up 2 and 2¼ points respectively. Holding lesser gains were U. S. Steel, Bethlehem, General Motors, U. S. Rubber, Montgomery Ward, Consolidated Aircraft, Anaconda, Westinghouse, Union Carbide, Allied Chemical, General Foods, Texas Co., Chesapeake & Ohio and Great Northern.

New year's lows were posted for N. Y. Central, American Tobacco "B," American Telephone, Commonwealth Edison, Sears Roebuck, General Electric and Caterpillar Tractor. Losses were recorded for Goodyear, Chrysler, Standard Oil (N. J.) ex-dividend, International Nickel, American Smelting and International Harvester.

Bonds were uneven, as were commodities. Cotton recovered at the last for net advances of 30 to 40 cents a bale. At Chicago wheat was up ¼ to ⅞ of a cent a bushel, corn unchanged to off ½ and hogs irregular.

In the Curb modest improvement was shown for Bell Aircraft, Brewster Aero, Electric Bond & Share, Gulf Oil and Humble Oil. Volume here was around 195,000 shares versus 238,000 yesterday.

Republic Steel Offer Rejected

Stating that earnings of the company had steadily increased in every quarter of this year and estimating that net for the full year would reach $1,300,000 after taxes, the board said:

Henderson Denies U. S. Plans Advertising Curbs

By the Associated Press

Hot Springs, Va., Nov. 13.—Price Administrator Leon Henderson praised the Nation's advertisers today and assured them that, so far as he was concerned, they need not fear that their business would be curbed as a means of controling inflation or restricting production.

"So far as advertising is concerned . . . it must survive as a thriving dynamic force," Henderson declared in an address prepared for a meeting here of the American Association of Advertising Agencies.

"I would emphasize my considered opinion that . . . advertising is threatened with no special or extraordinary peril which is not shared by other economic and social organisms in this country," he said.

"Some of your trade publications and other sources have ascribed to me a point of view about advertising. The clear inference has been that I am a charter member of some little cell of conspirators whose main purpose in life is to alter, reform or perhaps destroy advertising as we know it. . . .

Should Be Expanded

"However . . . if I have a point of view about advertising it is that under the sort of expanding economy I would like to see there should be more of it. That is, more of the right kind. . . .

"You don't expect me to tell you that advertising is not going to suffer in this defense program. I would'nt try to kid professionals. But I can tell you with all conviction that I regard it as part of my job to do what I can to maintain the maximum of civilian activity in our economy consistent with the basic requirements of defense.

"And I ask you to believe me when I say that since the question has been raised . . . I consider that advertising is included in the category of important civilian activity."

Attacks Dramatized

Meanwhile, more than 600 advertising men and representatives of national advertisers, here for a joint two-day session, saw a dramatization today of attacks on advertising which ascribed the most powerful criticism of advertising to Governmental sources.

The Columbia Broadcasting System presented a stage adaptation of material collected by a joint committee of the Association of National Advertisers and the American Association of Advertising Agencies.

The presentation dealt with "the facts about the influences tending to undermine national brands and the advertising thereof," and was substituted, "a presentation of the menace to advertising and to national brands—a menace based on unsound economics, ignorance and misstatements."

Begin to Fight Back

A. O. Buckingham, of Cluett, Peabody & Co., Inc., representing the committee, said sniping at advertising had been a popular sport for many years, when only one side of the case was presented to the public, but that advertising leaders had begun to fight back by cleaning house and defending the true state of the advertising industry.

He said the attacks came from those using criticism of advertising as part of an effort to do away with the American system of free enterprise, and from those ignorant of the true functions and effects of advertising. The second group is by far the more numerous and important, he said.

Buckingham referred to the price control bill now before Congress, which he said contained a section authorizing broad Government control over advertising, although a corrective amendment had been offered on that point.

Bob Trout, who arrived in London this week to become Columbia's acting European news chief, spent 19 days in Lisbon waiting for a plane to take him on to the British capital. It was 19 days of nervous anticipation he hadn't counted on.

Trout, who built one of radio's larger reputations as a special events broadcaster and news analyst—he got his start at WJSV, as we keep telling you—had never held an executive post. As he boarded the transatlantic plane, the 32-year-old CBS star expressed relief that he was at last about to take the plunge he had known was in prospect for months.

Then came Lisbon—and 19 days of nothing to do.

Trout went to London with no preconceived ideas of how he would run Columbia's European staff—except that he wanted to carry on as nearly as possible in Edward R. Murrow's footsteps. Murrow, who leaves soon for an extended vacation in the United States, has tarried in London to "break in" Trout. Murrow made his final news broadcast from London Sunday night, November 9.

Trout, besides his executive duties, assumes Murrow's spotlighted responsibility as No. 1 London correspondent for the network. He shares with Murrow the distinction of being one of the few major radio correspondents who are exclusively a product of radio—neither of them ever having worked for a newspaper.
